'REBELS' MEET TODAY; MAY HALT RAIL STRIKE

G. O. P. BATTLE AT WHITE HEAT AS VOTE NEARS

Wood Concedes State Victory to Lowden.

Thousands of party workers, paid and volunteers, swarmed over the city last night in the quest for Republican votes at Tuesday's primary, at which one of the bitterest political struggles in the history of the state will be decided. Mass meetings were held in the loop and in every ward of the city, bands played to advertise the gatherings, and the mails were choked with the final appeals sent out by various candidates.

As a net result all is now set for the battle of ballots. There will be more meetings and more vote hunting between now and Tuesday, but it is generally recognized that the primary campaign is closed and about all that remains to be done is to cast and count the votes.

What the Election Means.

The election day program is:

Voters of both parties will by ballot indicate their preferences for president. Lowden and Wood are on the Republican ballot. Johnson or any other aspirant may be voted for by the process of writing in the name.

Two Illinois delegates to each national convention will be chosen by voters in each congressional district. The delegates elected by the Republicans—with the delegates at large to be chosen later—will select a successor to Mayor Thompson for national committeeman.

The voters will choose ward committeemen. This committee is now endowed with the duty of nominating candidates for judges of the Circuit and Superior courts, and will also make up the "organization" slate for next fall's county and state primaries.

The primaries will also decide control of the Republican state convention which meets at Springfield May 10 and which will elect the delegates-at-large to the national convention.

Chicago voters will decide whether bond issues amounting to $34,500,000 shall be authorized.

Big Vote Expected.

Interest in the issues involved is expected to bring out one of the largest votes ever cast at a Republican primary. The official prediction of James F. Sullivan, chief clerk of the election board, is for a Republican primary vote of 300,000.

The Democratic vote will be nominal, there being no interest in the primary for the Democrats. They "harmonized" early last fall and by agreement Roger C. Sullivan retains control of the county and state organizations and of the delegation to the San Francisco convention. Nothing that may occur at the polls can change this situation.

For the Republicans there are two fights, distinct and separate from each other.

The first is the battle between Gov. Lowden and Gen. Leonard Wood for the preferential vote in Illinois.

The second is the fight between the factions headed by Mayor Thompson, former Gov. Charles S. Deneen and Attorney General Edward J. Brundage for control of the Republican county committee, which will probably carry with it the control of the Republican state convention.

Conceded to Lowden.

The first struggle is in a measure a purely sentimental one. It is conceded that a majority of the fifty delegates who will be elected Tuesday will be pledged to Gov. Lowden, Gen. Wood having no delegate in the field and only one candidate for delegate in the state being pledged to the candidacy of Senator Johnson.

The battle therefore narrows down as to whether a majority of the voters will express a preference for Lowden or for Wood. This expression will not actually bind the delegates and is of no legal effect, but it would doubtless sway many of the delegates, especially after the first few ballots.

The Wood managers are really fighting only to make a "good showing" for the general. Gen. Wood himself issued a statement yesterday admitting that Lowden would carry the state.

Women Have Preferential Vote.

The attitude of the women of the state will be reflected by the preferential vote. At first denied a right to participate at all in the primary, they were finally conceded a preferential vote in Cook county. Following this Gov. Lowden obtained a decision from Attorney General Brundage

STATE OF SONORA SECEDES FROM MEXICAN NATION

'Invasion' by Carranza Forces Is Cause.

Nogales, Sonora, April 10.—The state of Sonora withdrew from the republic of Mexico today. The state congress at Hermosillo, in a secret session which lasted all last night, voted to resist with armed forces any attempt of the Carranza government of Mexico to send troops into the state.

The secession of Sonora was brought about by President Carranza ordering federal troops sent into the state. When the plan became known state authorities said the Carranza troops would be met with armed forces and civil war would result.

Demands Reason for Invasion.

President Carranza was called upon by Gov. Adolfo de la Huerta to explain the reason for the contemplated invasion of Sonora. Carranza replied that if troops were ordered into Sonora it was for the general welfare of the country. The reply did not satisfy Gov. de la Huerta and other state leaders. The state executive, in announcing the break with the Carranza government, said:

"In view of the replies of President Carranza to the governor and congress of the state of Sonora, it was decided to suspend relations with the central government until such time as the causes leading to the determination had ceased to exist."

Sonora political leaders declared President Carranza planned to set up a military dictatorship in Sonora and take over the state government. He was openly accused of plotting the maneuver to harm the presidential candidacy of Gen. Alvaro Obregon, whose home is here.

Carranza Stands Firm.

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.] [Copyright: 1920.]

City of Mexico, April 10.—Answering telegrams from Gov. de la Huerta and Gen. Plank of Sonora, protesting against the movements of federal troops in the state of Sonora and threatening an uprising unless their principal wishes are respected, President Carranza has stated that he will accept full responsibility as chief executive of the nation for his duty to keep and maintain the federal union.

The president says "he cannot discuss with the government of any one state the convenience or inconvenience of military measures dictated within my constitutional faculties, but I wish to call your attention to the fact the attitude of any state which, in whatever form or under whatever pretext, resents as a violation of its sovereignty military movements made by the federal government, constitutes an immediate declaration of insurrection and breaking of the pact of states with the federal government."

U. S. Officer Kidnaped, Escapes.

Washington, D. C., April 10.—Private advices from Mexico City today said Maj. Edgar W. Burr, military attaché of the American embassy, was kidnaped by the rebels who attacked the train at Tres Marias, almost within sight of Mexico City, on March 28, and was being carried away to be held for ransom, when he escaped by a ruse and made his way back to the railroad station. He returned safely to Mexico City with Mrs. Burr, Dr. Florence Haile, and a Mr. Hurd, also Americans, who were passengers on the train.

Old H. C. Middleman Beats 'Overall Club' To It

Birmingham, Ala., April 10.—While Birmingham's "Overall club," organized to combat the high cost of clothing, was working overtime today listing new members, dealers advanced the price of overall trousers from $2 to $6 a pair.

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 10.—With a charter membership of 2,000 Chattanooga men today organized an "overall club" in an effort to get cheaper clothing. County and city officials joined.

GIVE ME HOME, SHONTS' PLEA TO DAUGHTERS

Letter Reveals Old Man's Loneliness.

New York, April 10.—[Special.]—"My children, I am growing old; come back from Europe and make a home for me," Theodore P. Shonts wrote in 1911 to his daughters, who were living in Paris. The letter forms part of the defense set forth in the answer of Mrs. Amanda C. Thomas to the $1,000,000 alienation suit filed against her by Mrs. Milla D. Shonts, the widow.

"I have sacrificed companionship, health, rest, and everything which appeals to me in order to fill your girlhood years with every pleasure and your later years with sweetest memories of your youth," he wrote. "Now my advancing years require a change. While I do not want to commercialize love, I must require a quid pro quo in deeds as well as words."

The defense of Mrs. Thomas also declares that Mr. Shonts suffered loneliness and neglect because of his wife's desire to move in titled society in Europe, and that he was forced to work incessantly to supply the money required by his wife's social ambitions.

"Make a Home for Me."

Mr. Shonts' letter to his daughter, written May 16, 1911, reads:

"My Dear Children:

"I still call you children, but as a matter of fact you are grown-ups and must discharge the duties of grown-ups. You keep asking me what you shall do. I cannot tell you. From June until December of last year I kept writing you how ill I have been—that I was growing older, and that I greatly needed care and attention. I told you that I could afford to keep up only one home, and said if your hearts prompted you to do it, how happy I would be to have you come over here and make us a real home. I also said that if your hearts were not in it—if your friends and interests and happiness were in Europe to be honest and frank enough to say so, and I would then know how to plan for myself here, but that I would continue to send you all I could spare—considering my heavy indebtedness here—for you to live on there.

"What was your answer to all my appeals? You stayed away and your mother came over here. Her first overt act was to demand possession of her property, a part of which she inherited, but most of which I gave her. I immediately wrote you what she had done. What was your answer? In place of resenting it and denouncing her actions as an outrage, and after all the sacrifices I have made to protect and build up the property, you each wrote a polite note saying you would urge her to be prudent.

Wife "Mentally Unbalanced."

"Then your mother began a systematic campaign of villification and slander against me—a campaign of lies too low and vile for decent people to even repeat. I wrote that her own doctor said that she was mentally unbalanced, which was the kindest interpretation which possibly could be put on her conduct. What then happened? A carefully prepared note of admonition and advice was received from Marguerite, which, in view of the facts I had gone to so much pains to acquaint you with read like colossal impudence. Realizing, however, that for many years you have lived almost exclusively with your mother, and always under the direct influence of her perverted ideas of life, and have breathed the atmosphere of deceit and hypocrisy she everywhere created, I have been patient and considerate of you.

"Even when you hurt me most, I am always hoping that you would, in time, awaken to the true situation and learn to love and practice truthfulness and sincerity in all things and with all people, and appreciate those qualties in others above everything else in the world. This still is my hope, and, should it ever die, I then will be ready to give up the struggle, and, heart broken, die with it.

Mother's "Blackmailing Methods."

"So far as your mother is concerned, her blackmailing methods of trying to extort money from me has finished her for me. There is a point beyond which one's self-respect will not let one travel in the way of forgiveness, even if repentance is shown (which has not happened here), and that point with her has long since been passed.

"So far as you two girls are concerned, I still love you tenderly and devotedly. It is my desire, fully as much as ever, to do for you as much as my circumstances will warrant. But

2 MEN FIGHT IN FLAT LOBBY, RUN AWAY, SHOOTING

Two men scuffling, apparently over a 9 year old boy, crashed through the glass entrance of the apartment building at 5216-18 Kenmore avenue last night. They ran south into Foster, exchanging shots. There they disappeared. The boy ran ahead of them.

Policeman Joseph Cller, who heard the shots and visited the building, obtained the foregoing from tenants who had heard the door crash in. None knew the names of any of the parties involved, they said. The police believe it was either an attempted holdup or a fight for possession of the boy.

The tenants are Mrs. L. D. Woodruff, Robert H. Clark, Adeline Caughlin, F. Gould Dewey, George W. Bauer, Nemi Albert Baldoni, and Nash Tash Toonelli.

WALTER STEVENS GETS CELL TERM

Chicago Gunman Found Guilty in Aurora.

Walter Stevens of Chicago was found guilty of assault with intent to commit murder and was sentenced to from one to fourteen years in the penitentiary yesterday by a jury in the Kane county Circuit court. Judge Mazzini Slusser presided.

WALTER STEVENS.

The complainant was Lester Wedermaier, former Aurora policeman, who was wounded on the night of Oct. 28, when Alfred Olin, another policeman, was killed. They were attempting to take a man identified as Stevens and a companion to jail as suspicious characters.

One of Stevens' witnesses was James M. Quinlan, who said he was chief clerk of the Criminal court of Cook county. He testified he accompanied Stevens to Aurora shortly after the shooting. Special Prosecutinig Attorney Harvey D. Gunsul in his closing argument to the jury said:

"I often wondered why the murderers and crooks in Cook county got away with it. Now that I have heard Quinlan's testimony I think I see why it is."

Stevens' attorney announced he would appeal the case.

DANISH FARMERS THREATEN STRIKE 'TO TEACH LABOR'

COPENHAGEN, April 10.—A majority of the Danish farmers, exasperated over the continuous labor troubles which prevent transport of farming produce to England and the United States, are contemplating "direct action," cutting off Copenhagen and other Danish towns from agricultural produce, meat, and grains until the strikes are over.

The bakers, masons, seamen, and longshoremen are on strike.

The longshoremen are willing to negotiate, but are informed that this is impossible until work is resumed.

RUMORS INSIST PRESIDENT HAS HAD A RELAPSE

Washington, D. C., April 10.—[Special.]—Persistent reports the last ten days that President Wilson has had a serious setback in his illness continue to be circulated in spite of the statement Thursday by Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson that the president was in better condition now than for six months.

This report is due mainly, if not entirely, to the fact that the president's motor rides have been suspended for two weeks. Admiral Grayson's explanation was that there had been some bad weather and the president was engaged on work that kept him busy.

It is known that Mr. Wilson has been active the last few days in answering communications, some of them on important subjects, and that he is in communication with members of his cabinet by correspondence.

Fortune Gone, Allis Family Nearly Evicted for Rent

Milwaukee, Wis., April 10.—[Special.]—Only a kind hearted judge saved Mrs. Gilbert Allis and her two children from being evicted today. Mrs. Allis is the wife of a son of the late E. P. Allis, who founded the Allis-Chalmers company. Recently Gilbert Allis filed a petition in bankruptcy, giving his liabilities as $11,000. Mrs. Allis was an actress whom Gilbert Allis met at Monte Carlo. The judge refused the landlord's plea, saying wealthy relatives should assist the family. She is a month and a half behind in the rent and the two children are sick.

Boy, Page Lloyd George, Scotch Want Home Rule

GLASGOW, April 10.—At a meeting today of the Scottish Home Rule association a resolution was adopted asking the government to give Scotland control of purely Scottish affairs. 20,000 Out at Gotham; New Union

New York, April 10.—New York tonight faced the menace of a food and fuel famine and a complete paralysis of passenger traffic by the spread of the strike of railroad workers, coupled with a strike of harbor employés.

The walkout extended to switchmen and yardmen of the New York Central and firemen of the Lackawanna railroad. Regular passenger service on these lines and the Erie broke down tonight. Schedules on other roads were disrupted and many trains canceled.

A few carloads of food were received today, but the opinion of railroad officials based on the night's developments were that the situation was "extremely grave," and that the railways would not be in a position to combat the strike for forty-eight hours.

20,000 Quit Posts.

Approximately 20,000 men have left their posts in the New York district. Strike leaders issued an announcement that "all freight and passenger service would be paralyzed tomorrow."

Only 5 per cent of the normal freight transportation facilities were functioning. It was estimated half a million persons were kept idle today by the strike.

The only freight coming into New York City consists of milk and some other perishables. Heavy meat shipments came in today and the milk supply was normal. Wholesalers have begun marking up food prices.

Mails are, with milk, the one exception to the embargoes now in operation. These are running unusually heavy, owing to the doubtful status of express matter.

Commuters Have Bad Day.

Commuters from New Jersey stormed the Hudson terminals when the tube workers quit today, and there was great confusion on the few ferries operating.

The railroad stations tonight were crowded by those who waited for trains that had been canceled. Many slept in the waiting rooms.

H. J. Zimmerman, general chairman of the Order of Railway Conductors, and other union labor leaders, were here tonight to give aid to railroad managers. J. J. Mantell, chairman of the subcommittee of the general managers' association, reported tonight that the Pennsylvania was "having trouble with its firemen." The Baltimore and Ohio was the only road that moved freight today, Mr. Mantell said.

Strikers Form New Body.

After a massmeeting of striking railroad workers in Jersey City late today a statement was issued by a strikers' press committee embodying demands the committee said would be presented to railroad officials.

The statement said in part:

"We have decided to be known hereafter as the United Railroad Workers of America. Our officers have been elected and they have drawn up demands which will be presented to the proper officials for consideration.

Allegiance and Defiance at Once.

"We do not want our names to be misunderstood as representing the national organization. We still belong to our present railroad body, but if the general organization does not uphold us in this strike, we shall continue our activities under our adopted name.

"We want it emphasized that the men who have attended our meetings are affiliated with one or more of the four big organizations.

"All officers and members are satisfied with the progress we have made so far, and we have caused no trouble outside of leaving our posts, and we intend to conduct ourselves in the same manner in the future."

Schwab Uses Taxi Fleet; Speeds His Choir Miles

New York, April 10.—[Special.]—Charles M. Schwab emulated Gen. Gallieni, savior of Paris, when he mobilized a combined fleet of taxicabs, Fords, and other seagoing hacks to rush 350 members of the Bethlehem choir from Bethlehem, Pa., to the Seventy-first Regiment armory here this afternoon. Mr. Schwab organized his wartime transport service when he found that the railroad strike made it impossible for the choristers to reach New York in time for their scheduled appearance. The singers reached the armory only ten minutes late.

3 Babies, Playing in Attic, Get in Trunk; 2 Found Dead

Durham, N. C., April 10.—[Special.]—Albert and Arselle Dawson, 4 and 5, respectively, and Betty Hayes, 11, a cousin, entered a large trunk in their attic in play today. Several hours later they were missed. When the trunk was broken open the first two were found dead and the older child was unconscious, but was revived.

GRUNAU CALLS PARLEY AFTER SEEING CLYNE

Seeks Assurance of New Wage Scale.

A closed conference of the officials and board of trustees of the Chicago Yardmen's association, the "outlaw" organization of switchmen, will be held in Williams' hall, California avenue and Madison street, at noon today. President John Grunau announced last night.

This meeting, it is stated, will consider ways and means of ending the walkout. The move is looked on as a possibly decisive step toward peace.

The decision to call the meeting followed a conference between President Grunau and District Attorney Charles F. Clyne, representing the attorney general, yesterday afternoon.

Loss and Suffering Impend.

In the course of the discussion at this conference, it is said, it was brought out that a further continuation of the strike would entail great loss to workers in other industries and suffering to a population deprived of its customary supplies. Little inconvenience to the general public has been caused by the first week's strike; the trouble would grow rapidly from now on.

At the same time it was pointed out that the new switchmen's organization had achieved one objective, in that speedy relief for railway workers in the consideration of wage scales is now certain. The public has awakened to the government's dejay in forming the labor wage board.

U. S. Not Powerless.

However, it is said Mr. Clyne also intimated that under the law the government could not deal with the "rebel" organization. He said "the United States government is not powerless to act in a situation which affects supplies."

There is reason for hope that as a result of the meeting a movement toward peace may come. Should the strikers have assurance that the wage question would be taken up and its decisions—as the brotherhoods demand—be retroactive, the end might be in sight, even though there was no recognition of the new union officially.

Spreads to Other Crafts.

While these events were brewing, however, the strike fever apparently was slowly spreading to other railroad crafts—in spite of symptoms here and there of a breakdown.

Reports from St. Louis asserted that several hundred terminal engineers and firemen employed on twenty-seven roads had joined the ranks of the 5,000 striking switchmen and that all inbound and outbound passenger trains were delayed.

Firemen of the Lackawanna railway at Hoboken walked out at 11:45 p. m., halting all trains, passenger (except mail trains) and freight, on that system.

C. & N. W. Engineers Threaten.

A dozen engineers and firemen of the Denver and Rio Grande railroad at Salt Lake, Utah, also quit work last night, seriously impairing transcontinental traffic on that line.

In addition, firemen and engineers on the Galena and Wisconsin divisions of the Chicago and Northwestern were said to be preparing for a general walkout.

The general situation in Chicago yesterday remained at a deadlock. Throughout the nation at large, however, further walkouts brought a conservative estimate of the number of idle men to 40,000.

Other Developments.

Other developments of the day were, briefly:

The 11th regiment, I. N. G., was ordered into instant readiness to take control at any spot in the Chicago area when disorder should break out. None has as yet developed.

Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer ordered an immediate nation-wide investigation of the strike and announced that drastic action would be taken if food supplies suffered real interference.

The department of agriculture issued a statement that the larger cities of the country had at least thirty days' food supply in reserve.

Two railroads, the New York Central lines and the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, announced a lifting of the freight embargo at Chicago and predicted a return to normal conditions Monday morning.

Plans for the U. S. senate investigation of the strike were completed, the inquiry beginning on Tuesday in Chicago. All leaders of the brotherhoods, railroads and outlaw unions will be quizzed.

The national industrial crisis tightened appreciably as numerous large plants were forced to shut down. Conservatives gave the total number of workers in all lines now idle at 150,000.

Officials of the United Enginemen's association announced that copies of a new wage schedule had been sent to the general manager of each road, and that if refused a strike vote would be the alternative.

Railway Managers' association refused to meet a delegation from the striking switchmen's union.

Strikes Called Sporadic.

Perhaps the most peculiar development of the day was the rapid spread of the sporadic walkouts throughout the nation.

"Every local union is apparently deciding its own strike issue," declared one railway official. "There doesn't seem to be any central impetus."

President Grunau of the striking switchmen declared the national crisis was due entirely to the existing dissatisfaction of the employés to the present wage schedules and the alleged inactivity of their old union officials.

"We stand right now, of course, just where we did the first day the men quit work," Mr. Grunau said. "This is not a strike—the men have quit. They had no instructions from us to quit—it was spontaneous. When they get ready to go back to work I presume they will do so on the same basis."

Brotherhoods Optimistic.

Rail officials and brotherhood chiefs viewed the Chicago situation with satisfaction yesterday. It was the universal belief in railroad circles that had it not been for the national situation the local walkout now would have been ended.

The announcement by the New York Central and the St. Paul that all freight embargoes on their lines had been lifted, and that normal freight traffic would be resumed on Monday, strengthened the optimism felt in official circles.

This decision was announced after a conference between A. E. Lloyd, superintendent of the New York Central lines; W. W. Kirchy, general chairman of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and W. Bannister, general chairman of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

"It may be that these lines will be able to operate," President Grunau of the Yardmen's association, said, when told of the announcement. "If they do, however, it will not be through efforts of any member of our organization. We have had no desertions from our ranks—they are still solid.

"We are not picketing the yards—if the railroads can get men to work for them at the price they are paying, they will receive no interference from us."

Food Supplies Safe.

The question of food supplies was cleared last night following the completion of the national survey by the department of agriculture, when it was announced that thirty days' supply was available in most centers of population.

Reports to the department from Chicago showed that the supply of various commodities had been reduced about 50 per cent with the possible exception of potatoes. Reasons given for this reduction included the fact that nearly all of the railroads were refusing shipments here.

Arrivals of vegetables in Chicago during the last five days totaled 95,400 bushels of white potatoes, 660 bushels of sweet potatoes, 1,800 bushels of onions, 262 tons of cabbages, and 15,400 barrels of apples, the report said.

Chicago's average per week during the last year was 140,280 bushels of potatoes, 16,200 bushels of onions, 441 tons of cabbages, and 17,336 barrels of apples.

Heavy Cold Storage Supplies.

Cold storage supplies on hand here total 2,907,792 pounds. Yesterday morning 60,076 cases of fresh eggs and 30,506 cases of storage eggs were being held by wholesalers.

Receipts of live stock in middle western cities April 9 included 14,800 cattle, 2,840 calves, 46,900 hogs, and 8,160 sheep.

Receipts of mail in Chicago have increased more than 60 per cent, John M. Hubbard, first assistant postmaster, said yesterday. Much of this, he declared, came under parcel post shipments, where many local manufacturers were trusting to the mails rather than to uncertain freight and express to get their products to the consumers.

About 1,400 tons of mail is being handled daily with the aid of trucks, he declared.

Statement of Rail Managers.

The General Managers' association, composed of the heads of all Chicago railroads, in their daily statement, reported an influx into Chicago of switchmen and other workers from out of town points:

"The strike situation in Chicago is not much changed," the statement reads, "although more of the striking railway employés in this district have returned to work during the last twenty-four hours than in any similar period since the strike began. Among the roads on which there has been an improvement in conditions owing to the return of strikers to their posts and owing to members of the labor brotherhoods coming in from outside posts are the Chicago and Northwestern, New York Central, Illinois Central, Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, Erie, Santa Fé, and Pennsylvania lines.

"As was anticipated yesterday, there was an increase in the amount of coal and live stock moved into Chicago, and also an increase in the amount of other freight handled, both in and outbound. Passenger service in and out of Chicago continues to be maintained as usual."

PALMER ORDERS INQUIRY.

Washington, D. C., April 10.—Orders went out today to United States district attorneys to investigate the "unauthorized" railroad strikes in their districts to determine whether there has been any "joint action" designed to interfere with the distribution of necessaries of life, or whether such interference was contemplated.

Attorney General Palmer, who is at Savannah, Ga., has instructed Assistant Attorney General Ames to act on his own judgment should the situation be found to warrant it. Mr. Ames steadfastly refused to comment on developments in the strike situation.

Other officials of the department pointed out that two courses of procedure were open if the government decided to take a hand in settling the strike. The government, they said, could seek criminal indictments under the Lever act because of interference with interstate food shipments, or it could employ methods similar to the injunction proceedings of the bituminous coal strike.

"REBEL" STRIKE IS FIGHT TO RULE RAIL UNIONS

Play on Unrest to Oust the Old Leaders.

BY ARTUR M. EVANS.

The inside story of the railroad strike was unfolded yesterday by two high officials of the big brotherhoods which are fighting to break the "insurgent" walkout.

It forms a document of especial interest to the general public, to industry and business, to farmers and miners, all hard hit by the tieup of transportation. Also it may give some enlightenment to strikers who may have followed "rebel" leadership without inquiring what percentage of the promises were gold bricks.

The testimony is that the tieup had its origin in an effort of a small group, led by John Grunau, an opportunist, to grab control of a part of railroad labor. This in turn meant the wrecking of the old established unions, known far and wide as the "aristocracy" of organized labor in America. It was able to spread like a forest fire by virtue of the prevalent unrest in railroad labor, whose wages have not kept pace either with high cost of living or with the wage advances among the craft unions. It is typical of what has been occurring throughout organized labor since the armistice, a fight on the part of extremists to supplant the old leaders, conservative in the main, by promising to get the earth for all who follow.

"Due to Profiteering."

Where the brotherhoods are seeking wage increases through the machinery set up by the Cummins-Esch act, the "insurgent" leaders take the opposite course. But the wage increases have become secondary — Grunau himself has said the main fight is to break the old brotherhood leaderships.

Here is the genesis of the strike, as narrated by A. F. Whitney, vice president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen:

"The strike was made possible because the federal government allowed profiteers to boost prices of food, clothing, and shelter, and wages were unable to keep pace with the leaps in high cost of living. Men saw more increases in rent coming May 1; they saw foodstuffs and garments and shoes still climbing, and they were desperate. The unrest instead of abating has been growing.

Grabbed Psychological Moment.

"A bunch of men came in today from Sylvis, Ill., over on the Mississippi river—they simply weren't able to make their pay checks stretch; they wanted to do the right thing, but they were up against serious trouble in family financing. They realized it would make bad matters worse to strike, but they were much disturbed.

"Mr. Grunau and others took advantage of this, a psychological moment if ever there were one, to spring the strike, which had for motive a selfish desire to wreck the big brotherhoods and supplant them by the one big union scheme, which years ago failed on the railroads.

Grunau Serves Notice.

"It was this way: Last July the brotherhoods asked the director general for an increase in wage schedules. They called it to his attention again in October, and President Wilson made his appeal that things be held in abeyance until the cost of living might have a chance to drop. Mr. Grunau at that time started his agitation; he said the brotherhoods had outlived their usefulness.

"Grunau served notice on me Dec. 9 that if the brotherhood did not call a strike or force the issue and bring about a settlement by Jan. 1 he would institute a new organization and would try to wreck the brotherhood. He started to organize Jan. 3 on the Milwaukee and St. Paul road, of which he works.

"He went around saying the brotherhoods had not brought home the bacon and that if the boys would give him a 75 per cent organization he would have a force strong enough to starve the country or get the increases in pay.

How Strike Was Called.

"Grunau was a yard foreman or conductor on a train running into Chicago. Along about April 1 the road added two coaches to the train and supplanted Grunau with a road conductor—this, mind you, in conformity with one of the rules of the brotherhood of which he was a member. Between 8 and 10 o'clock in the morning Grunau appeared before the general manager and said if he was not reinstated by 10 o'clock a strike would be called.

"The manager said it was short time and asked until 3:30 to have the committee of trainmen pass on the case. Grunau agreed. But at 12:28 he called on the general manager and said he would give him until 12:30 to reinstate him. The men went out at 12:30—the strike had been called on a two minutes' notice on a personal grievance by Grunau.

"The very next day—April 2—the press reports came out of the trouble at Washington in the preliminary wage committee appointed by the president—the managers took the ground they would not deal with any wage matters that might mean rate increases unless the public was represented. This played right into Grunau's hands.

"The brotherhoods are pushing wage advances in the only legal way, through the instrumentalities set by the new railroad act, and we filed them with a claim making them retroactive to July 1, 1919. The precedent established during the war was for retroactive awards. All war awards affecting yardmen and trainmen were made retroactive."

The demands now pending at Washington relating to switchmen are:

	Present pay, a day.	Asked.
Yard conductors	$5.30	$7.20
Brakemen	5.00	6.90
Switch tenders	4.00	5.00

Grunau's figures are about 80 cents a day higher. When the brotherhood claims are taken before the labor board they may be altered, as they were figured on the cost of living basis.

Sees Blow to Labor.

Edward Corrigan, assistant grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, said:

"The strike grows out of an attempt to capitalize the legitimate aspirations of men to be granted living wages. False promises are the lure. The unrest and the desperation of many men who are not making a living wage are being played upon by men who have simply one aim, and that to destroy the brotherhood. If they should succeed, railroad labor would be set back twenty-five years.

"The general public has the idea railroad employés are high paid men. What are the facts? Among the locomotive engineers possibly 10 or 15 per cent are men who, on account of having served ten or fifteen years on the same road, have got the best runs, the runs their seniority entitles them to. These men earn wages fairly adequate to support an ordinary citizen's family in reasonable comfort.

"Then about 40 per cent more are in the intermediate stage—making a living by skimping. Thirty-five per cent are junior men on the lists, who are in exactly the same position as to wages as the young doctor or lawyer out of college.

Faces Rent Boost.

"This morning a yard conductor came in here. For three years he had been an official of the road he works on. He gets $5.33 a day. He is living in four rooms and his rent has been $37.50 a month.

"His landlord has notified him it will be raised to $65 May 1. His wife has been scouring the city, but can find nothing within their purse. To pay the $65 about $2.25 will be taken out of his $5.33 every day. Where does he get off? They are going to move into one room.

"Yet this man, going home from a hard day's work, sees common laborers who are getting $6 and $7 a day. It's hard to blame them for asking the question why can't we get more money? And the railroad man, mind of the land, which is unthinkable."

STATE OF SONORA DEFIES CARRANZA

The state of Sonora, it is reported, has severed relations with the Mexican federal government. The state congress has adopted a resolution that Sonora would resist any invasion by troops or infringement of its state rights.

Sonora authorities have seized the Southern Pacific de Mexico, an American owned railroad. The operatives of the road have been on strike and the Mexican federal court at Nogales announced if the men did not return to work the federal government would seize and operate the road. The Sonora government forestalled this action by seizing the road and granting the men all their demands.

STRIKE NOTES

Strikers are planning injunction proceedings to restrain brotherhood officials from paying out funds of the organization.

The Corn Products company at Argo will not open on Monday unless the strike is settled, officials declare. Several thousand employés will be thrown out of work.

Wives of strikers are organizing to form an auxiliary to the Chicago Yardmen's association.

Hundreds of motor trucks were pressed into service by Chicago firms to bring in supplies from freight cars stranded miles away.

Prices of some perishable foods in Chicago markets have climbed from 5 to 20 per cent during the last week.

Yardmasters at Chicago, Burlington and Quincy yards here denied that any strikers had returned to work.

The Chicago State Hospital for the Insane at Dunning may be forced to close unless the coal famine is relieved.

A new iron and steel workers' "outlaw" organization was formed in Gary, Ind., yesterday, and is said to be planning a strike.

United Enginemen's association will hold a massmeeting at Eagle's hall, Springfield and Madison streets, today for organization purposes.

you, is practically limited to eight hours a day.

Wage Raise Difficulties.

"Railroading is more complex than other lines. A builder can pay a new rate and charge it to the owner of the property. The craft unions can get quick adjustments. But the interstate commerce commission fixes railroad rates; the process is complex and slower than with craft unions.

"Two months ago at Washington fourteen railway labor organizations jointly met. One organization, the maintenance of way men, had voted to strike and had set a day; every possible means of pressure within reason was brought to bear to accelerate the wage increases, and at the last minute the strike was called off. Deference to the public's interest prevailed.

"The roads went back to private owners, and there is nothing else to do but advance our wage demands through the machinery set up in the Cummins-Esch bill unless we want to be in open rebellion against the law of the land, which is unthinkable."

LEE APPEALS FOR IMMEDIATE RETURN TO WORK

Is Only Hope of Securing Additional Pay.

Cleveland, O., April 10.—W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, today issued a statement regarding the nation-wide strike of railroad yardmen and switchmen in which he said:

"The situation at Chicago is constantly improving, and those in charge of the five transportation brotherhoods there report daily gains, and hope that more of the thinking members of the organizations will return to their former positions very soon.

"It is believed the members will recognize that the only hope of securing additional increase in pay, to which they are entitled, and which we are confident will be granted by the labor board recently created by federal law, just as soon as that board is appointed by President Wilson, is for them to return to work immediately.

Should Keep Agreement.

"The fifteen railroad labor organizations have entered into and signed an agreement to present their wage demands to such board according to the law, and it is unreasonable to expect that any increase will be granted except by the board and in accordance with the federal law. It is equally certain that whatever benefits are secured will come through the authorized committees of the established labor organizations.

"The claim of transportation employés for an increase in pay to further offset the high cost of living must be recognized by all thinking persons familiar with the situation. Transportation employés have only received approximately 50 per cent increase since 1914, while increase cost of living, as shown by government reports, is approximately 100 per cent.

Justice in Wage Demands.

"Surely the public does not expect transportation employés to be compelled to work for so much less a percentage of increase than granted employés in other walks of life. Railroad employés know, by constant association with workers in outside industries, that increases have been granted far larger than their own. Common labor is receiving equally as much, and in many instances more, per hour than paid to transportation employés, who must accept hazard and responsibility not required of common laborers.

Make Good Their Contracts.

"This fact, however, does not justify mob rule or warrant the destruction of bona fide labor organizations that have always loyally supported the government and made good their contract agreements with their employers. My position is, and has been, that we will continue in the interest of those we represent in a businesslike manner, and, according to the constitution and general rules of bona fide organized labor, rather than attempt settlement by illegal strikes or by joining in the 'one big union' idea, which underlies the real cause of this strike."

STRIKE ON ROADS? U. S. LAW SAYS NO, GOMPERS QUIP

Philadelphia, Pa., April 10.—While waiting today for a train for New York Samuel Gompers, presidentof the American Federation of Labor, said:

"Remember, there is no strike. Congress has prohibited strikes on the railroads, but of course there is no law to prevent individuals from quitting their jobs if they chose to do so."

"OUTLAW" STRIKE'S EFFECT ON CENTERS OF RAIL STRATEGY

With the recognized railroad unions doing all they can to end it, the "outlaw" strike of yard employés continues to affect the principal railroad points in the United States, in addition to the critical tieup in New York.

Philadelphia, Pa.—One fast passenger train cancelled; strikes of yardmen at other points in state throw 50,000 steel men out of work; parcels post stops handling perishables; partial or complete freight embargo in state.

Columbus, O.—More than 30,000 steel men idle in Youngstown district because of strikes in rail yards; water works, Youngstown short of coal; estimates of railmen idle elsewhere in state: Columbus, 2,000; Youngstown, 3,500; Akron, 100; Warren, 40; Dayton, 300; Canton, 300; Toledo, 5,000; Alliance, 250; Cleveland, 2,000, and Springfield, 65. Freight tieup general. Lake boats lack coal, may not sail.

Detroit, Mich.—With about 4,000 yardmen out, Edison company orders power saving go into effect Monday at all but food concerns; elsewhere in state about 1,500 men out; freight tieup serious.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Leaders of "insurgents" declared 1,000 men have quit.

St. Louis, Mo.—About 3,000 packing plant men at East St. Louis idle because of strike in terminal yards here; fifty-nine mines closed in tributary region; about 20,000 miners idle; freight tied up; passenger trains delayed by walkout of several hundred terminal engineers and firemen.

Kansas City, Mo.—Enough strikers returned to move freight in six yards; atotrney general of Kansas is questioning men under Kansas anti-strike law.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Six hundred and ninety rail men out; freight tied up.

San Francisco, Cal.—Switchmen and yardmen on strike in thirteen divisional and terminal plants in California and Oregon; freight almost tied up; passenger trains moving. Portland reported freight traffic almost at a standstill. Los Angeles reported 250 cars of citrus fruit standing in the yards of three lines there and 100 were on two lines at San Bernardino and Colton. Other rail centers congested.

HOWAT IN JAIL; 4,000 KANSAS MINERS STRIKE

Pittsburgh, Kas., April 10.—Four thousand miners were reported idle early today, an announcement from the headquarters of the coal operators said.

About forty mines are involved. More than 12,000 miners are employed in the district.

Members of the Kansas court of industrial relations awaited the next move on the part of Alexander M. Howat, president, and three fellow officers of district No. 14, United Mine Workers, who are in the Crawford county jail on a contempt order issued for refusal to appear before the industrial court and answer questions.

Winnipeg Switchmen Vote on Joining U. S. Rail Strike

Winnipeg, April 10.—A mass meeting of switchmen will be held here tomorrow to decide whether they will walk out in sympathy with Chicago strikers, it was announced today.

WILSON DELAYS APPOINTMENT OF RAIL WAGE BOARD

Cuummins Assails His Failure to Act.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 10.—[Special.]—President Wilson again today delayed the appointment of the railroad labor board.

Senator Cummins of Iowa, chairman of the senate interstate commerce committee, declared that the president's inaction was "inexcusable and indefensible."

"The men placed their demands with Mr. Hines," he said, "and he, because of the short period of federal control remaining, refused to grant them. The men then went to the president, who induced them to wait until the machinery could be put in operation to deal with their case. He told them that such machinery would be provided either by congress or by himself. For six weeks now the president has failed to act."

Union Officers to Testify.

The interstate commerce commission will meet Tuesday to begin the inquiry authorized by the McCormick resolution adopted yesterday. The first witnesses will be John Grunau, president of the Chicago Yardmen's association; A. A. Whitney, vice president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and officials of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad.

May Mobolize Motor Trucks.

The council of national defense declared today that should the strike of railway switchmen become effective enough to cripple railway transportation and imperil the food supply of cities it would be possible for the United States government on comparatively short notice to mobilize about 45,000 of its own motor trucks, to meet the resulting crisis, and in the event of an obstinate struggle, it would be entirely feasible to reinforce them with 700,000 privately owned trucks and eventually with about 7,000,000 passenger automobiles.

Of the government trucks 1,800 could be equipped and manned by the motor transport corps of the war department for the relief of New York City, within a few days.

Altogether, it was stated, the motor transport corps has about 20,000 trucks which could be placed in commission.

GENERAL STRIKE IS LEGAL, SAYS FEDERAL JUDGE

Boston, Mass., April 10.—Federal Judge George W. Anderson today, during habeas corpus proceedings on behalf of twelve "alien radicals" ordered deported, said:

"So far as I know, there is not a scintilla of evidence of a law by congress condemning a general strike as a political weapon."

"The government's contention in this case," he added, "is that the advocacy of a general strike is advocacy of the overthrow of the government by force.

"If congress passed a law excluding aliens who favor a general strike, why should it, in the Clayton act, make provision for a general strike?

"I hope some court will settle these issues, consistent with the constitution, and I hope, also, consistent with the principles of human liberty on which this government is supposed to be founded."

An obvious error in type setting appears today in our advertisement of Oriental Rugs—part 7, page 5. It reads,

"Dozar Rugs, extra fine qualities, average about 4x6½ feet, special for tomorrow at $1.15."

The correct price is, of course, $115.00.

BRITISH ENVOY TO ATTEND ALLIED COUNCIL MONDAY

Breach Between Nations Is Believed at End.

BY HENRY WALES.
[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, April 10.—That the breach between the French and British viewpoints as to the methods of enforcing the treaty of Versailles has narrowed, was evidenced today when the British embassy officially announced that Lord Derby, the ambassador, would attend Monday's meeting of the ambassador's council.

Lloyd George's threat that Great Britain would withdraw from the supreme council unless the divergent attitudes towards the occupation of the Rhineland cities were reconciled, will not be executed, according to the interpretation this statement carries.

Lord Derby's attendance means that the Franco-British conversations and the absence of any untoward events in the occupied areas have tended to modify the British premier's original decision.

Realize Gravity of Crisis.

The extreme delicacy of the interentente situation is revealed by London's ultimatum that Great Britain would desert France unless the French attitude were revised. That the application of this threat has been averted shows a readjustment of views that implies a restoration of harmony, for the present, at least.

The executive council of the league of nations refused today to consider the German appeal for intervention by the league between Paris and Berlin.

The note, which was received yesterday by Secretary General Sir Eric Drummond, was shelved when Leon Bourgeois, chairman of the executive council, construed the covenant ruling as holding that such communications should be sent to the home capitals of the nation's members of the league and not to the council.

PRESS TAUNTS FRANCE

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.
[By Special Cable.]

FRANKFORT, April 10.—What is construed as an effort to arouse French military authorities to vigorous action, is seen in the editorial attitude of the Frankfurter Zeitung, which despite the drastic censorship, openly protests against the occupation of the Rhineland cities as unjustified.

The paper was forced to publish a letter this morning from Gen. Demetz, French commander, to Police Chief Ehrler, severely reprimanding him for an incident in the Kaiserstrasse Wednesday, when a German mob surrounded a French soldier and deprived him of his carbine and bicycle.

Ehrler, replying to the demand for restoration, says he is powerless to deliver the gun and wheel, because they have vanished. There is a sting in the police chief's reply where he asks that the incident be overlooked inasmuch as it happened on the day when six German citizens were killed and thirty-five wounded by the Algerian troops.

German City Bars Troops.

Dusseldorf authorities are protesting vigorously against the atrocities perpetrated by the reichswehr during their advance into the Ruhr basin. Entrance of the troops is energetically opposed.

Thousands of communists have fled to the British zone of occupation. In Cologne the Tommies have interned 2,500. The amnesty proclaimed by Berlin has not induced any of them to return to the area occupied by the troops, as they recall how Berlin violated the agreement to make peace.

PARIS WARNED ALLIES

LONDON, April 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—The reply of France to the British note on the action taken by France in occupying additional German territory was received in London today.

The note maintains that France gave Great Britain ample warning on April 3 that France considered it necessary to take military steps if Germany failed to withdraw her troops.

The reply mentions the unratified treaty drawn up between France, Great Britain, and the United States for the protection of France, presents proofs of Germany's violation of the peace treaty, and concludes with an expression of the wish of France to act in accordance with the wishes of the allies, and a hope for further conferences on the subject.

London Silent on Notice.

The British foreign office has not stated what form the French warning took, but it is assumed that it was presented verbally by the French ambassador.

Notwithstanding the insistence of France that there was no alternative for her in the circumstances except occupation of German territory and her denial of the statements that she had acted without warning, officials here view the note as conciliatory, because of the expressed desire of the French for an allied conference.

This view is emphasized by the fact that Premier Lloyd George left today for San Remo, although it was stated yesterday that he might postpone his departure. He did not attend the meeting of the supreme council here today. Earl Curzon, the foreign secretary, also was not present because of illness.

Draft Answer to Paris.

An outline of the answer to the French note with regard to occupation of Frankfort and other German cities was discussed at a brief cabinet meeting before the departure of Lloyd George.

In other official quarters the French note is considered to have relieved the tension of yesterday.

The Times states it has learned French African troops which originally occupied Frankfort have been replaced by European forces. It is explained that Africans were used only because they were nearest Frankfort.

BELGIANS TO ADVANCE

BRUSSELS, April 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—Belgian artillery and infantry for the Frankfort sector will leave Brussels on special trains next Tuesday, it was announced today.

The Belgian official point of view at the beginning, it was said here today, was the same as that of the British, Americans, and Italians, namely, that intervention was not indispensable, but after the French decision for occupation Belgium considered her place was with France.

The Belgian troops will remain in the Ruhr until the evacuation of that region by the reichswehr. The French ambassador here has expressed the official thanks of France for Belgium's attitude.

Snowbound Mr. Rabbit Arrives at Last

Annual Easter Egg Hunt for Chlidren Is Held at the Residence of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cooke.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 10.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S continued failure to appoint the railroad labor board in spite of the growing menace of the railroad strike was characterized by Senator Cummins today as "inexcusable and indefensible."

MEMBERS of the senate and house, who are supporting Senator Johnson's presidential boom, met today and made plans for pushing the campaign with redoubled vigor.

ADMINISTRATION officials hold that the position of the United States in its relation to the developments in the Ruhr Valley situation is quite different from that of Great Britain and will therefore make no statement of the attitude of this government.

REPRESENTATIVE DYER of Missouri led a fight in the conference report on the annual postoffice appropriation bill today because of failure to specify St. Louis as being included in the route of the transcontinental aerial mail service. The bill appropriates $1,250,000 for aerial mail service from New York to San Francisco via Chicago and Omaha.

THE government, it was reported today, has compiled a list of coal profiteers and under the president's direction Attorney General Palmer is preparing to proceed against them.

TIRED OF VIOLATIONS

PARIS, April 10.—Premier Millerand, speaking to the Associated Press today, said:

"France's position is absolutely simple. We were in the presence of a series of German violations of the treaty, the last of which affects precisely those articles of the treaty which were covered by the French-British-American agreement under which England and America were to come to our assistance.

"I enumerated to the French chamber on March 26 the German violations—failure to deliver coal as agreed under the treaty, refusal to surrender those guilty of atrocities, failure to comply with the terms of the articles on reparations, and refusal to disarm. I said then that France could not always accept passively violations of the treaty.

"We Live Next Door."

"France's position is quite different from that of America and England. We are living next door to Germany and we feel the danger of our position in a way in which America could not feel it.

"Why has Belgium taken an identical position with France? Because the Belgian people are in the same dangerous situation. They are living next door to Germany and are obliged to protect themselves."

The German charge, Dr. von Mayer, today addressed a note to Premier Millerand, asking whether it was the intention of the French government to extend further the occupation of the right bank of the Rhine. The premier replied that the French government did not anticipate any such eventuality.

FIGHTING TO KEEP ARMS

BERLIN, April 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—The entente's suggestion that the reorganized German citizen soldiery be armed with pistols and clubs and other weapons instead of rifles is viewed by the conservative press with pronounced mistrust. The proposed dissolution of civil guard formations in Germany, which are said to comprise 2,000,000 registered members, already is provoking sharp protest.

Bavaria is offering stout resistence and hints that if the Berlin government insists on such action it will have to come to Bavaria and collect the arms. A Munich report says cabinet officials are in touch with Baden, Wurttemberg, and Saxony to coördinate opposition.

BATTLES IN SAXONY

BERNE, April 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—While order is being restored in the Ruhr region after the prolonged disorders there, a new revolt is reported in the industrial town of Plauen, in Vogtland, Saxony.

Communists there Friday afternoon attacked the police and reichswehr and, after hard fighting, occupied the police posts, barracks, and railway stations.

GERMANS MARK TIME AS HOUR TO RETIRE EXPIRES

Heavily Armed Troops Decline to Leave.

BY GEORGE SELDES.
[By Special Cable.]

ESSEN, April 10.—German government troops are still occupying the Ruhr district and making no effort to withdraw, in spite of the French ultimatum that they evacuate today.

The troops occupy a line through Isolohn, Weigen, Surseld, Litturg, five kilometers from Barmen, and are still in the towns comprising this area.

The Communist forces still control Hagen, Schwelm, Gummersbadn, Barmen, and Elberfeld.

No advance by either army is expected just now, although the Ebert forces may swing south, notwithstanding that this move is forbidden by the French orders.

Although the Reichswehr realize they are violating the treaty, no effort is being made to withdraw. I estimate more than 30,000 of these troops are present. I saw nine 77's, several 155's, four armored cars, a vast number of machine guns, and thousands of rifles and grenades.

Atrocities are not absent from the German government's program. I saw the bodies of two men lying in a court yard after they had been executed, and for the soldiers to savagely beat civilians is no uncommon sight.

65 PRESIDENTS FIX RAIL NEEDS AT $600,000,000

Equipment estimated to cost $600,000,000 must be obtained if the railroads of the United States are to be brought up to the pre-war standard, according to the Association of Railroad Executives, which met in the Blackstone hotel yesterday.

Presidents of sixty-five railroads were present and discussed the division of the $300,000,000 revolving fund created by the Esch-Cummins bill, from which the roads may borrow. The additional $300,000,000 needed will be furnished by the stronger railroads and sought through private loans.

The needed equipment includes 100,000 freight cars, 3,000 passenger cars, and 2,000 locomotives, Thomas De Witt Cuyler of Philadelphia, chairman of the association, declared.

Northwestern Co-eds Give Thrilling, Killing Circus

"This way for the battle of the tea lizards!"

"See the one and only Martha Wilson in her original wicked Quaker dance!"

"If you haven't been vamped, you must be. Step in and see the Wilson avenue revue. Trained vamps! Brunettes, blondes, and Titian beauties!"

These and other samples of the barker's art resounded last night through Willard hall, in Evanston, at the annual circus and county fair of the fair co-eds. There was Harold Gilmore as the sultan in his palace of oriental dancers, and Winifred Wishard in the fortune teller's booth. There was the den of "wild women" in which Elizabeth Montgomery and Josephine Smith, hair streaming, clawed and snarled at each other in true cave fashion. There was a chamber of horrors with a thrill every twenty seconds.

Mildred Weston was general chairman of the greatest show on Northwestern campus.

After all the hidden eggs had been found, thec hildren feasted on ice cream and cake, and played games.

GERMANY'S RUIN EUROPE'S, PLEA OF BERNSTORFF

BY PARKE BROWN.
[By Special Cable.]

BERLIN, April 10.—Speaking of the French occupation of Frankfort, Count von Bernstorff, former ambassador to Washington, urged the importance of international support of the present German government.

"There is only one way of saving Europe from utter ruin," he said—"namely: united action by all governments and nations for the reconstruction of morals, commerce, and industries, and against bolshevism. The present German government realizes this, and wishes to coöperate with France, as well as all the rest of Germany's former enemies.

"The present German government is the only government possible in this country, and it is fighting a hard fight against reaction and bolshevism. In this fight our government should have the help and moral support of all other governments. Instead of that, the German government is being punished for having once more defeated reaction and bolshevism.

"Such action on the part of the French must inevitably encourage reaction and bolshevism in Germany. Thus reconstruction again will be postponed. The world should remember that the ruin of Germany will mean ruin for all of Europe.

"Today reconstruction is the great problem before us, and it is an international problem. No nation can solve that problem alone. International cooperation is the need of the hour."

Lincoln, who was formerly a member of the British parliament, acted as chief censor and in other capacities under Kapp and his associates.

NORTHCLIFFE IN BITTER ATTACK ON LLOYD GEORGE

Fears Berlin Has Lot of False Hopes.

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1920.]

LONDON, April 10.—The Northcliffe press this morning returns to the attack on Lloyd George, over the Anglo-French misunderstanding, in the most embittered language it ever used against him.

The London Times attributes this "crisis of the first magnitude in Anglo-French relations" entirely to "the momentous blunder" of the prime minister, whom it accused of jeopardizing deliberately "the only valid guarantee for the maintenance of the peace of the world, which his irresponsible conduct at the peace conference had left comparatively intact," that guarantee being the solidarity between England and France.

Bitter Over German Chat.

The Times continues:

"We fear that before allowing his policy to be publicly revealed, he had already undermined that solidarity in conversations with Dr. von Stahmer, the German chargé d'affaires in London.

"We should be glad to know whether Lloyd George can affirm without the possibility of contradiction that nothing which he has said to the German representative would have justified that diplomatist or his government in concluding that England would not stand by France in case France should uphold the peace treaty by acting on her own responsibility in defense of its provisions.

Old Hope to Split Allies.

"Information that reaches us from a reliable quarter in Berlin suggests that some Germans in responsible positions had been counting upon the division which the Ruhr affair would cause among the allies, and we have an independent reason to suspect that Lloyd George in his dealings with the German chargé d'affaires may have been, to say the least, indiscreet."

TREATY BATTLE GOES TO SENATE; WILL ACT SOON

Washington, D. C., April 10.—With the adoption by the house of the joint resolution declaring the war with Germany at an end, the senate today again became the "battleground for peace." Both Republican and Democratic leaders expected the measure to be taken up there without great delay, probably Monday.

Opposition to the resolution from those who have fought so bitterly for the adoption of the Versailles treaty was assumed, but opponents of the treaty and the league of nations were confident its passage would be obtained with considerably more than a majority, and that the affirmative vote would include a fair percentage of demands, as was the case in the house.

Landis Sets Limit on Increase of Flat Rent

John T. Lewis, who holds a seven year lease on the Blackstone apartments, 5325-27 Blackstone avenue, notified the tenants that their rents would be jumped from around $50 to $90, $100, and $125, and then Judge Landis heard about it.

The judge yesterday instructed the Central Trust company, receiver for Mr. Lewis, to withdraw the new leases and draw up new ones calling for $62.50. The tenants smiled as they left the courtroom.

RIGHT TO LIFE IN INDIA HELD ABOVE 'UNWRITTEN LAW'

Slayer of Wife's Lover Is Sent to Prison.

BOMBAY, India, April 9.—The judgment in the case of the Rev. L. W. D. Jackman, an American medical missionary who recently was sentenced to two year's imprisonment for having shot and killed Maj. H. D. Cloete at Sadiya, Asam, set forth that, although the accused had been for some days in a state of mental torture and had suffered severely, it was necessary to impose the legal penalty. The court maintained that human life was held sacred by law, and that no man could be permitted to kill a human being no matter how grievously wronged he might be.

Allows for "Loss of Control."

Evidence was produced to show that Dr. Jackman committed the deed on hearing his wife's confession of infidelity. While the court held the deed was legally murder, the charge of murder was not framed because the committing magistrate allowed for "temporary deprivation of self-control."

Strictly speaking, says the judgment, the proper course would have been to frame a charge of murder and leave it to the accused to prove there was grave, sudden provocation, but the judge thought the magistrate used proper discretion in framing the charge.

No "Temporary Insanity."

Although the judge did not doubt that the position of Mr. Jackman was one of the cruelest in which a man could be placed, he would not admit the possibility of temporary insanity, saying the movements of the accused showed he fully realized the nature of his act.

PROTECTOR OF ARMENIA TO PAY COST, IS DECISION

BY HENRY WALES.
[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, April 11.—The decision of the council of the league of nations regarding Armenia, which will be made known tomorrow, shorn of verbiage, simply is this—If any country wants the Armenians protected, it must agree to pay handsomely to protect them.

This as regarded as a direct message to the United States, which is the only nation sufficiently interested in the Armenians to respond financially.

The council decided that the league could not accept a mandate for Armenia until agreements were reached how the administration would be paid for and how the cost of policing and protecting the country could be collected, as Britain, France, and Italy are not willing to assume any financial burdens for barren and unremunerative Armenia.

HADLEY, YALE'S PRESIDENT FOR 20 YEARS, QUITS

Will Retain Post Until His Successor Is Named.

New Haven, Conn., April 10.—[Special.]—The resignation of Arthur Twining Hadley, president of Yale for twenty and a half years, today was accepted by the trustees of the university. Dr. Hadley will remain with the department of political economy at the university.

In his letter of resignation, President Hadley said:

"Early in 1921 I shall reach the age at which the statutes of the corporation permit its officers to retire. I rejoice that conditions are such that I can honorably avail myself of this privilege and resume my studies and work as an economist. I am making this request more than a year in advance because I regard it as important for the continuity of Yale's progress that my successor should be chosen next autumn, and have at least six months in which to consider plans for the future, before assuming the actual duties of his office."

"Eminent Service to Yale."

In accepting the resignation the corporation adopted a resolution expressing regret over the announcement of President Hadley "since it foreshadows the termination of a relationship which has been of eminent service to Yale university." The resolution further says

"The corporation would record its deep sense of indebtedness to President Hadley for all that he has done personally, and that has been accomplished under his leadership, for a notable growth in the influence, equipment, and educational significance of Yale during the more than twenty years of his administration."

Chicagoan on Committee.

The corporation appointed a committee to receive suggestions as to names of possible candidates for the office of president. It includes Samuel Fisher, '80, New York; John V. Farwell, '79, Chicago; Edwin M. Herr, '84, Pittsburgh; Henry B. Sargent, '71, New Haven, and the Rev. Newman Smyth, New Haven.

President Hadley was inaugurated president of Yale in 1899. President Timothy Dwight having resigned the previous November. At the same time Director George Brush of the Sheffield Scientific school resigned and Prof. Russell H. Chittenden was elected his successor. Unofficial reports indicate that Director Chittenden soon will retire.

Policy Reconstructed.

Dr. Hadley has been head of Yale during the period of its most extensive growth. Its resources have quadrupled during his administration, although its membership has not increased more than 50 per cent. The reconstruction of the educational policy of the university the last year has been one of the most sweeping changes in his régime.

Dr. Hadley was graduated from Yale in the class of '76.

OLD MAN'S PLEA FOR HOME BARED IN SHONTS SUIT

He Wanted Love; Wife Sought Title, Charge.

hereafter I will expect something in return other than words. Heretofore I have sacrificed companionship, health, rest, books, and everything which appeals to me in order to fill your girlhood years with every pleasure and your later years with the sweetest memories of youth. Now my advancing years require a change. While I do not want to commercialize love, I must require a quid pro quo in deeds as well as words.

"Can Never Respect Her Again."

"Your mother can get a separation—a divorce—anything she wants. I can never respect her again. But you can come any time your heart prompts you and will be welcome. If we make a home here it must be understood that it will be my home, and that every one in it will carry out my ideas and wishes willingly, cheerfully, and loyally. Otherwise it will be better not to have one at all. Let me know promptly, my dear children, what your hearts and judgments decide.

"In conclusion, I can only say that the writing of this letter is one of the saddest undertakings of my life. I have always honed you would learn your mother's peculiarities without my being forced to tell you. But her attempts to injure me this trip here have been too dastardly, and have come to the knowledge of too many of my friends to ignore, inasmuch as there is no indication of any letup on her part. I am compelled to tell, and I think it right for you to know the truth. Her very latest scheme, a thing she is now working on, is the preparation of a scurrilous article concerning me, which she intends sending to me through a stranger, with the threat that if I don't pay $7,000 it will be published. Which would you rather believe, that your mother is insane, or capable of this?

"Because of my great love for you two g' 's I have suffered neglect, misrepresentation, and abuse for years in silence, but my powers of endurance are gone. I am entitled after all my years of self-sacrifice to something else, and I am going to have it. I am entitled after all these years of wrangling to peace, and I am going to have it. Do you want to give me all the things I have longed for and starved for. If so, if I ask too much, be honest and say so. I can stand anything if it is only honest, sincere, and genuine. With all my heart, your loving father."

The answer of Mr. Shonts to his wife's separation suit, which was filed in 1917, was made part of Mrs. Thomas' answer.

Opposed Marriage for Title.

"Defendant alleges upon information and belief that this action is not prosecuted by the plaintiff for the purpose of obtaining judgment or separation, as pretended," reads this document, "but solely and only for the purpose of intimidating and coercing defendant into the payment of large sums of money to the plaintiff and her daughters, to enable them to acquire and maintain a position as members of what they deemed to be the fashionable society of France, and in keeping with the rank and social position which they claim for the Duchess de Chaulnes, her son, the young Duc de Chaulnes, as well as her mother and sister.

"Defendant alleges that the estrangement between defendant and his wife and daughters came about through and because of defendant's opposition to the marriage of his daughter, Mary Theodosia, to the Duc de Chaulnes, and after said marriage because of defendant's opposition to the continued residence in France of his family."

The answer of Mr. Shonts further states that for many years he and his family lived in the west and that he had been in the railroad business since his youth with the exception of two years when he was president of the isthmian canal commission.

Needed Comforts of Home.

"During the defendant's business career he has been obliged to work long hours each day," the answer concluded, "and has needed the comforts of a home where he might rest and recuperate and have the companionship of his wife and daughters, but defendant alleges that as the plaintiff many years ago acquired social ambitions of a character not in keeping with ideals of defendant or of a plain citizen of the United States or with the financial means of the parties hereto; that plaintiff became obsessed with the idea of the marriage of her daughters into the titled families of Europe; that defendant counseled against such course, but in spite of his protest the defendant's daughter, aided and abetted by the other members of defendant's family, contracted the marriage aforesaid; that defendant's position in relation to such foreign alliance always angered plaintiff and was the principal cause of such differences as have actually arisen between the parties."

Suit Goes Back to 1906.

Mrs. Shonts alleged that Mrs. Thomas began to destroy her husband's love for her when she first met the late president of the Interborough in 1906. In the answer on file in the suit Mrs. Thomas has merely made a general denial of the allegation, but a new answer served today on the plaintiff's attorneys by Shearn & Hare, attorneys for Mrs. Thomas, revealed the letter of Mr. Shonts.

The answer further discloses that Mrs. Shonts sued Mrs. Thomas at that time, presumably for alienating Mr. Shonts' affections, but that as a condition of the signing of the separation agreement by Mr. and Mrs. Shonts that year the action against Mrs. Thomas was dropped on June 29, 1917, the time the separation suit was settled.

Claims General Release.

Mrs. Thomas alleges that she received a general release at that time of all claims against her by Mrs. Shonts, and this is expected to be the chief defense at the trial.

Mrs. Thomas alleges that the paper signed by Mrs. Shonts in her behalf "thereby released and forever discharged the defendant (Mrs. Thomas) from all causes of action, controversies, claims, and demands whatsoever, in law or in equity, which plaintiff then had or ever had against the defendant by reason of any matter, cause, or thing whatsoever."

Mrs. Thomas alleges further that Mrs. Shonts then agreed "to never repeat or to give currency to the charges or molest or harass the defendant."

"Neglected Wifely Duties."

Referring to Mr. Shonts' answer to his wife's separation suit, Mrs. Thomas says Mr. Shonts accused his wife of neglect of her wifely duties, stating that "her extravagances had overwhelmed him in debt."

Mrs. Thomas states that she first met Mr. Shonts casually through an introduction by his daughter, Marguerite, in 1906, and again in February, 1908, at the temporary home of Mrs. Shonts when her daughter Theodora married the Duc De Chaulnes. She alleges that her real acquaintance did not begin until late in 1908, "two years after the acts of alienation falsely and maliciously alleged by the plaintiff."

Mrs. Thomas makes an additional defense that the act charged against her in the complaint as to the alienation of Mr. Shonts' affections took place more than six years before the suit was filed and that, accordingly, it is barred by the statute of limitations.

The answer shows that all the actions of Mr. Shonts will be defended on three grounds—that Mr. Shonts had lost all affection for his wife prior to acts charged against the defendant, that Mrs. Shonts has signed a release of all claims against her, and that action is barred by the statute of limitations.

Attached to the answer is the separation agreement reciting that Mrs. Shonts had debts of $80,000 and a list of the debts and a copy of the general release given to Mrs. Thomas.

SERIOUS FOOD SHORTAGE SEEN FOR THIS FALL

Get Behind the Farmer, Is Plea.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 10.—[Special.]—A warning of a further increase in the cost of living was sounded today by Henry A. Moehlenpah, member of the federal reserve board and former president of the Wisconsin State Bankers' association."

Calling attention to a decreased production of foodstuffs, which is in prospect this year, Mr. Moehlenpah asserted that agricultural conditions are serious. He said that "money and credits should be mobilized and swung to the weakest place in our whole economic program and put behind the farmer."

Labor Situation Acute.

"If the city man expects to escape a further increase in the high cost of living he will have to get behind the farmer and supply the money and credit required to produce the things needed to feed and clothe the world," said Mr. Moehlenpah.

"At no time has the world been far removed from famine. But today conditions are grave. Indications are that the grain acreage this year in the corn belt will be smaller than for many years. The farm labor situation is acute throughout the country. Many farmers in the best sections of Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Missouri are seeding down their corn land to hay, because hay can be harvested and marketed with less labor than corn.

"Investigations made by the New York State Agricultural college and the United States bureau of crop estimates show that the number of persons on New York farms decreased 3 per cent between February, 1919, and the same date in 1920, while the number of hired men employed on the farms decreased 7 per cent during the same period.

"And early reports indicate that crop conditions are below normal in many districts.

Must Back Farmer.

"The situation in Europe is not such as to warrant the expectation that there will be an early return to normal production of food crops. Any considerable shortage in any one section of the world will mean hardship the world over during the coming winter.

"Money and credits should be mobilized and swung to the weakest place in our whole economic program and put behind the farmer in sufficient amount as he goes to his summer's work, to make it possible for him to make good on the task we have laid upon him.

"Our government, through the operation of the federal land banks and the joint stock land banks can do much by way of extending credit for long time at low rates. But it remains for the country banker to use these long time credit facilities of the government so that he may always have ready and ample funds with which to meet the short time credit demands of the farmer and other legitimate demands of his community.

"As the farmer must depend upon power machinery to take up in part the slack caused by the shortage of labor, it becomes imperative that credit be provided to enable him to buy machinery."

$1,447,362 CAR FUND SCORNED AT CITY HALL

Nearly $1,500,000 went begging in the city hall yesterday.

Two checks totaling $1,447,362 from the Chicago Surface lines were refused by City Controller Harding on the advice of C. E. Cleveland, the city's special traction attorney. The money is the city's 55 per cent of the company's net devisable receipts for the fiscal year ending Jan. 31, 1920.

Mr. Cleveland's attention was called to the fact that interest at 6 per cent on the sum tendered would bring the city in $237 a day.

"What is $237 a day," he replied, if by accepting it we are prejudicing our rights to protect the city against being robbed of $40,000 a day, the amount the higher fares are costing car riders?"

The figures for the last four years are:

1919-20	$1,447,362
1918-19	381,782
1917-18	2,086,753

MILES, $200,000 SHORT, GIVES UP TO CONSCIENCE

Broken in Spirit, Purse, Here to Pay Penalty.

James H. Miles fled Chicago on Nov. 22, short in his accounts $200,000. He was vice president of the Standard Trust and Savings bank and a substantial citizen. Yesterday he came home. He was a broken fugitive. In his pocket were a few small coins.

"It was the craze for speculation," he said.

Gives Up to Old Friend.

Following negotiations begun about three weeks ago, Miles surrendered himself yesterday to a lifelong friend, Ward Thompson, the department of justice agent at Rockford. Assistant State's Attorney Edwin J. Raber, also a friend, went there early in the morning and returned to Chicago with Miles at night.

"I taxicabbed from Chicago to Aurora," said Miles, detailing his flight. "I boarded the first train for Dixon, then went to Bloomington, and from there to Knoxville, Tenn. As I had only $900, I had to seek work. I didn't dare go near a bank, so I obtained employment as an accountant with some members of the interstate commerce commission whom I met. I traveled with them around the south and to Washington, D. C. I used an assumed name.

"Left $50,000 for Bank."

"I never communicated with my wife. [Mrs. Marjorie Miles and their two children live at 1136 East Forty-eighth street.] I didn't leave her $50,000, as was reported. The money I left with Robert A. Gillies, my brother-in-law, was for the bank. I think President Charles S. Castle should take into consideration the fact that I have made hundreds of thousands of dollars for the bank and deal leniently with me.

"My conscience began troubling me a month ago. The impulse to write home became irresistible. I sent a letter to Mr. Raber asking upon what terms I might surrender, but received no reply. Then I wrote to Ward Thompson. He advised me to surrender. I passed through Chicago last Tuesday en route for Rockford. That was the only time I was in the city since I disappeared last November.

Eager to Pay the Piper.

"My sole ambition now is to make restitution.

"I cannot explain my actions. As I look back, I seem to have been living a dream. It began soon after the United States entered the war. All about me men were making easy money in stocks. It seemed ridiculously simple. The rise of Steel had been phenomenal. I decided to invest—just a little.

"I drew on my own savings. My stock tumbled. To cover and regain my losses, I diverted some of the bank's money. Sometimes I won, but my winnings were offset by my reverses.

"One day a clearing house committee visited the bank and demanded the books. I knew the end had come. I left that afternoon. The next day I was dismissed as vice president."

Loses $175,000 in Year.

In a statement to Mr. Raber, Miles later amplified his newspaper interview. His method, he said, was to abstract securities from the vaults of the Standard Trust and borrow money upon them from loop banks, later redeeming them with trust certificates which were worthless. In this way he obtained more than $175,000 in a year. He lost it all in steel stocks.

Many times while traveling about the country he considered ending his life. The only thing that deterred him, he said, was the thought of his wife and two children.

He had twice been seriously ill of pneumonia and influenza, he said. His health is now impaired, and he believes a prison sentence will prove fatal. He is confident he can make restitution if given the opportunity. He never stole a cent in his life until a year before he disappeared, he said.

Prayed to Make Amends.

"We lived simply and only used half of my salary of $10,000 a year," he told Mr. Raber. "The other half we saved. We had a comfortable bank balance when I fell. And now look at me—once the respected head of a family—a thief. I prayed to be allowed to win my fortune back before I was discovered, but it was not to be. My prayers were not answered."

Mr. Castle said last night that the amount lost by the bank and not covered by insurance was less than $100,000.

Miles, who was indicted by the February grand jury on charges of embezzlemet and forgery, spent the night at a loop hotel in company with an attaché of the state's attorney's office. He will be given opportunity to obtain bonds before being committed to the county jail.

CHARITIES GET $1,080 FOR COAL FROM TRIBUNE

THE TRIBUNE has received from the United Charities of Chicago a receipt for $1,080.36, covering disbursements for coal distributed to the poor of Chicago during January and February. This fund was furnished by generous readers of THE TRIBUNE during the latter winter months. The total contributed to the fund since it was opened early in January is exactly $960.90. This does not quite cover the expenditure, but by reason of the consolidation of THE TRIBUNE ice and coal funds the excess in expenditure is met.

During the month of March there was expended from this joint fund by the various district branches of the United Charities a total of $272.45. This in addition to the $1,080.36 paid out for coal during January and February.

A statement of the fund follows:

Cora M. Cook	$ 12.50
Friend of the Kiddies	5.00
	$ 17.50

FIRE KILLS AGED WIDOW IN "OLD CURIOSITY SHOP"

By the light of their lanterns members of engine company No. 51 gazed on an unusual scene in the home of Mrs. Sarah Mathers, 83 years old, a widow, 6701 South Morgan street, last night when they responded to a call for aid she had sent in when the house caught fire. On the floor of the front room of the four room cottage they found the body of the widow, who had been overcome by smoke, and half a dozen dead chickens. In the kitchen they found a Ford automobile, the property of John C. Mathers, her son, a draftsman at the Illinois Steel company.

The house, built of odds and ends of lumber and galvanized iron, is on the rear of the lot. Last night, in the absence of her son, Mrs. Mathers is believed to have dozed and the candle burned down and set fire to a table.

"I'LL STAY TILL ERIN IS QUIET" —LORD FRENCH

Thinks America Will Not Interfere in Ireland.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1920: By the Tribune Company.]

DUBLIN, April 10.—"The Irish question can never breed enmity between Great Britain and America. I know perfectly well we have no better friends in the world than the United States and I am quite certain nothing annoys the real American more than anything that would create irritation. I know the Americans, fought sice by side with them, love and respect them, and feel sure they have the same feelings."

These were the opening words of Viscount French, hero of Ypres, viceroy of Ireland, in an exclusive interview this afternoon in his room in the vice regal lodge at Dublin.

Sets Report Straight.

Lord French was much annoyed by the publication two days ago of a conversation with a representative of the London Express. This was not intended for publication and entirely misrepresented him, he says. Lord French was quoted as saying he was "fed up" with the vice royalty and was anxious to resign.

"What I actually said was that the vice royalty was no bed of roses and I have no objection to a surrender of it at any time, but I have no intention of resigning as long as I can serve my country in this position. There is no probability of my resignation this year."

Nails "American Lie."

Lord French took opportunity to deny that he had any evidence or believed that any recent murder in Ireland was the work of Americans, as alleged by Carson in the house of commons.

"In all the recent murders it is unquestionable that only Irishmen were engaged," he said.

Replying to a question about the present state of Ireland, Lord French said:

"It is quite certain there is no chance of the situation passing out of the hands of the government. There is no chance of a successful rebellion. They may try, but I don't think they will and, if they do, the result is certain of defeat."

The Irish Army.

Discussing the Irish revolutionary military force Lord French said:

"We know the Irish volunteers exist. We are not sure, but the numbers may be between 100,000 and 200,000, but not more. They are organized territorially in brigades, regiments, and companies, fully officered. So far there is no evidence of any military brains at the head, but undoubtedly great organizing power exists. I can't say much about their training. We are stopping drilling all the time. So far as arms are concerned, we know many people in this country are carrying arms who have no right, and we believe they have a large number of rifles and revolvers, but no artillery."

Discussing the various substitutes for the present home rule bill, of which he is a warm supporter, Lord French said:

"I don't believe there is a possibility of a dominion settlement, because that means logically control of the army and navy and means insisting again on nonpartition."

PRISONERS MAY STARVE

DUBLIN, April 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—The 104 Sinn Fein prisoners who have been for six days on hunger strike in Mountjoy prison are so weak that their relatives have been sent for. Both the prisoners and the government seem determined not to yield and it is feared that some deaths may occur. Among the serious cases are Ald. McCabe, Sinn Fein member for Sligo, and Counselor Carolan, Sinn Fein member of the Belfast corporation.

The claims lodged with the Dublin corporation by landlords and government officials for compensation for the fires last Sunday morning in tax offices total nearly $160,000. The total expense of the demonstration will reach $2,500,000.

DR. J. A. BLAKE HURT IN FIRE AT TARRYTOWN HOME

House Destroyed; Valuable Paintings Saved.

Tarrytown, N. Y., April 10.—[Special.]—Dr. Joseph A. Blake, the noted surgeon, was severely burned about the hands while directing a force of his servants at a fire which destroyed his home today.

Dr. Blake, his wife, who formerly was Mrs. Clarence Mackay, and two guests had just entered the dining room for lunch when Dr. Blake discovered the fire. It started in the kitchen, in the basement, ran up the dumb waiter shaft, and mushroomed out on every floor.

Dr. Blake was finally overcome by smoke while fighting the flames on the upper floors of the house, and had to be helped from the building. Dr. Charles E. Fairchild of Tarrytown was called to dress his burns.

Mrs. Blake Rescues Children.

While her husband fought the fire Mrs. Blake rescued her three children, Catherine, Jean, and Billy, who were asleep on the second floor.

Difficulty in getting water from the Tarrytown mains to the house, which is on a hill 300 feet high and 1,200 feet distant from North Broadway, and the breaking of several lines of hose under the necessary high pressure, prevented the Tarrytown fire department from saving the house.

Dr. Blake estimated the loss at $100,000, of which $80,000 is covered by insurance.

"Haven't I had the hardest luck since coming here?" remarked Dr. Blake. "A few months ago I was robbed of $70,000 worth of jewelry, and now this fire."

Valuable Paintings Saved.

All the valuable furniture and paintings were saved under the direction of Mrs. Blake, who took charge of their removal with great coolness. The furniture and paintings were stored at the home of Finley J. Shephard, directly opposite, and at the homes of Alfred McEwen and Henry K. Browning, whose grounds adjoin the Blake estate.

Dr. and Mrs. Blake and their family went at once to the Sleepy Hollow Country club, where they will live temporarily. They have already taken a summer home at Newport.

Washington, D. C., April 10.—Mrs. James Walsh of New York, who styles herself as "captain" of the Irish pickets, and two other women who were bearing banners in front of the British embassy today, were arrested on charges of violating federal statutes. The other two women are Mrs. Thomas Currin of Philadelphia and Mrs. Katherine Columbine of New York.

Eugene Delano Will Shows Estate of $3,000,000

New York, April 10.—[Special.]—The will of the late Eugene Delano, banker and former member of the firm of Brown Bros., leaving an estate estimated at $3,000,000, was filed today in the Surrogate's court. Mr. Delano advanced $230,000 to his son, Moreau, and gave $25,000 to the Musical Art society of New York.

SUPER-ZEPPELIN WAS TO BOMB N. Y. WHEN KAISER YELLED "NUFF"

Washington, D. C., April 10.—Details of plans of the German general staff for bombing New York City and a minute description of the super-Zeppelin in which the invasion would have been attempted are contained in an article by Col. William N. Hensley Jr., of the air service, made public today by the war department. Col. Hensley was one of the American officers who visited Germany after the armistice.

He says the German effort was scheduled to take place about Thanksgiving, 1918, and that the L-72, which he described as "the largest airship in the world," was expressly constructed for the raid. Measuring 775 feet from tip to tip and equipped with six engines of 260 horsepower each, the L-72, the colonel said, was capable of carrying five tons of high explosives and incendiary material.

CO-OPERATIVE TO SHIP FLAX, FURS OUT OF RUSSIA

Vast Quantities of Lumber to Rebuild Homes.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1920: By the Tribune Company.]

MOSCOW, April 8, via Berlin, April 10.—In addition to the enormous food supplies which are awaiting a world market, Russia has a three years' supply of other exports which need only transport to take them to ports from which they can be shipped to the outside world. Great supplies of timber, which are badly needed to supply France, are all ready to export from points in the north.

Flax—millions of dollars' worth—stored in depots near producing centers is awaiting transport facilities. At a Siberian depot a three years' supply of furs is also ready.

Puts Transport First.

"But Russia cannot begin talking export until our railroads are in shape again," said Lejava of the central board of all the Russian coöperatives when discussing the export situation this morning. "As for imports, we are unwilling to talk of anything but transport. There will be indefinite figures until the world has supplied our transport needs. The coöperative commission, which left Friday evening for London and Paris, will first insist on contracts for locomotives, repairs, parts of rolling stocks, and all kinds of motor transport. After they have closed the contracts and deliveries have begun, then we will start negotiations for machinery and manufactured products."

This will be factory machinery, tools, agricultural machinery, woodworking appliances, and technical and chemical instruments and appliances.

Coöperatives a Big Thing.

In export and import the coöperatives are bound to lead. Since the soviet revolution they have grown from two separate groups of workers, citizens and coöperatives representing 7,000,000 people, into an organization which is feeding most of Russia. Now the number of potential or actual forces are 150,000,000 persons. At the head of the central board controlling the operations is a man who formerly was president of the workers' coöperatives. The board itself is composed largely of the old workers' movement.

The central board has twenty members—eight former members of the citizens' coöperative central control, four from the workers of the old central organization, four from the citizens' coöoperatives—chiefs heretofore not on the central committee—and four represent the soviet government.

Chief an Experienced Man.

The chief is a most interesting business man of long years' service in this work, since he became president of the workers' society. At 18 his commercial career began with a transportation firm on the Volga; later he was general manager of a large insurance company; now he is well past middle age, able and efficient.

Lejava explained the reasons why the government left the coöperatives in complete control of their property:

"The aims of nationalization were to defeat exploitation by individuals. The coöperatives were organized for the same purpose. When the Communist government came into power they were recognized as a people's organization. The government further recognized them as an efficient machinery of distribution, with the result practically the entire task of feeding the country was turned over to them."

PRESIDENT

Chicago Civic Leader and Manufacturer Elected Head of Commercial Club.

HOWARD ELTING.

At the annual meeting of the Commercial Club of Chicago last night Howard Elting, former head of the Association of Commerce, and president of the Heath & Milligan company, was elected president for the ensuing year.

Mr. Elting expects to continue and enlarge the club's work for Americanization and to promote the development of the Illinois national guard, particularly in view of the fact that the reserve organizations which have been in existence since America entered the war will cease to exist as reserve regiments next October.

Mr. Elting has been identified with the Chicago Plan Commission, smoke abatement, safety first, and numerous other civic movements.

SAMPAN BABIES GREET BOATS AT FAIRY SIAM PORT

Strapped on Mother's Back at the Sweeps.

Below is the final article of Mr. Smith's series of stories describing the trip to rescue Dr. Shelton. It was during this adventure that he was stricken by Asiatic typhoid. Dr. Shelton's release was effected.

BY FREDERICK A. SMITH.

[By Special Correspondence.]

[Final Article.]

HAIPHONG, Indo-China, Feb. 27.—The poet who saw a fairy sail upon a fairy sea must have visited the China coast. He must have wandered up the Canton and Pearl rivers from Hongkong, and then perhaps he set his course southward and westward to Haiphong. Haiphong is near the northern border of Anam, a French colony which shares the northern part of the Malay peninsula with that little country which has long been the butt of the paragrapher and the librettist—Siam.

From this port, within reasonably short distance of the Tibet and Burma borders, we are to take train for the interior of Yunnan province, a Chinese province whose western boundaries have become so confused in the recent débacle that nobody quite knows where Tibet begins and China ends.

About the Sea.

But this last letter about the voyage from Shanghai is to be about the sea, and not about the plagued border problems of the near entente.

In all these waters the sampan and the junk appeal most readily to the imagination. In the Pearl river alone, it is estimated, halt a million Chinese live exclusively upon their sampans and junks. They go fishing, they carry passengers from and to arriving and departing vessels, and they move light lags of freight. In a semi-tropic climate, the men, women, and babies go barefoot the winter long, and their costume otherwise is as simple and scanty as that of R. Crusoe's very good friend, Friday.

Assailed by Sampans.

When we arrived in Victoria harbor, off the Hongkong shore, our little ship was assailed by a fleet of sampans, small boats usually decked over and propelled either by a long sweep at the stern and auxiliary oars forward or by sails, or both.

In the growing darkness a flash of brilliant red at the stern of one of these approaching sampans attracted the attention. Coming closer, the mysterious thing of crimson could be discerned bobbing about in a most astonishing way. When the little craft swept gracefully alongside our ship it was revealed that the spot of crimson was a baby's jacket. The baby was snugly strapped to the back of a Chinese girl in black jacket and trousers.

Rock-a-Bye.

Back and forth, back and forth she pushed and pulled the long sweep with expert skill. What fun for a baby! Rock-a-bye in a tree top surely is tame compared to this tossing to and fro in the stern of a rakish sampan in Victoria bay. An ordinary cradle safer and warmer and better? Faugh This baby's almond eyes were shut tight, and he, or she, was as far away in bye-lo land as babies ever get.

Her small sister was wielding an oar at the prow, and it was this small sister, possibly 10 years old, who shipped her big oar at just the proper moment and dropped the sail, then stood by with a boat hook to make the sampan fast to the ship whereon might be passengers with coppers for a fare to shore.

A dozen other sampans followed, many of them with women and girls constituting the crews. Almost always there were babies, and in the midst of all the excitement the kids did as they pleased about the tippy decks. No rails to safeguard them against plunging into the bay. They didn't need anybody to read them of "Alice in Wonderland." They were there themselves.

Pirates Seize Boat.

We went to Canton from Hongkong by rail and returned by river steamer. The British boat on which we made the night trip had a festoon of barbed wire across the front of the pilot house. That was to deter pirates who might try to seize the vessel. It was explained that there had not been much trouble with pirates recently between Hongkong and Canton, but only the other day pirates did actually seize a British customs boat in Victoria bay.

River craft of the larger sort carry swivel guns forward and aft. Lying here and there on the route to Canton could be seen Chinese government vessels of small draught, with steam up and guns mounted ready to sail away at a moment's notice to protect ships from the brigands of the river.

Borderland of Banditry.

This is only the borderland of those isolated regions where bandits hold sway on land. We are going to Yunnan, a province whose governor, or viceroy, holds the Chinese government in small esteem.

In his province Dr. A. L. Shelton, Christian church medical missionary, was seized by bandits. When British, French, and American agents sought to intercede in Dr. Shelton's behalf they found that the bandit leader, one Yan, had no more respect for the viceroy of his province than the viceroy of the province of Yunnan has for the rest of the world.

It is like going out of the world to find an American—this expedition into the wilderness of Yunnan where, it is possible, few of the inhabitants ever heard of the United States of America.

EUROPE, SEEKING ART, COMES TO CHICAGO FOR IT

Local Talent Supplies Rotterdam Decorations

BY EYE WITNESS.

The town of Rotterdam, aged 700 years, is having done in the town of Chicago, aged 90 years, the mural decorations for the "marriage room" in its new city hall. The work is approaching completion in the ateliers of the Art institute.

School boys and girls in the town of Gary, Ind., are running errands for hire, selling setting eggs at 20 cents each, raising chickens, and pasturing goats, selling apples, and giving living picture shows that reproduce masterpieces—and all the money thus earned goes into a fund with which the children will purchase, through the Art institute, twelve paintings for the decoration of Gary's public schools. Art institute officials, curators, and lecturers are giving them every encouragement that advice and active direction can give.

Begins Series of Lectures.

On Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in Fullerton hall of the Art institute Joseph Pennell, most eminent of American etchers, began a course of six illustrated lectures on "The Graphic Arts as Practiced by Modern Men and Modern Methods," a series of discourses which, when given book form by the Art institute, as they will be, is not unlikely to take rank in the literature of modern art with Philip Gilbert Hamnierton's "The Graphic Arts."

The current Pennell series is the annual course in the scheme of the Scammon fund of $35,000 founded by Mrs. Scammon of Chicago sixteen years ago for six annual lectures by notable men on the history, theory, and practice of the fine arts. The text of the published lectures makes today a noble array of volumes constituting perhaps as significant a contribution as America has made to the literature of fine arts.

Enthusiasts Defy Blizzard.

On Monday morning the chatty citizen who runs the cigar store opposite the lion entrance of the Art institute, and who, with sapient comment, keeps his customers in touch with the pageant of the boulevard, remarked: "Say, did you know that 1,500 lunatics beat their way through the blizzard yesterday to see the pictures at the institute!"

So they did, though it was such brazen weather on the lake front that even the traffic police stationed along there had frequently to seek shelter.

When the 1,500 reached the palace they had a cozy time. This was their program for the afternoon and evening—nine full hours if they wanted to stay that long:

12:15 to 12:45 o'clock—Had luncheon at a moderate price in the institute restaurant—cafeteria or white tablecloth service, as desired.

Program fo Day.

12:45 to 3—Viewing the statues and pictures.

3 to 4—Concert by nine artists of the Chicago Symphony orchestra in Fullerton hall of the institute. Admission 10 cents. These concerts were founded ten years ago by the Chicago Woman's club to offset the movie mania. Today they are self-sustaining. On Storm Sunday 500 of the 1,500 visitors to the institute took in the concerts.

4:15 to 5:15—Another concert by same artists. Same admission.

5:15 to 6:30—Another go at the pictures, and the Innes room crowded.

6:30 to 7:15—Dinner in the institute restaurant.

7:15 to 9—More pictures.

Shows Its Functions.

That's how live a proposition the Art institute is! It doesn't exhibit merely; it functions—functions all the way from the lake front to Rotterdam and then back to Gary.

It is worth while indicating where that work which Chicago has in hand for the old Dutch commercial capital, which since 1870 has had a growth almost as phenomenal as Chicago's, is being done. Even if you are one of the 10,000 contributing members of the institute you probably have no notion of the immense extent of the working and producing department of this great foundation. One section of its ateliers and classrooms extends underground from Monroe street to Jackson voulevard. The corridor on which these rooms open is two blocks long. Stand at the Monroe street end of it and it seems to run to a pin point.

1,600 Students at Work.

Here work 1,600 students—800 by day, 800 at night. In some of the night classes you find $10,000 a year men—architectcs who have become students again in order to brush up on this or that special subject.

Nor is that all the working space. Architecture is housed in acres of attic.

It is in the chambers underground that the work for Rotterdam is being done by Hermann Rosse, the designer of the cartoons, and his students in the institute's department of decorative design, of which he is chief. Rosse also had a hand in the decoration of the Peace palace at The Hague, and last winter he did the scenes for one of the grand operas produced at the Auditorium.

His designs for the walls of the marriage room are in monotone, the treatment very simple, the themes very elemental—the meeting of the lovers, the betrothed standing at the threshold of the great experiment, the coming of the first child, and the coming of the grandchildren; only the themes that interest everybody and are apprehensible by everybody. In a way Rosse's work recalls the things, noble and simple, that John Aarts did for the great memorial edition of Vondel's "Lucifer."

TWO RAVING BEAUTIES

Sisters Argue Over Their Charms—A Stranger Enters—Then Their Parents—Then the Police.

JOSEPHINE AND THERESA DI FOINE.

RIOTOUS BEAUTY LANDS GIRL, TWO MOTHERS IN JAIL

Ladies Fight Over Looks; One Uses a Knife.

The sisters Di Foine, Josephine, 18, and Theresa, 17, en route last night to a soft drink bar near their home, 517 South Aberdeen street, entered into a discussion of feminine charm.

"You're very sweet and pretty," said Josephine, "but you know, darling, my hair is ever so much more beautiful than yours. Mamma said——"

Along Comes Antoinette.

"Yes, but honey, you know my eyes are ever so much nicer than yours," said Theresa, "and when I smile——"

Antoinette Litrento, 16 years old, 509 South Aberdeen street, paused on her way back from the soft drink bar, and listened, and glared.

"Huh!" she said. "I'm lovelier than both of you put together."

"What a long tail our cat has got!" said Josephine.

"And what a sour look!" said Theresa.

"You're jealous of me," said Antoinette. "You know I'm lots better looking than either of you. My ma told me so—and she ain't the only one, either."

The argument grew. So did a crowd. So did the noise. The disturbance attracted the attention of Mrs. Di Foine and of Mrs. Litrento. They rushed to the aid of their darlings and became oratorical.

"It is too true, my dear," said Mrs. Litrento. "Your beauty, my pet, is amazing. The girls of the Di Foines—there is no beauty in them. They are as th ecrows of the field in your presence."

"Just look at my daughters," said Mrs. Di Foine, and she directed her remarks not only to the other mother, but to the crowd as well.

"Look at them," again she said. "Are they not sweet? Are they not wonderful? Look at their pretty hair, and their eyes, and their noses, and their mouths. Look at their little ears, and their white teeth, and their fine hands and feet. Is there anything in a girl of the Litrento's that should make her vain?"

"Nothing but her looks and her complexion," said Mrs. Litrento. "And she's smart, too."

"Cat!"

"Frump!"

Now, here the crowd saw a distressing spectacle. Blows were struck. Hair, beautiful hair, was pulled. Not to say yanked. Beautiful nails cut dainty scratches in peach-blow cheeks and noses that were beautiful but only skin deep.

It Was Great for the Audience.

The crowd yelled with delight. Men shouted, "Go to it." Women shrieked. But the beauties and their mothers fought on; three on one side, two on the other. It looked like defeat for the Litrentos. Antionette dashed into her home for a knife. Mrs. Di Foine received a wound. The police came. All the disputants were put in the patrol wagon, beauties or not.

Ambulance Surgeon McElroy sewed up the cut in Mrs. Di Foine's head, using six stitches.

"Hold the two mothers," the lieutenant said, "and the girl who did the cutting."

"I don't care," said Antoinette. "I am the best looking, and the judge will tell the world so when he sees me Monday. Ma, where's my vanity case?"

NEVADA MAY ASK EXTRADITION OF MARY PICKFORD

—Reno, Nev., April 10.—[Special.]—Gov. Stephens of California will grant the extradition of Mary Pickford if the charges of "collusion and fraud" in obtaining of her Nevada divorce are proved, Gov. Boyle of Nevada stated today.

Attorney General Fowler has announced that next week he will institute proceedings at Minden, Douglas county, to set aside the divorce. Fowler, in making his charges, has avoided anything that might be construed as a reflection on Judge Frank P. Langan, who granted the divorce, and concedes that Judge Langan was "unusually thorough" in his examination of Miss Pickford and in seeking to discover any evidence of collusion.

Fowler's principal complaint appears to be that the principals had "entered into collusion" in establishing a residence in Nevada and that, whereas at first Miss Pickford said Owen Moore had "come to the state to look for a coal mine," she later said he was looking for a "gold mine."

JURY FINDS MRS. BROWN HAD TO KILL HUSBAND

Mrs. Jesse Brown of 410 East Forty-second street, who shot and killed her husband Thursday night in their home, was exonerated yesterday by a coroner's jury.

The jurors said it was their belief Mrs. Brown was justified.

The widow testified that her husband had come home with a "tall, thin stranger." She said Brown was intoxicated, that he beat her, and struck her with a bottle of ink, and took out a revolver which he placed on a table. A little later, she said, he threatened to kill her.

She didn't know what happend then, exactly, but supposes she pulled the trigger.

THE FINAL YUMP TUESDAY.

All that can be done in the way of getting an independent council to help our mayor has been done. What is necessary now is to clean up on the judges, bonds, and south park board. The opportunity for this is in Tuesday's election, and one of the Thompson leaders says that will be a cake walk.

We are prepared to find that it is so. If our mayor and Mr. Lundin elect enough members of the county committee they will control the nomination of judges for the 1921 election. Through the judges they will get the south park board and the control of its bonds and taxes. They have the police. They will get the courts.

If the county sticks to its Republican traditions the power of the county committee to nominate judges will be virtually the power to appoint judges, which means that Mr. Thompson and Mr. Lundin can make a list of the men they want to sit in the Circuit and Superior courts and the men will sit there.

When it is suggested that the courts would be better off if they had appointed judges, as the federal courts have, the friends of the people blow the horn so loudly in alarm that they nearly split the ears. Our mayor would regard this as the last villainy of the invisible government. But it can be explained to any reasonable man in a few minutes that it will be a good thing to have Mr. Thompson and Mr. Lundin appoint the judges. Any sensible citizen can see that this is the essence of freedom. We must protect the courts.

With regard to the bonds the city already has authorized the issuance of bonds virtually to its limitations. If the $84,500,000 asked for in this election are authorized they cannot be issued if the other bonds are issued. The voters may squander their authority as they please, but there is a check on the city.

Mr. Thompson and Mr. Lundin, if they get the additional authority, can select what bonds they want to issue, but aside from that the city is merely bringing its sanity into additional question by starting things it cannot finish.

If Mr. Thompson wants these additional bonds as a vote of confidence he probably will get it. But just as a matter of common sense all future bond issues should be defeated until it becomes legal to issue more bonds.

THE OUTLAW STRIKE.

The public is paying a heavy bill because some radical leaders of labor want to smash the regular organization of railroad employés and seize power for themselves.

That, we believe, is the situation in a nutshell; that is why the public will not support this strike; that is why the strike will fail and ought to fail.

We do not say the striking men have no grievance. We think it may be shown that the trainmen and switchmen have claims to higher pay. But their regular leaders of the Brotherhood and Switchmen's union were doing all that could be done and can be done toward getting more pay. They understood the situation. They know that time was necessary to overcome the difficulties. They knew a strike would not remove these difficulties, but only add to them.

The strikers have played into the hands of the radicals and weakened not only the leadership which has kept railroad labor at the head of the labor movement in America, improving its conditions steadily through years. They have also weakened their own cause, by following leaders into a defiance of the public's interests and safety.

This strike will fail because it represents rebellion against responsible organization among railroad employés. The success of such rebellion would mean perpetual conflict in railroad operation, and this the country will not tolerate. Continuous, efficient, safe operation of the railroads is essential to the economic life and social well being of the American people and they will not permit chaos to reign in place of order and responsibility. If necessary the full power of government and people will be exerted to enforce them.

SAVE NOW OR SUFFER LATER.

The farmers of the country warn us that, despite every effort they can make, the production of food, cotton, wool, hides, and other essentials this year will be reduced by lack of labor. Manufacturers warn us that costs of fuel, labor, raw materials, and taxes will keep down production. The railroads warn us that with present rates and equipment they cannot carry the load. So astute a financier as Frank A. Vanderlip warns us that the country is in the midst of an era of false prosperity, and unless vital changes are made in the industrial situation an explosion is due.

No careful citizen can afford to ignore the warnings. It is not within the province or power of the ordinary man or woman to solve the entire economic problem, but it is clearly within not only the power but the duty of each individual to guard himself and his dependents from the threatened crash.

The situation has come to its present pass largely because of extravagance. To be sure, there are thousands of men and women who are struggling valiantly merely to live. But there are more thousands who are inclined to believe that because they are taking in twice as many dollars they should spend twice as many.

The price of sealskins is reported to have increased 30 per cent wholesale since last October. That is because there is a demand for sealskins where sheepskins might do. If the present period of high spending and low productivity continues sealskins will be in less demand. We can imagine ourselves offering a sealskin to our grocer in exchange for a ham, a sack of flour, and a can of tomatoes, and being greeted with raucous laughter. If, on the other hand, we offer the cash, we know we will get what we need. The reasoning applies to numberless luxuries and to many necessities.

THE WORLD SCENE.

The French last week crossed the Rhine and occupied Frankfort, Darmstadt, Hanau, and a comfortable slice of good German soil.

Of course, we are told, the occupation is temporary. We are confident of that at least. We are also told the expenses of the enterprise will be charged to Germany. The bill against Germany drawn at Versailles was already so long that no living German could hope to see the last of it. And now another item is handed her on the tip of a French bayonet.

The French all along the Rhine. The French in the Saar. The French in Frankfort. A mountain of debt on the German burger and the German peasant and means to pay it dwindling month by month.

There remain seventy million Germans with their backs against the wall, a nation accustomed to unequaled unity of effort, master of scientific method, disciplined by disaster and desperation. Prussia grew mighty in adversity. She fell through arrogant prosperity.

Is world peace perching on the advancing French standards?

Over Fiume fly the colors of Italy. The Adriatic is an Italian lake. Behind the mountain barriers, barred from the world thoroughfares by Italian arms, live a people in whose soul burns a fire unquenched by centuries of oppression, united at last to race kindred, inspired by new hopes and new hatred. For generations the Balkan peninsula has been the powder magazine of Europe. German and Austrian and Russian have played their costly game at the expense of the Balkan peoples. Italy now enters as they for a moment retire.

Is world peace brooding over this smoldering scene?

At Constantinople the Turk holds his footing in Europe, and the key of European policies for nearly a century. England and France, the allies, face each other over the richest spoils of the war. The old conflict of imperial interests which saved Abdul Hamid from the executioner remains. The sick man of Europe is not dead. The poison of the sick room still hangs in the air.

Is peace at the bedside?

The Poles in Danzig and in Vilna with a new army of a million men, the Japanese in Vladivostok and Shantung, do they carry peace in the folds of their banners?

Look over Europe, over the Balkans, over the near east and the far, and you will find everywhere the same forces contending. France is now the aggressor on the Rhine. In place of the Austrian empire, nationalities with age old dreams and age old rivalries are released for intrigue and conflict. The Balkan powder magazine remains. Another has sprung up on the ruins of Austrian power. Poland, Finland, the states fallen away from old Russia, the new Russia, Ukrainia, Czecho-Slovakia, Hungary, Roumania, the new Serbia, Bulgaria, Greece, Italy, Turkey—what was the old Balkan tangle to this maze of passionate ambitions and animosities? And in the far east the same problem, with little change in the pieces or the players, the same game and the same huge prize.

We dreamed that the destruction of the German militarist menace and the abolition of Hapsburg plotting would bring a new world—a world chastened by peril and suffering, enlightened by the fate of Prussian arrogance and weltmacht. Conquest was to give way to justice, might to law, national and imperial ambition to amity and a family of friendly peoples. Look at the map of the world and you will find no change in the principles on which its lines are drawn. Millions still live under alien yokes. The sword and torch still claim their victims. The tentacles of wide spreading imperial designs still crawl and cling across the world. The spirit of mankind remains in essence what it has been since history began.

We do not say mankind is not going forward. We do say its advance is discernible only to the eyes of an inextinguishable hope. If we could not hope we should not live. But certainly we shall not go forward by turning our backs upon the realities and the nation that does so, as ours is inclined to do, prepares for itself only disillusionment and disaster. To work for better things is essential, but to work blindly is folly.

Editorial of the Day

SOUTH AFRICA'S MAYFLOWER.

[Detroit Free Press.]

It is somewhat of a coincidence that while we are celebrating this year the four hundredth anniversary of the arrival of the Mayflower in America, the South Africans are preparing to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the arrival in their land of the first group of British immigrants, the date being April 10, 1820.

It was to better their condition that these people sought South Africa, and they were assisted in their emigration by the British government, which sought to relieve the lack of employment at home and the economic distress following the Napoleonic wars, and to increase the white population along the eastern frontier of Cape Colony. The expedition, consisting of 2,487 persons, set sail from Liverpool, Bristol, and Cork in twenty-six chartered transports in December, 1819, and, after a four months' passage, the first of these vessels, the Chapman, dropped anchor in Algoa bay, Cape Colony, on April 10, 1820.

From this small nucleus sprang the English speaking population of South Africa, which, as Gen. Smuts puts it, has become an equal state in the family of nations. Britons and Boers are uniting in celebrating the historic event, and at a meeting held in Bloemfontein the sum of $750,000 was pledged for a memorial building in which all the relics of the early settlers that can be found will be exhibited; for a hospital to be named the Settlers' hospital; for Settler scholarships, and for the furtherance of immigration.

The history of the hundred years has been a bloody one, but now that the people have been mainly instrumental in driving their last enemy, Germany, out of Africa, they are looking forward to a long period of peace in which they may develop their resources.

THE REAL REVENUE QUESTION.

[Illinois State Journal.]

Congressional committees having to do with revenue questions have under consideration numerous tax levying proposals from the treasury department. They are endeavoring to find some means of allaying the irritation created by inquisitorial and burdensome measures now in force.

None of the proposals yet submitted reaches the real revenue question. The public is irritated not so much by the nature of the taxes it is called on to pay as by the fact that wartime expenditures of the government persist when there is no war.

If Washington has any desire to relieve taxpayers it will cut down government expenses instead of endeavoring to invent painless methods of performing major operations on their wage envelopes and savings accounts.

TO AN OLD CEDAR.

Thou strong old cedar, dwelling by the sea,
Grasping the rocks with roots of living steel,
Thy body gnarled and twisted by the reel
Of countless mighty winds, thou seem'st to me
Brother to Ocean or Eternity—
Perchance an ancient mariner whose keel,
Storm-driven, split, and tossed thy store of weal
Where thou dost guard it still, triumphantly.
With arms outstretched unto the crested tide,
What hope is thine? Some distant shore serene?
Or like Ulysses dost thou yearn for strife
More glorious, in regions now denied?
For still thou dost remember to be green
And still dost venerate the stress of life.

Upon being asked what his trade was, he mumbled something about being a prohibitionist. So far they have identified one of his rubber heels.

SALT AND BLOOD PRESSURE.

ONCE upon a time a surgeon in the United States navy wrote against the prevailing use of salt in food. He said sailors rarely died of apoplexy, and the reason was that they always drank distilled water while at sea. The argument was that a continuous diet of food over rich in minerals caused a mineral saturation with deposit of mineral salts in the walls of large arteries, thus inducing apoplexy.

There is a very considerable group of scientific medical men who hold that high blood pressure results from eating too much salt. The men of this school treat high blood pressure with diets very low in salt. When this has been done by skilful men, equipped with plenty of laboratory help, and practicing on patients under complete control, a high degree of success has been attained.

The blood pressure has been brought down, the danger of apoplexy has been reduced to a minimum, all dizziness and other symptoms of high blood pressure have been stopped, albumin has disappeared from the urine and albuminuric retinitis and glaucoma has come under control.

Another group of men give about as good results from putting their patients on a fruit-vegetable diet. Frederick M. Allen, who writes on this subject in the Journal of the American Medical Association, says that the restrictions on eating and activity necessary for success with either method are so great that many prefer to take their chances with the disease. Likewise, he calls attention to a possible danger from a sudden withdrawal of salt. A man who has been accustomed to eating too much meat and salt cannot suddenly stop salt without danger. He needs some of it to help flush out his tissues and to stimulate his kidneys.

The people with high blood pressure, dizziness, disposition to apoplexy, albuminuria, retinitis and glaucoma will have a difficult time deciding between these two proposals. In the meantime the average man can get this much out of the discussion. We eat too much salt, just as we eat too much sugar, pepper, spices and other condiments. The amount of salt taken in food and drink should not exceed 30 grains a day. Meat, milk, in fact, most foods, contain a fair proportion of salt. To this we add as taste allows.

There is no question that we habitually overdo the salting of food, and in consequence most of us habitually overstep the 30 grains a day allowance. The taste is trained to demand more than the proper and normal allowance. Some of this piles up in the tissue, and some serves to overstimulate the kidneys. Habitually to overstimulate the kidneys with salt is just as bad as habitually to overstimulate the bowels with epsom salts. The excess of salt stored in the tissues causes a storing up in the tissues of more water than is good for them. Cannibals are said to dislike the flesh of meat eaters because it is too salty.

REDUCING FAT ABDOMEN.

L. S. writes: "1. Can you advise me what kind of exercise to take to reduce surplus flesh around the abdomen? The other parts of my body are solid, but I have an outstanding abdomen which does not agree with me.

"2. I am 19½ years old and weigh 170 pounds, height 5 feet 7½ inches. Is this the proper weight for my age and height?

"3. Can you also state what kinds of foods are not fattening?"

REPLY.

1. Lie on your back on a hard surface. (a) Have your feet higher than your head. Raise your feet until your legs are perpendicular. (b) Catch your toes under something and raise your body to the upright or perpendicular position. Both exercises will help you.
2. You are 28 pounds over weight.
3. Watery vegetables, fruit, and meats.

THERE IS CHRONIC DIABETES.

G. D. E. writes: "I should be pleased if you would tell me whether there is such a disease as chronic diabetes and, if so, can it be cured?"

REPLY.

There is such a disease as chronic diabetes. A great many people have it. It is curable, which, however, does not mean that every one with diabetes can be cured. The cure consists in intelligently following a prescribed diet.

EAT, SLEEP, QUIT WORRYING.

A. writes: "1. As I am thin, I would like to know if you could tell me how I can gain in weight.

"2. I have rather a bony neck and would like to know if massaging it with olive oil would help fill it out."

REPLY.

1. In addition to your regular meals eat a sugared cereal with cream. Supper just before retiring helps. Sleep nine hours at night. Do not worry.
2. No.

American Legion to Decorate Graves.

The American Legion is planning to raise sufficient funds to decorate the grave of every American soldier, sailor, or marine who is buried in Europe on this coming Decoration day. The national headquarters expects to ask each post to remit five dollars toward financing these decorations. There is nothing, however, to prevent the public from contributing to the fund. Remittances should be in the office of the national headquarters not later than April 24.

STATE BONUS LIST.

Chicago, April 7.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Some time ago you printed in your column a list of all the states and what each one was or was not doing toward bonus or any other kind of award to their soldiers, sailors, and marines who were in the late war. I cannot find this list. Please tell me in what issue of THE TRIBUNE it appeared.
R. P.

This list appeared in the March 15 issue.

NO MISSOURI BONUS.

Chicago, April 6.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Will you kindly advise if the state of Missouri is giving a bonus to men from that state who served in the war? Or, if not, is there any movement on foot toward the enactment of a bonus law? I was with the A. E. F. in France, and am therefore interested.
E. C. G.

Missouri plans to erect a suitable memorial in honor of its men who entered the service, but it has passed no bonus bill.

TEMPORARY PARTIAL DISABILITY.

Chicago, April 6.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I have just been awarded compensation for partial disability to the amount of $8.00 per month, under the act of Oct. 6, 1917.

How is this award affected by the Sweet bill, which was recently passed?
W. A. T.

You have apparently been given ten per cent disability under the Sweet Bill scale of awards. Awards of compensation for men who were temporarily and partially disabled, are made on a sliding scale using the amounts payable for temporary total disability and total permanent disability as a basis.

FEE FOR O. G. W.

Chicago, Ill.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I have seen a couple of times in your paper where you have the "American Officers of the Great War" booklets. I would like to know what the entrance fee is to this organization. It is only for officers, isn't it? Have they no headquarters here in the city? A. S. O.

The present fee exacted is $5, which covers the cost of the gold emblem.

No headquarters has been established in Chicago. The ex-officer in charge of this organization in Chicago is C. B. Johnson, First National Bank building, or phone Randolph 7440.

REQUIREMENTS FOR MARINE CORPS.

Chicago, April 5.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I have been hearing a great deal about the marine corps from two men around here who were marines. I would like to know what the height and weight and other general requirements are for entrance. What are the periods of enlistment? D. E.

The latest booklet prepared by the marine corps makes the following statement about the kind of men wanted for their organization. To enlist in the marine corps an applicant must not be less than 5 feet 4 inches nor more than 6 feet 2 inches in height; weigh not less than 128 pounds nor more than 240 pounds; not less than 18 years of age nor more than 40, for enlistment as a private; able to read and speak and write English; native born or naturalized citizen of the United States; steady and regular habits; no one wholly dependent on him for support; of good health and strongly built, and not given to the use of liquor or drugs.

Enlistments at present are for two, three, or four years.

Apply for more detailed information to the U. S. Marine Recruiting office, 454 South State street, Chicago, Ill.

No attention will be given to anonymous letters. To insure a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

VACATION FARM WORKERS.

Chicago, April 8.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Can you tell me how I may get work on a farm? I am a boy of 18 years and was never on a farm, and I would like to try working on a farm.
G. K.

There are several ways by which you may find an opportunity to work on a farm. First, if you have any relatives living in the country, write to them and ask them whether or not they can help to place you in their neighborhood; secondly, if your people came to the city from the country, no doubt they will remember some of the prominent families living in their locality, any one of whom might be able to assist you in finding employment on a farm. I suggest these two ways first, because through these avenues you would have some people personally interested in your behalf assisting you in getting a proper location. Thirdly, if it should be that neither of these cases are true in regard to your family, possibly you can through a neighbor in your present neighborhood get into communication with some rural people, and through them find an opportunity to get into the country. These are the best methods that I can recommend to you. There is still one more way that could be pursued. At the Illinois Employment bureau, 116 North Dearborn street, calls are sometimes received for farm help, as well as for shops or factories, and if possible, I would advise you to call at that office and let them do what they can for you, as they are organized for this general service. The board of education is not at the present time conducting any campaign looking forward to placing boys on farms, and so we have no places awaiting at the present time. I will keep your name on file, and should a request come in for help from some farming section, will be glad to refer them to you.
DUDLEY GRANT HAYS,
Director Extension Division Board of Education.

OBJECTS TO FACTORY.

Chicago, April 8.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I wrote you several months ago in regard to vacant property located next to my house at Sheffield avenue, near Center, and have since watched your column for a reply, but in vain. My tenants are threatening to move because of the noise and dust created by the concrete mixer which is used by the company that occupies the vacant property next to mine. Can this noise and cement dust be classed as a nuisance and insanitary condition? They also have over 800 square feet of sheds located so that it is a menace in case of fire. Are they allowed so much shedding? E. M.

Regarding the complaint of noise and dust from the manufacturing plant at 2036 Sheffield avenue, I wish to advise you that on Dec. 26 a notice was issued by this department to abate this nuisance.

Several inspections of the premises have been made during the winter months, but very little nuisance was observed. A recent inspection, however, shows that the work is being carried on, causing a nuisance to the tenants of adjoining premises.

The owners of this property have been advised that unless all nuisance is abated at once, suit action will be taken.
JOHN DILL ROBERTSON,
Commissioner of Health.

WHY CAST SUCH PEARLS BEFORE SWINE!

Vincennes, Ind., April 5.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Anent farmhands. All the farmhands have to do is to get up at 4 a. m., curry six span of horses and the family mule, milk eighteen cows and do the chores. Then we plow all day and after sundown bed down the stock by a thirty-two kilowatt lantern. Sunday is our off day and we are permitted to sleep right through till 5 a. m. We get $40 a month.

The farmers egg their sons on to go to Akron and Detroit and get the big wages while the picking is good. They are themselves to blame for the reputed labor shortage. Who wants to stay back in the brush away from the edifying shimmy and ennobling movies when his reward is to be made the object of derision by sophisticated city slickers?

But of course only being a farmhand with a number of years' experience, I don't know as much about it as editorial writers nor the toy rustics who head the so-called farmers' combines.
EX-FARMHAND.

PRACTICAL EDUCATION.

St. Louis, Mo., April 6.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I notice that you have advised the public of Chicago not to buy THE TRIBUNE, but to borrow from others when possible, and this suggestion is made in order to save paper.

Being a member of the board of education of St. Louis, through my efforts, the collection of waste paper by the pupils of the St. Louis public schools was inaugurated for the benefit of the St. Louis Teachers' Annuity association. The success has been extremely gratifying.

The procedure has been to request the pupils of the several public schools of St. Louis to save their papers at home and bring them to the schools twice a week, at which time the Annuity association calls for and collects them. It was thought it would be instructive to the public school pupils in the way of thrift and it has proven successful in this way.
STEPHEN M. WAGNER.

SOMEONE SEEMS TO BE WRONG.

Chicago, April 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In discussing the League of Nations covenant before the Irish Fellowship club on the 17th of March, 1920, the Chicago papers quoted Judge Marcus Kavanagh as saying:

"Some years ago Japan bought 500,000 acres about Magdalena bay and never grew a blade of grass on these acres, but its whole navy can ride in the bay. The United States has held it would be an unfriendly act for any foreign power to purchase a naval base on these shores; but Japan has the base."

The secretary of state, Washington, D. C., writes under date of March 29, 1920: "According to the department's information no such purchase of land at Magdalena Bay has been made by Japan. The department's information indicates that Japan has no naval base at Magdalena."
E. C. B.

AN IDEA FROM ANTIGO.

Antigo, Wis., April 7.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—This print paper shortage has certainly caused our old friend THE TRIBUNE to show a remarkable shrinkage from its former greatness. The editions we get here at Antigo are only about half the paper we used to get. Now I am not familiar with the paper manufacturing business, but I have heard that paper can be made from old newspapers and magazines.

If THE TRIBUNE could collect back practically all its old papers after they were read, it would seem that only a very small amount of additional pulp timber would be necessary to keep up the supply of print paper.

My idea is, for THE TRIBUNE to raise its prices, say 50 per cent, and authorize its various news agents and dealers to give a rebate down to the present price to any one who returned his old papers. In a town like Antigo the local news agent could store the papers until he had a carload and then ship it to your paper mill. In Chicago you could rent a few cheap store buildings in various parts of the city, and have the papers collected there, and also have light trucks to pick them up from families when they had accumulated a reasonable amount. I realize, of course, that a lot of transients and careless people would still throw their papers away. Let them pay the high price as a penalty for their extravagance.
C. L. QUINLAN.

MASHING.

Chicago, April 9.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The conduct of the men in the loop is positively disgraceful. Of course there are some girls who enjoy being looked at and talked at, but the majority of girls go on about their business quietly, without even thinking of the other pedestrians. There is nothing so humiliating and maddening to this type of girl as to have a man brush past her with a "Hello, cutie," half under his breath right in her ear. They just simply can't resist the brutish temptation to say something insulting to every girl they pass.

How can a girl protect herself from this outrage? She can't run after a policeman and carry the case to court on the grounds that the man insulted her. No one would believe her, for no one else knows what he did. Besides, there isn't one girl in 500 who would expose herself to the publicity this would entail, or who has the time. Isn't it possible for the men to cultivate some sense of honor about women, to treat them as they would want their mothers and sisters treated? X. Y. Z.

FOR AMERICA FIRST.

Chicago, Ill., April 8.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—You will probably have a flood of letters condemning you for your editorial in today's TRIBUNE on "The Embassy Picketers," for the kickers are usually the first or the only ones to express themselves. But I want to heartily commend you for it. It is high time that some one of our great dailies could get the really American angle of things and say just what you have said. Your editorial is both sane and timely. Let hyphenated American go where they belong, whether to Ireland or otherwheres, and take the chance of getting their skulls cracked, instead of "shooting off their mouths" here, where they think they are perfectly safe.
THOMAS LEGGETT.

CONCERNING M'ADOO'S IDEAS.

Decatur, Ill., April 6.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—William G. McAdoo's plan of uninstructed delegates deprives nearly all of the voting population of a state the right to say who they prefer to see nominated as presidential candidate. I prefer the open methods of Johnson, Wood, and Lowden. They present their side of the case to the people for their consideration, and the people instruct accordingly. No doubt Mr. McAdoo has some reason satisfactorily to himself for the stand he has taken, but I prefer the open ballot. Enlighten the people, no matter what the cost.
WILLIAM H. MURRAY.

HE'S AGIN SOMEBODY.

St. Louis, Mo., April 7.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—THE TRIBUNE refers us to "Who's Who" for a complete record of Hoover, and a great record it is. However, this is in no way a eulogy of THE TRIBUNE—it is big business through and through—and they are backing "Big Business" Lowden, the man who in Washington voted against practically every progressive measure. This is the little angel that is going to look after the interests of the "dear public," too—THE TRIBUNE would have you know.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago bookstore were:

FICTION.

"This Side of Paradise" [Scribner], by W. Scott Fitzgerald.
"Miss Lulu Bett" [Appleton], by Zona Gale.
"Treacherous Ground" [Moffat-Yard], by Johan Bojer.
"Where Angels Fear to Tread" [Knopf], by E. M. Foster.
"Tatterdemalion" [Scribner], by John Galsworthy.
"Anderson Crow, Detective" [Dodd-Mead], by George Barr McCutcheon, with illustrations by our own John T. McCutcheon.

NONFICTION.

"The Inside Story of the Peace Conference" [Harper], by Dr. E. J. Dillon.
"Abraham Lincoln" [Holt], by Lord Charnwood.
"Revolutionary Days" [Small-Maynard], by Princess Cantacuzena.

THE American Library association is engaged in the collection of a fund of $2,000,000 to carry on its enlarged program. The slogan, "Books for Soldiers," has been changed to "Books for Everybody." The fund will be used in the furthering of the work of local libraries in educating foreign born citizens, adults whose education has been hampered by too early work, in promoting the use of books as tools in vocations, professions, and business, in maintaining libraries on all the vessels of the merchant marine, in distributing more and better books to the blind, and in providing library facilities to the 60,000,000 rural residents of the United States who are now without them. Carl Roden, the librarian of the public library, is regional director for seven states in an appeal for funds. It is not a drive, and no one will stop you in Michigan avenue and pin a tag on you if you subscribe, but you may send Mr. Roden a check for any amount you can spare and know that you are building yourself a little monument of books.

Sir John Fisher's "Memories and Records" is the most naïve autobiography that was ever written. It is a flapper's diary written by a man whose "beaux" were such men as King Edward and Lord Nelson, and whose thrilling moments were the breathless seconds of history, but whose attitude toward life is still the attitude of the Young Thing Rather Pleased with Itself. For that reason it is also the most amusing autobiography ever written. Scraps of information all tied with pink and baby blue ribbons are shared with the reader in exactly the same romantic spirit in which the Young Thing shares its confidential memories of its first kiss or its first [illegible]. And it makes a wholly delightful book. Lord Fisher talks like a blood brother of Senator Beveridge—who is the most accomplished man in America in the gentle art of blasphemy—and an English cousin of George Ade, who makes pictures slang with an international patent. He says what he thinks in exactly the way he thinks it, not as he thinks it should be thought. He says that his book is not an autobiography "but a collection of memories of a lifelong war against limpets, parasites, sycophants, and jellyfish—at one time finding himself a great man—who entered the navy "penniless, friendless, and forlorn"—is a joy. His devotion to his heroes, Lord Nelson and King Edward VII., is frank and amusing. The most haphazard book that any one ever signed his name to. "Memories and Records"—two separate volumes—is one of the most delightful.

"Basil Everman" is the story of the influence of a genius, dead twenty years, almost forgotten, upon a little community and most intensely upon the lives of his sister, his nephew, and the girl whom his sister suspects is his child. It is an unusual plot, carefully, if not brilliantly, expounded by Elsie Singmaster. It has that rather superficial quality which is the characteristic of the countless novels which stop just this side of genius, but which are far above the average novel in conception and exposition. In other words, the story's the thing. The reader feels that he has read a good story. He tells his friends about it. It becomes a best seller. Even the cognoscenti talk about it because it isn't trite. But, somehow, the vital spark isn't there. And in a year or two its candle-flame has melted into the grayness of the past.

Here are some financial statistics from the Houghton-Mifflin company which are, according to official statements, absolutely correct. They are certainly interesting. One of their books of nonfiction on the fall lists netted its author over $22,000 in its first three months. And that is for the book sales alone, not for serial rights. The Houghton-Mifflin company also announces that 21 per cent of the receipts from the sales of its last year's books has been paid out in royalties and that the authors have made nearly 18 per cent more out of these books than the publishers themselves—even without deducting from the publisher's profits the customary overhead.

The death of Lady Burne-Jones, the wife of the distinguished painter and the aunt of Rudyard Kipling, reminds one of the connection between Rudyard Kipling and the little group of artists and writers who were pioneers in England's artistic life of the last generation. Kipling and the dreamers and the poet symbolists of the pre-Raphaelite school seem to have little in common, yet in a measure the virile poet was affected by the gospel of the group in which his aunt and uncle were the leading figures, the gospel of the simplicity of style ruthlessly shorn of conventionalities, unessentials, and affectations of adornment.

Mrs. Reginald De Koven's "A Cloud of Witnesses," so long and so eagerly awaited by those who knew Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor in her lifetime, has finally arrived. It is the record of communications from her to her sister, through a medium, through the ouija board, and once in direct manifestation when Mrs. De Koven felt her hand guiding a piece of chalk with which a message was written. Granted the sincerity of Mrs. De Koven, the messages which she received from her sister—except the description of life after death—are completely bootless. They were concerned with the most unimportant trivialities, recollections of childhood fancies, slight messages about the sale of property, or family traditions. The description of life after death and the assurances that her sister is happy are evidently important enough to Mrs. De Koven to warrant her sharing them with the world as proof of the survival of being. In the after life, according to Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor's communications to her sister, "we are really very happy because it is so peaceful. No social amenities to speak of; no social enemies at all. My garments envelop me with a richness becoming and lasting, yet ever changing colors and perfumes pervade their enveloping folds." "Are they white flowing garments?" asked Mrs. De Koven. "Yes, yet not severe; swinging folds like chiffon, not as severe as the classic Greek lines." When asked what she did for companionship Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor said: "I enjoy the fleeting moments with my brother, the long talks with my mother, the records of my father's peregrinations, all these. Then I have the privilege of watching the tapestry weavers and the lace makers." Mrs. De Koven, always joyful in the beauty of her famed sister, was comforted by the assurance that, though departed, spirits do not retain their earthly forms—though they may assume them at will—their faces remain unchanged. In an introduction Prof. Hyslop, president of the Society for Psychical Research, vouches for the authenticity of the communications.

Stephen Leacock's "The Unsolved Riddle of Social Justice" [John Lane] is a sane, normal discussion of the great unrest by a man whose serious writing and humor are alike unrivaled. This is not a book of humor, though it has an undercurrent of tolerance which is the especial gift of the thinker with a sense of humor.

The 1918-'19 volume of Georgian poetry has just come over from England. That yearly anthology is representative of the finest poetry being written by English poets today, especially by the members of the younger group. This volume is dedicated to Thomas Hardy.

Every tragedian wants to be a comedian, it is said, and in the heart of every farceur is the gnawing ambition to play Hamlet. The same yearning to try his luck in another field urges authors into playwrighting and illustrating and allied arts. After writing sixty novels, most of which have been best sellers, and with "The Great Impersonation" [Little-Brown] jumping in sales into the class of postage stamps, E. Phillips Oppenheim waves his hand in deprecation and proudly says: "Look, see what I have done. I have actually written a successful farce and the public is paying good money to look upon it." Behold "The Eclipse"—the effulgence of which for him has overshadowed the former glories of his fifty-four years.

"The Russian Pendulum" [Macmillan], by Arthur Bullard, is another serious and sincere book which is in sympathy with the revolution in Russia, but Mr. Bullard presents bolshevism as something peculiarly and intensely Russian, a system, a theory of ethics, which belongs, not in the world, but only in Russia. It is less personal than Arthur Ransome's "Russia in 1919" [Huebsch], but fundamentally in accord with it.

Booth Tarkington wrote, as an inscription in "Ramsay Milholland": "This seemed to me to be the 'average young fellow' I saw turning into a soldier in Indiana in 1917—the boy who 'got in' at the first. Perhaps I was too anxious not to let it be seen how much I felt about him, for I find that many readers think I meant to be 'funny.'" Which reminds me of one of the jolliest inscriptions I ever had in a book. Hugh Walpole was kind enough to be willing to put his name into one of his books for me. Instead of the one that I might choose I suggested that he send me his favorite one. To my surprise it was 'The Green Mirror,' and he had written in it: 'To Miss Fanny Butcher: This his favorite book, though he's damned if he doesn't write a better one. Hugh Walpole.' And in the corner: 'Glad to know I'm neither squint eyed nor pedagogical.' Authors' inscriptions would make a subject for a charming essay some time. Some of them are really echoes of the personality of the author, but most of them are solemn affairs."

Dr. and Mrs. Wilfrid P. Grenfell have returned to this country after a winter spent in England. Dr. Grenfell's "A Labrador Doctor" has been on the best selling list of nonfiction practically continuously since its appearance. Mrs. Grenfell's "Le Petit Nord," the record of her reactions to the great white north and its perils and possibilities, came from the presses just as she and her husband arrived in America.

"A Short History of Belgium," by Leon Van der Essen, published by the University of Chicago press, is a book of real value to the student as well as to the layman who desires information about that small country which came so close to the eyes of the world that it filled the world's horizon for a while. Another volume on the spring lists of the University of Chicago press which is of immediate interest, especially with John Maynard Keynes' "Economic Consequences of the World Peace" [Harcourt] and William J. Dillon's "The Inside Story of the Peace Conference" [Harper's], is Arthur Pearson Scott's "Introduction to the Peace Treaties."

RAPP CLERK OF DRAINAGE BOARD BY COURT ORDER

Sergel Beaten on Votes on His Vetoes.

President Sergel of the Sanitary district was checkmated on every move he attempted to make yesterday at a meeting of the trustees. Every ruling he made was defeated, 5 to 4, by his opponents, and they had no difficulty in putting through any motion they pleased.

The chorused shoutings of the rivals for the clerkship; Lawrence F. King, and Leland S. Rapp, which featured the meeting of Friday, did not reoccur, as the majority had taken the precaution to obtain an injunction prohibiting King from acting as clerk. President Sergel read the injunction before proceeding with the meeting but made no comment at the time.

Sergel Reads Veto.

The president opened the meeting by reading his veto on four principal resolutions passed by the board at a previous meeting. They included an ordinance making the membership of each committee nine instead of five; the approving of Rapp's bonds; the appointment of Walter G. Davis as real estate agent, and an order giving Rapp power to endorse drafts on the treasury.

Trustee Clark, in the case of each veto, offered a resolution moving that action be deferred to the next meeting. Each time President Sergel ruled the motion out of order. Each time Trustee Clark appealed from the decision of the chair. Each time the chair's decision was overruled by the vote of 5 to 4 and each time the motion carried by 5 to 4.

The majority then proceeded to move the reinstatement of a number of former employes who had been ousted by the Sergel faction. The same procedure was gone through as obtained in the veto fight. Two engineers' reports were adopted and the board adjourned.

Sergel Tells Stand.

"Judge Sullivan may have been right and he may have been wrong," Mr. Sergel said, speaking of the injunction proceedings, after the meeting. "He issued the injunction without hearing Mr. King, however. It is a grave situation and Mr. King is going to fight it. It is not up to me."

During the meeting some aspersions on Mr. Sergel's right to office were cast by Trustees Paullin and Clark, who held that James Dailey was the duly elected president of the board, only prevented from holding office in that he was not elected a trustee as well as president.

To these innuendoes President Sergel contented himself with the reply that the charges were "merely subterfuge." Trustee James H. Lawley, a Sergel man, asserted that the president held office by virtue of the statutes, which order that one president shall hold office until another succeeds him.

DREAMS OVER

Bride of Ten Days Whose "Rich" Husband Is Held as Bad Check Passer.

MRS. JACKSON H. PEYTON.

Jackson H. Peyton, one time aviator, was thrust into a cell at the detective bureau last night and disillusionment came to his bride of ten days, who was Louise Treeweek of 1251 North La Salle street, cashier in a restaurant at 104 South Wabash avenue.

Peyton came to Chicago March 7, claiming to be a representative of the Legal Directory Publishing company of St. Louis. On March 8 he met the cashier. He told her he had $10,000 in the bank and a salary of $10,000 a year. He said his people in New York were wealthy. Against the advice of friends she consented to be married to him. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. John Timothy Stone on April 1.

Peyton bought his wife lots of pretty things, paying by check; took a suite in the Palmer house, and talked of a honeymoon trip.

Detectives Carton and McFarland took him from the Palmer house, telling the bride he had been passing bogus checks. Peyton said it was "all a mistake."

"I'll stick with you, Jackson," she said. "But if I find you are a thief, I'm done with you."

PLAN PARLEY ON HI COST MONEY TO AID UTILITIES

$100,000,000 Improvements Are Held Up.

Efforts to resume work on public utility improvements in Illinois, aggregating more than $100,000,000, are expected to be made at a joint meeting of banking, public utility, and business interests to be called soon by the public utilities commission.

This announcement was made last night by James H. Wilkerson, chairman of the commission. He issued a statement yesterday afternoon declaring public utility corporations will be unable to handle additional business required by the growth of the state unless there is a reduction of interest rates demanded on bonds through which money for the improvements must come.

Mr. Wilkerson's statement followed a request made to the commission by B. E. Sunny, president of the Chicago Telephone company, for permission to withdraw the company's petition asking for authorization to issue 7 per cent notes to the amount of $10,000,000 for contemplated improvements.

Offered Money at 9 Per Cent.

Mr. Sunny explained that the company had offered notes to the banks which were to bear 7 per cent interest and which were to be secured by 5 per cent bonds at 85 per cent of par. These notes were to be payable Dec. 1, 1923.

Bids were received from a number of Chicago banks which asked 9 per cent annual interest. Mr. Sunny explained that the rate was prohibitive. Unless cheaper rates are available, all new work will have to be abandoned, he said.

"That seems to be the case throughout Illinois," Mr. Wilkerson declared. "The situation has reached a serious point and relief from it must come soon or the traction lines, telephone, electric light, gas, and other utilities will be reduced to the same condition the railroads found themselves in after the war."

Halts 300 Steel Cars.

Three hundred new cars ordered into the service of the Chicago Surface lines by the commission will not be forthcoming because of high money, Mr. Wilkerson stated. He said the street car company has complained that they are unable to purchase the cars because the best rates offered by the banking interests have been on a basis of 65 cents on the dollar.

The plants of the telephone companies downstate and in Rockford, Quincy, and Rock Island are swamped with the business they are required to handle and there is no relief until the required extensions and improvements are made, Mr. Wilkerson said.

"We ordered the Murphysborough Telephone company to extend its lines over two months ago," he declared. "They have notified us that to issue bonds at the interest rates offered would be financial suicide. The Central Union Telephone company is up against the same thing. It has been ordered to make improvements in Danville and Peoria, but under the conditions it cannot obey the orders."

Tilden Blames Rail Strike.

William A. Tilden, president of the Fort Dearborn National bank, said railroad strikes were partially to blame for the present credit expansion conditions.

"Deposits have a tendency to stand still or shade off during such times when commodities are hard to move," Mr. Tilden said. "At the same time, loans expand, due to the failure of goods to reach destinations so that business can be continued. The banks have also had to increase their loans at the federal reserve banks."

HIDDEN PARTNERS IN HOYNE FIRM, LAWYER CHARGES

Names Big Men; Claims Meet with Denial.

Attorney Michael Gesas, representing a group of creditors of Eugene M. Hoyne & Co., yesterday at a general meeting of the creditors in the Hotel La Salle, produced a contract by which he said he hoped to show that other men beside Eugene M. Hoyne and Eugene de Bronkart were partners in the firm. He said many of the men listed as creditors would be shown to be partners in the firm and that all of the creditors would receive dollar for dollar. If the firm is declared bankrupt and no other men are found to be partners, he declared he did not think the creditors would receive more than 20 or 25 cents on the dollar.

Names Alleged Partners.

Among the men who, he said, might be shown to be members of the firm and who are now listed as creditors are William Moorhouse, Royal Vilas, Frank G. Hoyne, Thomas M. Hoyne, Maclay Hoyne, J. C. McCord, W. F. Anderson, and P. G. Thomas.

Gesas said the Hoyne firm succeeded Perry & Price, who were declared insolvent in October, 1918, and that the agreement in his possession showed the Hoyne firm was insolvent when it started doing business. Many of the men he named as possible members of the firm had contributed large sums to start the business, he declared.

Jacob Ringer, counsel for the Board of Trade creditors, said if the alleged bankruptcy was shown to be the outcome of bad management or poor judgment his clients would be lenient, but if it was found bankruptcy was caused by questionable tactics creditors would "go the limit" in punishing those responsible.

Deny Gesas' Charges.

Assets of the Hoyne firm outside of money due from customers were set at $550,000 by Eugene M. Hoyne and Eugene H. De Bronkart, the partners, at a hearing before Referee Sidney C. Eastman. Unsecured liabilities were placed at $1,555,000. The partners said the money advanced by the men named by Attorney Michael Gesas as "hidden partners" was not in manner of a partnership, but was to be paid back out of the profits of the company.

People Who Buy Buildings Look in the Basement First

Remember the ostrich which hid its head in the sand and thought its whole body was hidden? He laughed himself sick because he thought he was fooling everybody. And he was only fooling himself.

And you, old topper, you are the ostrich if you put a cheap heating plant in any building you are putting up to sell. People who buy buildings nowadays are not buying "sight unseen" like we used to swap jack-knives. They have learned to Look in the Basement First.

That wasteful little devil known as "False Economy" is responsible for a lot of busted speculative hopes. He specified, "skimp on the heating plant" and destroyed a lot of promising sales. He isn't getting away with it like he used to. Nope, he's just about through.

KEWANEE

If you put in a Kewanee Smokeless Boiler you are dropping an anchor to windward. You've got the best heating boiler on the market and the prospective buyer of your building can't critcize it. The fact is that boiler will be your best selling argument.

We notice that when men put up buildings for their own use, they put a Kewanee in. Why? Because they want the best service for the least expense. They want to save money on their coal. But when it comes to erecting a building to sell, they sometimes try to save money by buying the cheapest boiler they can find. And the cheapest heating boiler is the most expensive boiler in the world.

Play trump, young man, and put the Kewanee in at the start. Don't make the mistake of thinking everybody is an ostrich but yourself. It won't work.

BRYAN IS COY, NOT ADAMANT; AWAITS CLAMOR

Candidate Habit Is Not Easily Broken.

This is the eighth of a series of sketches of the presidential possibilities.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

He's the same old William J. Bryan. Just turned 60; thirty years in politics and still up to his kidnaping tricks. He's forever walking off with the political perambulator while the nurse is flirting with the policeman. In '96 he abducted "16 to 1" from the Populists and made it his adopted offspring. In '99 he saved the Spanish-American peace treaty from defeat in congress, and the next year used it as a springboard to leap on Republican imperialism."

Now he is seeking to purloin from President Wilson and the administration Democrats the peace treaty in whatever form it emerges as an issue. Already he has kidnaped the liquor question from the Anti-Saloon league. Who made America dry? Why, Bryan, of course. As a matter of fact, he probably had as little to do with the actual percentage of prohibition as had Gov. Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey—the league, a bipartisan body, put it across.

Totes Off Li'l Brown Jug.

But now the little brown jug is taboo by the constitution, Bryan has walked away with the child right under the noses of the leaguers. He has become the great progenitor and defender of antigrog, and is all primed to make the welkin howl at San Francisco. On issues Bryan's penchant is to appropriate, not originate.

The "peerless one" appears to be getting more enjoyment out of the present situation than any other Democrat leader—or Republican, too, for that matter. He is basking again in publicity.

His opponents are whacking away at him and he is coming back with counter wallops; the wave of ridicule and condemnation that followed his resignation from the cabinet between the first and second Lusitania notes has rolled over.

Magnet for Publicity.

Bryan, coming into Washington or New York, has his ante-chambers swarming with visitors and small armies of newspaper correspondents. He holds levees in his hotel suite. The limelight is exhilarating—Bryan is having the time of his life.

The years have dealt with him kindly. The frieze around his dome is as luxuriant and almost as raven as ever, his eye as flashing, his mouth as mobile and fluent. Tissue, a little of it, has come with prosperity; the lean and hungry look of the Cassius of '96 has given way to a hint of sleekness; the lines in his face are deeper, but he's in the pink, physically, and a winter in Florida has given him almost a beauty parlor complexion. He looks like the same old eagle, but with a facial massage.

When Does Ravishing Begin.

He says he is not a candidate for president, but if Vox Pop clamors, that makes a different set of circumstances, an observation echoed by McAdoo, Edwards, Hoover, and others. A habit of running for president is not broken so easily, and in Washington they are always comparing Bryan to the statue of Gen. Sherman opposite the treasury—it is always looking towards the White House—but that's all.

The old voice is still there with all its pristine sonority. The diapason rolls out the old line of ideas and they sound almost like newly discovered verities.

Rules Realm of Platitudes.

The voice still transmutes them into profundities. He makes the word "democracy" sound like a tone poem. He still talks like a Bach fugue on the cathedral organ. Leaving Bryan after a twenty minute talk one feels like a skeptic coming out of a church, uplifted by the music but unconvinced.

"He would be a daring man who would attempt to state the issues of the next four years," Mr. Bryan said. "The song, 'Lead, Kindly Light, One Step's Enough for Me,' applies to politics as well as religion.

"A discussion of remote contingencies is unwise for two reasons: Because, first, you invite unnecessary controversy. It's like debating over the cut of a man's clothes when he's two miles away. When he's so far off the discussion is futile. And when he reaches you it is unnecessary.

"The second reason is that issues are always judged in connection with their environment; and without a knowledge of environment it is difficult to form an intelligent judgment of issues. That is why I decline to answer hypothetical questions."

Old Loom Still Is Looming.

"Well, then, what about the issues this year?"

"They are looming up, and it is not only possible but necessary to deal with them."

He expounded the peace treaty situation, stressing it as the most prominent issue, and took up domestic questions.

"The most immediate domestic question," he said, "is profiteering.

"If it becomes necessary to fix the rate of profit for merchants the various legislatures ought to be empowered to do it, just as they fix the rate of interest.

A Touch of His Logic.

"A merchant's business is no more sacred than a banker's.

"If the money lender is permitted to charge only 6 or 8 per cent for the use of his money for a year why should the manufacturer, wholesaler, or merchant be allowed to charge 50 to 100 or even 200 per cent on property that he turns over two or three times a year?

"Monopoly is a larger and more difficult problem to deal with. I do not know to what extent the parties will grapple with this, but it is a problem of government ownership versus private monopoly. This issue is involved in every natural monopoly. That is, wherever competition is impossible and, therefore, a monopoly is necessary, it must be a government monopoly administered for all the people, and not a private monopoly administered in the interest of a few.

Talk and Talk; Then, Maybe, Act.

"Just now we need machinery for the investigation of all industrial disputes—not arbitration, but investigation—and investigation before the dispute reaches a point where a strike or lockout is threatened.

"Again, as a means of reaching a solution in all problems we need a national bulletin—not a newspaper, but a bulletin furnished at nominal cost to all who desire it, such bulletin to give the facts in regard to all important legislation or administrative action, with editorial space for discussion of all government issues, the editorials to be furnished by representatives of the various parties, chosen by the parties.

"Then, too, the initiative and referendum perfect government, and are the most effective means of insuring the rule of the people."

O, Boy, the Limelight!

At San Francisco, Bryan will be there with bells on, just as he was at Baltimore, when he dished Champ Clark's ambitions. Senator Hitchcock may prevent his going as a delegate from Nebraska, but the peerless one will be on deck just as usual and he'll get his hearing.

As to the treaty and the aspects it may finally assume as an issue, it is one horible nightmare of a mixup. The parties are "pied," and it will take time to sort them out.

The battle between Bryan and the Wilson Democrats will be accentuated by the row over rum, and although the administration is expected by the wise ones to be strong enough to knock Bryan into a cocked hat once again, still that will leave rancor and animosities, with Bryan sulking in his tent as in 1904 after the Parker nomination.

The politicians are still trying to figure out the long game in Bryan's jump into the treaty situation and his shout that a minority has no right to obstruct, even if it be an administration minority.

The Kidnaping King.

Right now it looms up stronger than ever as a kidnaping expedition. If the treaty with the reservations had been ratified, Bryan would have been able to shout, "I did it." Then he would have brought to have the country divided into five districts and America's delegates to the league of nations elected directly by the "pee pull."

He has been urging elected delegates. Incidentally, it would have given him a chance to run for one of the five places.

With the treaty unratified because a majority crossed a few "t's" and dotted a few "i's," it still leaves Bryan free to sally forth at San Francisco for a plank for a "safeguarded" league of nations and for an amendment that will enable a majority to make peace as well as declare war.

He's got plenty up his sleeve to make the convention one joyful, reverberant discord; no wonder he's the one radiant Democrat in the cave of gloom these days.

TALK BY LOWDEN HORNET NEST IN COUNTRY CLUB

Field Objects, but Plans Are Not Changed.

Gov. Lowden will speak tonight at the South Shore Country club against his own will and also against the will of the Cook county managers of Gen. Leonard Wood's campaign.

Here is how it comes about:

The club some time ago arranged for a series of Sunday night meetings, to be addressed by prominent men. The meetings were to be nonpolitical in nature, but men prominent in politics were selected as the speakers on many occasions. Gen. Wood was one of these, addressing the club some time ago.

Field Makes Objection.

Last week the announcement that Gov. Lowden had been selected as the speaker for this Sunday night was sent out. Members of the club friendly to the candidacy of Gen. Wood learned of it and scented a political plot. They rushed to Capt. Marshall Field, manager of the Wood campaign in Cook county.

Capt. Field takes up the story:

"I called up the president of the club and suggested it was rather inappropriate to have the governor talk politics there just two days before the primary," he said. "I am not a member of the club, and could not, therefore, enter a protest; but several of the members told me they considered the arrangement somewhat out of place and contemplated taking it up with the board of governors. I don't know what action they took."

Club President Talks.

President John G. Campbell of the club continues the tale:

"Objections were made to me, but I could see no reason to recall the invitation extended to the governor. There is no politics in 'billing him, and he isn't going to talk politics. Gen. Wood has already spoken to the club.

"Gov. Lowden learned of the affair and sent word to me that if his talking was going to cause me or the club any embarrassment he would prefer to cancel the engagement. I told him that under the circumstances I would insist that the appointment be kept."

Michigan Citizens Barred from Vote on U. S. Dry Act

Lansing, Mich., April 10.—Action of the Michigan legislature in ratifying the prohibition amendment is final and cannot be submitted to a referendum vote of the people, the Supreme court held today. The decision upheld Secretary of State Vaughan in his refusal to submit the ratification to a referendum after a petition to that end had been filed by the Michigan Hotel Men's association.

SPROUL AND THEN WOOD, CHOICE OF MRS. RINEHART

Writer Outlines List of Nation's Needs.

New York, April 10.—[Special.]—Mary Roberts Rinehart, noted writer, who is a candidate for district delegate to the Republican national convention from her home near Pittsburgh, was asked today to state her views—as a representative American woman—of the political situation. Summed up, they are:

This is one of the most critical periods in the country's history.

The nation faces a vitally necessary industrial and economic adjustment in which every man and woman must aid.

The most important economic factor is the home and it rests with the woman to take the initiative there.

Against Mass Autocracy.

Autocracy of mass is as bad as autocracy of class.

The strongest emotion prevailing in the country today is the fear of radicalism.

The people must shake off their political lethargy and realize that they are the government.

The only time the United States is a real democracy is when it votes.

We have been particularly fortunate in selecting our presidents in the past, but we can't afford to make a mistake now.

Plethora of Good Entries.

"Personally I believe that never before have we had so many good candidates as we have now," Mrs. Rinehart said, "but it rests with the men and the women of the country to determine that one of these really big men is elected.

"There must be no 'rubber stamp' delegates to the national conventions. They must reflect the wishes of their people.

"If I am elected a delegate my vote on the first ballot would be for Gov. Sproul of Pennsylvania. After that I would vote for Gen. Wood."

PROHIBIT POLICE TELEPHONING VOTE RETURNS

Policemen assigned to polling places at next Tuesday's election will not be permitted to telephone the preferential vote for president to the City News bureau. The age old custom was abolished at a conference between Mayor Thompson, Corporation Counsel Ettelson, and Chief Garrity yesterday. No reason was given officially for the decision. The mayor's friends talked of the telephone returns at the last mayoralty election, which, they said, allowed those "in the know" to recoup their betting losses by wagering heavily on Thompson at the last minute.

PLANE AFIRE; TWO INJURED.

Camden, N. J., April 10.—Lieut. Mark C. Hogue of Portland, Ore., and Lieut. Richard Wright of Cleveland, O., were injured today when the aerial mail plane they were piloting from Bustleton, Pa., to Washington, caught fire, 1,700 feet over Berlin, fifteen miles from here.

LOYALTY says "Vote for LOWDEN!"

Illinois can name the next President of the United States. Illinois Presidents have always been great Presidents. Illinois will present to the nation one of the greatest Governors she has ever had—Frank O. Lowden. Loyalty to good government, loyalty to Illinois and loyalty to a true public servant demand that we should endorse the personality, the character and the record of Frank O. Lowden by overwhelmingly showing to the nation that he is our choice for the Republican nomination for President.

Why every loyal man and woman in Illinois should vote for Lowden

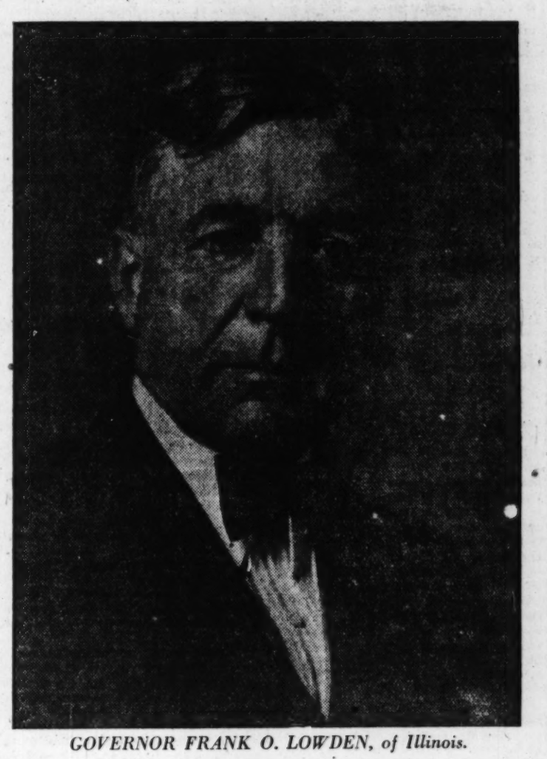
1—Frank O. Lowden has lived the life of the people. He has won his success by his own ability and his own efforts. This is what has given him his sympathetic insight into the rights and needs of the people and has built him what he is today.

2—He is a sterling American to the core. During the war his untiring diligence and ability placed the war activities of Illinois in the front rank.

3—He has preserved law and order without the aid of federal troops, by firm methods sanely applied when and where required.

4—He found the state in debt and the treasury depleted. By good horse sense and in spite of the tremendous increase in state expenses due to war activities he has put the state on a sound business basis. What he has done for the state he can do for the nation.

5—He would be a strong and popular candidate everywhere. He is a leader of the type demanded.



GOVERNOR FRANK O. LOWDEN, of Illinois.

Let your vote for Lowden say this to the whole country

"We selected Frank O. Lowden for our Governor. He made certain promises during his campaign. Every one of these promises has been kept 100 per cent. He found the state treasury practically empty, and during the stress of war times, meeting all demands, the treasury was filled, and today has $12,000,000 in it. And at the same time the rate of taxation for state purposes has been reduced one-third. He made a wonderful record as our war governor, and we are proud of him for that.

"We have tried him, we have tested him; and he rings true; he can be relied on. We know it, because we have seen him at work. We make no experiment in supporting him, because we are not depending upon promises without the certainty they will be carried out.

"Governor Lowden has done great things for our state—not by one-man power, not by force, not by giving orders, but by high and statesmanlike treatment of every question before him, by his faculty of co-operation with legislature and by his ability to accomplish results. That is why we, the people of the State of Illinois, offer to the nation Frank O. Lowden as our nominee for President."

Men and Women Stand by Lowden as he stood by you! Go to the polls next Tuesday, April 13th, and cast your vote for yourself and for the State of Illinois for Frank O. Lowden as your choice and your State's choice for the Republican nomination for President of the United States.

Lowden has made good for us—
Now let us make good for Lowden

NOTE There is no other way to inform the people except through the press. Therefore, we show our appreciation of Lowden's record by inserting this advertisement and paying for it ourselves, and asking each reader of this newspaper to vote for Frank O. Lowden, Tuesday, April 13th.

We, the undersigned, a few of the friends, neighbors and business associates of Frank O. Lowden—many of us having known him intimately for twenty-five years and more—unqualifiedly endorse him and earnestly urge our fellow citizens to vote for him at the Republican Presidential Preferential Primary, Tuesday, April 13th.

"BRUTAL" FINISH MARKS FIGHT TO CONTROL COUNTY

City Hall Makes Claim of Clean Sweep.

"Brutal" is the word to describe the finish of the campaign for control of the Republican county organization that will be settled at the primary polls on Tuesday.

The city hall sent out its final claim of a clean sweep of the city, officially saying the Lundin-Thompson candidates cannot lose a single ward. There were manifold indications, however, that the city hall is slipping, and it would not surprise some of the anti-Thompson leaders, who were pessimistic until Friday, if the city hall gets its first serious upset Tuesday since the mayor's first nomination.

Brundage Men Confident.

The Brundage forces showed abundant pep last night and expressed confidence they will win every one of their wards north of the river. They claimed the opposition to the city hall has centered upon James F. Burns in the Twenty-first and that he will win, and that Kempff, Brundage candidate in the Twenty-second, is now a winner.

The Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth look perfect from the Brundage standpoint.

The claim from the Twenty-fifth is that George K. Schmidt, backed by the regular organization, has established his claim to be the candidate who can defeat Francis, the city hall man, and that the independent vote that has been looking for a place to land so the city hall can be defeated will go to Schmidt. Sheriff Peters' managers, however, claimed confidently that he, and not Schmidt, will win out. Cannon's chances in the Twenty-sixth are said to have improved materially.

Haas Chances Bright.

On the northwest side, Recorder Joseph F. Haas, Deneen candidate, now appears to have the better chance to win over Superintendent of Streets Byrne. A fierce fight against Haas will not end until the votes are in, however.

Milner, Brundage candidate in the Twenty-seventh, is given the edge by the reports from that ward, and Dellenback, Deneen candidate in the Fourteenth, is believed by his managers to be on top. Wiedel, Deneen candidate in the Fifteenth, is said to be out in front, and John F. Devine, Deneen candidate in the Thirty-third, may have a chance to defeat George Hitzman, the city hall candidate. The contests in the Sixteenth and Seventeenth are held to be very close.

On the west side there is a chance that Esposito, Deneen candidate, may defeat Chris Mamer, representing the hall. Homer K. Galpin, Brundage candidate in the Eighteenth, is getting the bulk of the strength opposed to the hall behind Fleming, and is said to be able to win. The Thirty-fourth has a fierce fight between State Representative Roderick and Charles Vavrik, the city hall candidate.

Levy Leads in Third.

The Third ward opposition to the city hall is believed to be centering upon Robert R. Levy, who has the advantage of the regular ward organization support. William A. Bither, city hall candidate, is the man that Levy has to defeat.

The contest between Roy O. West and R. J. McLaughlin, the city hall entry in the Sixth, has been relentless, but West is running strongly, it is claimed.

The Seventh is a showdown between Charles N. Goodnow, Deneen candidate, and A. C. Metzger, city hall, with the odds now in favor of Goodnow. Harry Harman, Deneen candidate in the Eighth, is given a chance over P. H. Moynihan, city hall, in the South Chicago territory.

The Deneen men figure a victory for their candidates in each of the town of Lake wards, beginning with Reid in the Twenty-ninth, Thomas J. Healy in the Thirtieth, Swanson in the Thirty-first over Dr. W. H. Reid, one of the city hall cabinet, and Julius A. Johnson, who has the combined support of the Deneen and Brundage factions against James Rea in the Thirty-second.

The Fourth and Fifth wards are in a turmoil with anybody likely to win.

The Democrats have no contests for ward committeemen that amount to anything only in the Eighteenth and Thirty-second wards.

CANDIDATES FOR WARD LEADERS

THE candidates for Republican ward committeemen at Tuesday's primaries are shown in the following list. The city hall has a complete ticket. Deneen and Brundage factional candidates are indicated by the letters D or B following the names. A few candidates have no factional ties and are left unmarked.

Democratic candidates for ward committeemen in twenty-one of the thirty-five wards are without opposition. The regular organization controlled by Roger C. Sullivan and the O'Connell-Sabath portion of the old Harrison-Dunne combination entered into a harmony agreement over ward committeemen and national delegates. In the following list these candidates in contested wards are marked with the letter S. Real fights exist in only two wards, the Eighteenth and Thirty-second.

JOHNSON IN CITY TODAY TO TALK TO SUPPORTERS

Senator Hiram Johnson, candidate for the Republican nomination for president, will arrive in Chicago at 9:40 o'clock this morning and will spend the day in consultation with local supporters. A committee of twenty-five representing the Hiram Johnson for President club will meet him at the La Salle street station and will escort him to the Blackstone hotel.

Senator Johnson has made no plans for a campaign in Illinois and his name is not on the presidential preference ballot. Only one candidate for delegate to the national convention—Edgar J. Cook, running in the Tenth district—is pledged to Johnson.

It is possible, the Johnson supporters say, that the senator may be induced to make an eleventh hour campaign. If he does he will be taken from the Blackstone to a hall, where arrangements have been made to have him address an audience of from 2,000 to 3,000 persons.

Great German Theatrical Company Will Tour U. S.

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]

BERLIN, April 10.—Prof. Max Reinhardt has just signed a contract for a tour of America next summer with a gigantic company that will produce all his famous spectacles, like "The Miracle," "Orestes," "Hamlet," and "Oedipus."

OVERFLOW AT WOOD MEETING IN AUDITORIUM

Approximately 4,700 persons yelled themselves hoarse last night as Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood stepped on the stage of the Auditorium theater to tell what he thinks the next president of the United States should do.

Before entering the theater, Gen. Wood addressed an overflow of about 500 persons who had failed to gain entrance.

Gen. Wood gave an insight of his probable Mexican policy if nominated and elected when he declared, that Americans in Mexico must be protected. He said he stood for "not a dollar for ransom but millions for rescue" in handling the cases of Americans kidnaped by Mexican outlaws.

He outlined the general policy of the late Col. Roosevelt as one which would be his as president by quoting some of the late colonel's famous remarks, among them being, "Speak softly; carry a big stick."

Gen. Wood also took a fling at the present administration. He said the people of the United States do not want to control the world by "verbal message."

The speaker urged a forward looking policy while holding to the traditions that have proved sound. He urged unification among the different factions of the Republican party and warned against too much confidence of winning on the other man's mistakes.

Gen. Wood wound up his week's campaign tour of Illinois earlier in the day yesterday by making eight speeches in towns close to Chicago. During the week he spoke in fifty-eight Illinois cities and towns.

G. O. P. BATTLE AT WHITE HEAT AS VOTE NEARS

which permitted them to cast a preferential vote in 70 per cent of the counties outside of Cook.

The presidential battle has been the spectacular one. All the red fire has been burned, most of the bands have played, and the downtown campaigning has taken place in it.

Bitter Fight for Control.

The second fight, waged in the wards, quietly and intensely, is the bitter one. Only men may vote in this—the vote for committeemen. The forces headed by Mayor Thompson and in possession of one of the most powerful political organizations ever built up in the county are determined to dominate completely the Republican county committee and through it the state organization.

They started their campaign early, expended thousands of dollars, and sent out tons of "literature." Every power that the city administration possesses has been used, and their aim has been nothing less than the election of every one of the thirty-five city members of the Republican county committee.

In spite of efforts continued until the last minute to bring its foes together, the city hall faces a divided opposition. The Deneen forces have placed candidates in practically every ward in the city. The Brundage forces are contesting in all the north side wards and in other territory in which they believe they have strength.

Fight Is Not Over.

The Deneen and the Brundage men have been attacking each other as bitterly as they have the city hall men. The Thompson men have poured oil upon the fire and gleefully watched it burn. However, in some wards—the Seventh, for example—it is a straight out fight between ex-Judge Goodnow (anti-Thompson) and Andrew Metzger (Thompson).

The campaign ends with the Thompson men claiming everything, the Deneen and Brundage forces hoping that they will elect enough city committeemen to aid the six country towns members of the committee prevent the Thompson forces from actually controlling it.

PREFERENCE "ADVISORY"

The presidential preference vote as it will be taken Tuesday in Illinois is a messy and unsatisfactory proposition at best. It is not binding, legally, upon any delegate; simply "advisory," and the act doesn't say whether the vote shall be advisory as a state-wide proposition or whether the advice is given by congressional districts. The law was formulated in a special legislative session in 1912, called through the efforts of THE TRIBUNE in order that the clearly apparent majority of sentiment in Illinois for Theodore Roosevelt could be transmuted into delegates who would vote for his nomination, and this was accomplished.

Only Two Candidates.

On Tuesday the Republican choice is confined to Gov. Lowden and Gen. Wood. No other candidate filed. A voter who wishes to show his choice for Johnson, Hoover, Harding, or any other candidate, has to write in the name of his favorite, make a square in front of the name, and place a cross in that square. There is considerable talk that some of the city hall cogs will have Johnson's name written in in quite a few Chicago wards.

Two delegates and two alternates will be elected Tuesday to the Chicago convention, in each of the ten Cook county congressional districts and in each of the fifteen downstate districts. The eight delegates at large will be chosen at the state convention to be held at Springfield May 10. All of the downstate delegates who will be elected are pledged to Lowden by formal certificates filed with the secretary of state with the nominating petitions.

Stand of City Hall.

In Cook county the city hall has eighteen candidates running for the twenty places. Three of these are pledged to Lowden and fifteen have filed "no preference." These claim that they will be bound by the preference vote as cast in their respective districts. All eighteen are pledged to vote for Mayor Thompson for reëlection as national committeeman. Nobody is running against the mayor, as far as has been learned. In the Hyde Park, Englewood, Stockyards, north side, and Lake View districts, pledged Lowden candidates backed by the Deneen or Brundage organizations, are running against the city hall candidates.

While women may vote on the presidential preference question, they are not permitted to vote anywhere for district delegates or alternates. This, naturally, complicates the situation.

They cannot vote for delegates, because the Supreme court so construed the woman's suffrage act in 1916.

Gov. Lowden has made no active campaign in Illinois. His position was that he stands upon his record. Lowden meetings have been held in Chicago during the closing days of the campaign. Gen. Wood made a six days' trip through the state on a special train, concluding last night with a massmeeting at the Auditorium.

CANDIDATES FOR DELEGATES

THE following list shows all of the candidates for delegates to the Republican national convention in the ten congressional districts in Cook county, to be elected Tuesday. The letter L after a candidate's name indicates that he has filed a legal pledge to support Lowden for president in the convention. The letter N shows that he has filed a statement that he has no choice for president. The letter T shows that he has indicated that he will vote for Mayor Thompson for national committeeman. Two candidates will be elected in each district.

U. S. SANS HOOVER STILL NO VACUUM, GERARD ASSERTS

Says Others Can Seek Presidency.

New York, April 10.—The recent movement in favor of Herbert C. Hoover for president was "a protest against party control, not a declaration that in all the broad United States Herbert Hoover was the only man fit to be our president," declared James W. Gerard in an address here tonight at the Jefferson day dinner of the National Democratic club.

Wanted Hoover Named.

"At the Jackson day dinner in Washington I advocated the nomination of Hoover by the Democratic party," Mr. Gerard said.

"That was when I and other admirers of Hoover saw in him a man who had done good service, who seemed independent, and who could afford to await the offer of a nomination.

"But a Herbert Hoover, a partisan, seeking only the Republican nomination, standing hat in hand before the house when the forces of reaction are in council, is quite another Hoover.

Mahomet and U. S. Politics.

"It is a Mahomet going a suppliant to the mountain, not a mountain offering the nomination to an independent. And because the Republican party is the party of reaction, there lies danger in its success."

Hoover Opposes Mandate.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 10.—[Special.]—Herbert Hoover came out emphatically tonight against an American mandate for Armenia or other political interference in European affairs in an address.

"If we were to undertake political intervention in Armenia tomorrow," he said, "we would find that we should be compelled not only to take a political guardianship of Armenia but also of Georgia and Azerbaijan to the north and to Anatolia and Constantinople to the west. If we were to place this region in position to develop economic independence it would also imply the guardianship of Mesopotamia to the south.

"We should find ourselves brought into direct political entanglements with the whole weight of Russia and to great conflict of economic interests with the allies. We should find ourselves projected into the very maelstrom of European politics."

NATIONAL SEXTET

BUILT IN FIVE CUSTOM BODY MODES

Speed So Smooth That Miles Melt Away

Sixty miles an hour is an effortless speed for the new National Sextet.

So smoothly and masterfully does the car hit this road racing gait that you are tempted to question the accuracy of the speedometer and wonder if it should not be showing a leisurely thirty.

The retarded throttle brings the speed of the Sextet down to two miles an hour in high, yet the car accelerates to forty miles an hour within a standard city block (12 blocks to a mile):

The Sextet also recognizes the authority of the brake, as well as the command of the accelerator, coming to a full stop from forty miles an hour in less than nine car lengths.

Utmost ease of handling is a salient Sextet virtue. The car obeys the slightest touch of hand and foot. The steering is of the freely operating worm-and-gear type. Brake and clutch pedals yield easily to pressure. Control levers are exceptionally long, and operated without change of posture.

Lift the long, tapering hood of the National Sextet and you will see the source of the car's extraordinary road competence. It is an improved overhead-valve, high-efficiency, six-cylinder engine, built complete in National shops and capable of developing 71 horsepower.

Only the experienced eye will note the correctness of design that makes the Sextet engine the fine piece of mechanism that it is.

And only a visit to the National factories can disclose the close limits to which this engine is built and the advanced methods of precision manufacture that are practiced by expert craftsmen in translating this design into steel and its alloys.

Yet even the novice, when he takes the wheel, instantly appreciates the advantages of these qualities which are responsible for the abundant, smooth, silent, flexible power that is ever at his bidding and control.

A demonstration? Gladly, and at your pleasure.

FAHERTY SAYS COUNCIL O. K.'D EXPERTS' PAY

Saved Thousands for the City, He Says.

Michael J. Faherty, under whose supervision real estate, building, and rent experts have been paid $1,240,000 in the last five years, defended the expense yesterday as necessary, wise, and a good investment.

"This money has been expended on my recommendation to the council finance committee," Mr. Faherty said. "Every dollar of it has been approved by that committee and the council.

Tells of Experts' Work.

"I am criticized for employing such men as Frank Mesce and Austin J. Lynch. Here's what these two men did for the city in the condemnation suit again the J. S. Kirk company in the Michigan avenue widening case:

"The company's witnesses testified that the property taken by the city was worth $1,537,000. Mesce and Lynch testified after a careful and complete investigation that the property was worth $450,000. The jury found that the value was $488,000—$88,000 more than the city's contention and $1,049,000 less than the Kirk people contended.

"In this case the city spent $150,000. The expense was wise, necessary, and a good investment.

"After we have won a few more cases like that big property owners will be glad to come in, lay their cards on the table, and cooperate with us."

Called "Best Witness."

Mr. Faherty declared Mesce, who is a protégé of Fred Lundin, to be "the best witness on depreciation values in the United States," and gave similar praise to Lynch as an estimator of real estate values.

[Hutchinson Photo.]

Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard Carpenter of 677 North Michigan avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Delafield, to William C. Boyden Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Boyden of Winnetka.

Miss Carpenter, who is known to her friends as "Polly," was an active worker in occupational therapy at the Elgin state hospital and at Fort Sheridan during the war. She made her debut this year and immediately took her place as one of the most popular and attractive of the debutantes.

Mr. Boyden, who served as a lieutenant in the army during the war, is a senior at Harvard law school. His father is in Poland doing Red Cross work and his mother and sisters are in Switzerland. No date for the wedding has been set.

VOTERS IN 7TH WARD URGED TO BACK GOODNOW

Citizens Ask His Choice as Committeeman.

Representative voters in the Seventh ward, including a number of lawyers, issued statements yesterday urging the election of ex-Judge Charles N. Goodnow next Tuesday as Republican ward committeeman over Andrew Metzger, the Lundin-Thompson candidate.

Mr. Goodnow's record as member of the state legislature, his twelve years as judge of the Municipal court, and his present services as county commissioner are declared to qualify him in unusual manner for the position of committeeman.

Say It's a Peril to Bench.

The appeals declare that unless Mr. Goodnow is elected in the Seventh ward and men of his caliber in the other wards there is danger that such jurists as David F. Matchett, John A. Swanson, Merritt W. Pinckney, and Sheridan Fry will be retired.

A statement, signed by 500 voters of the ward, urges the voters to apply the test of fitness regardless of factional affiliations. Among the lawyers signing it are:

E. M. Ashcraft.	Gale Blocki.
Ora E. Chapin.	John A. Verhoeven.
William S. Stahl.	Edwin K. Walker.
Glen S. Noble.	Earl F. Tilley.
Guy Guernsey.	Edwy Logan Reeves.
Newton C. Wheeler.	Homer J. Smith.
Perley H. Bishop.	Leroy W. Holder.
Joseph P. Harrold.	George M. Popham.
Charles R. Brown.	George W. Miller.
Albert W. De Latour.	William Crones.
Ralph E. Batten.	Edgar A. Buzzell.

Citizens for Goodnow.

Among the other citizens indorsing ex-Judge Goodnow are:

Grant W. Porter.	John M. Kimball.
Robert Vanderpoel.	Col. L. H. Whiting.
Douglas Sutherland.	Samuel A. Kennedy.
Dr. W. F. Harpel.	Irwin McDowell.
W. M. Richards.	Prof. George H. Mead.
C. E. Brayton.	Prof. Glen M. Hobbs.
Dr. Eugene Bigneron.	Maj. E. Scott Miner.
Frederick W. Dow.	Capt. Elmer Swensen.
Henry Jaffray.	J. G. Hammond.
Edward G. Carter.

"The ward committeeman is now the greatest political office in Cook county—of greater consequence probably to our citizens than any other single office," the statement reads. "This committee believes a more important duty never rested upon our citizens than to vote for Charles N. Goodnow at this time."

MAYOR FEARS "BAYONET RULE"

Mayor Thompson last night issued the following pre-primary statement:

"As we near the close of the campaign which is being waged to determine what the Republicans of Chicago stand for, I am serenely confident that if the rank and file of our party understand the issues there will be no doubt about the outcome.

"The question to be settled in the Republican party primary next Tuesday is whether our party shall be kept true to the interests of the masses and responsive to the will of the people, or whether we shall allow our party machinery to pass completely into the control of the sordid interests which levy tribute upon the people.

"A national aspect of our local election is presented in the question as to whether the people of moderate means shall continue to be oppressed by the many forms of taxation now in vogue; or whether the burden shall be shifted to the shoulders of those better able to bear the load which has been laid upon the people of America through the war. If the propaganda of the profiteers prevails, we shall not only get no relief from the irritating war legislation now on the statute books, but our free government will be replaced by a government of bayonets and machine guns through a military autocracy founded on compulsory military training and service.

"The purely local aspect of the election is presented in the question as to whether the judges of our Circuit and Superior courts shall be selected by the commercialized newspapers, which are the mouthpieces of the profiteers; whether our people shall be allowed to decide for themselves; whether they will own and operate our local transportation facilities at a 5 cent fare, and whether the rich tax dodgers shall continue to evade the payment of their just share of taxation, while those of moderate means bear an unjust share of the burden.

"The candidates for ward committeemen, referred to as the Thompson candidates, stand for the interests of those who work for a living as against the gilded representatives of wealth.

"On Tuesday every citizen will align himself either on the side of the people or the profiteers. The issue is made up, and I await the result with hope and confidence."

SHERMAN ASKS HIS FRIENDS TO SUPPORT LOWDEN

Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman yesterday issued an appeal to Illinois Republicans urging them to give their undivided support to Gov. Frank O. Lowden in the presidential preference primary next Tuesday. He says:

"Gov. Lowden is asking for an instruction at the primaries this month, expressing that he is the choice of his party for nomination as a candidate for president. His record as governor is the strongest possible ground for an overwhelming majority in the primary. As an executive of the third largest state in the union he has demonstrated his fitness for president. His qualifications are a thorough knowledge of the spirit and framework of free government, business training, and professional experience and attainments, and a sane, stalwart Americanism with the gift of common sense.

"I ask all my friends in Illinois to support Gov. Lowden, and am glad to declare my support of and confidence in him."

POLITICAL NOTES

The Thirty-fourth ward Deneen Republican organization will hold a rally at 2:30 p. m. today in the Douglas park auditorium in the interest of Solomon P. Roderick, candidate for ward committeeman. There will be a vaudeville and musical program and Charles S. Deneen, Col. Abel Davis, Col. John V. Clinnin, and Edward R. Litsinger will speak.

Gov. Lowden will close his Illinois campaign tomorrow noon with an address at the Hamilton club. At the Lowden noon meeting tomorrow in Cohan's Grand opera house, the speakers will be Col. John V. Clinnin, Frederick R. De Young, Mrs. Guy Planchard, Mrs. F. A. Lorenz, and Fred S. Oliver.

Immediate resumption of the work of The Hague international conferences to provide the necessary judicial machinery for the settlement of international disputes was suggested by Gov. Lowden, speaking last night at a banquet of the field forces of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company at the Congress hotel.

Col. John V. Clinnin yesterday issued a statement declaring that a canvass of the Twenty-fifth ward shows Sheriff Peters in the lead over George K. Schmidt and Charles R. Francis for committeeman. He declared that efforts to get voters to support Schmidt at the expense of Peters were in reality made to aid Francis, Thompson candidate.

A massmeeting in behalf of Gen. Wood will be held tomorrow night at the Polish Union hall, Milwaukee avenue and Augusta street. Capt. Marshall Field will speak for Gen. Wood at 8 o'clock tonight at the Del Prado hotel and Mrs. Frederick W. Bentley will preside at a Wood meeting in the Hyde Park hotel.

GRIDIRON CLUB PUTS POLITICAL WHALES ON GRILL

Washington, D. C., April 10.—Having arrived at the presidential age of 35 years, the Gridiron club celebrated the event tonight by turning its dinner into a national nonpartisan political convention, at which 1920 candidates heard their claims presented in a fashion new to party politics.

Many were nominated and more were discussed in such a way as to suggest to all the candidates who were present that they take themselves too seriously.

The political status of the peace treaty also was considered. Three chefs in full regalia appeared in the center of the hall and proceeded to concoct a peace pudding.

The pudding, it appeared, was planned to have fourteen points of perfection, but at the last minute it was found necessary to eliminate a number of the points. The trio of chefs labored diligently, explaining the ingredients as they mixed. The pudding finally was covered with an icing approved by forty-nine members of the senate, but no sooner had the icing settled into place when the pudding exploded with a loud report, scattering the contents all over the chefs.

"Now we can't even pocket it," one of them observed sadly.

FOELL TO RULE RINGER ELECTED AS ASSESSOR

The long fight between Charles Ringer and Michael K. Sheridan for a seat on the board of assessors has reached an armistice, with probable victory for Ringer.

The recount of the ballots cast in the contested election of Nov. 5, 1918, yesterday revealed Ringer a victor by 3,693 votes instead of a loser by 846 votes, as the returns first showed.

Judge Foell, before whom the ballots were recounted, will enter an order next Wednesday by the force of which Ringer will become a member of the board, and it is said that Sheridan has agreed not to contest further.

It was said that Judge Foell has also found Tom Murray, clothing merchant, entitled to the seat as a member of the board of county commissioners, which he has contested for since John Budinger was announced elected in 1918.

Two men and three women who served as judges and clerks in the Eighth precinct of the Fifteenth ward in the November, 1918, election were turned over to the state's attorney's office by Judge C. M. Foell in the Superior court yesterday following their testimony in an inquiry into alleged vote frauds.

They are Mrs. Ida Ruben of 1416 North Irving avenue, Joseph Wolf of 1356 North Oakley avenue, and Simon Singer, judges, and Mrs. Anna Newman of 1322 North Irving avenue and Miss Lillian Singer, daughter of Simon Singer, clerks.

CAPITAL FRIENDS OF JOHNSON WILL RALLY TO DRIVE

Washington, D. C., April 10.—[Special.]—Senate and house members supporting Hiram Johnson's presidential boom met today and planned to push the campaign with redoubled vigor. It was decided to file Johnson's name in Maryland and to make a fight there for delegates. It it understood that Senator France, Maryland, leans toward Johnson.

The efforts of the campaigners will be concentrated on New Jersey, Nebraska, Indiana and Maryland. Johnson supporters say they are not disturbed by the Hoover boom in California.

Senator Johnson is now on his way to Nebraska. Senator Norris will go there to stump for Johnson within the next few days.

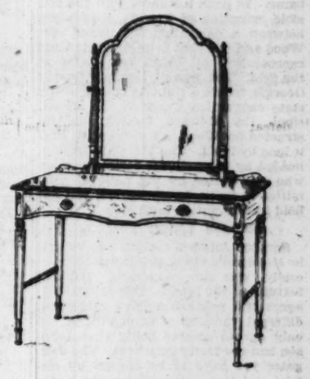
You notice that we say fine furniture and we mean it. This Hepplewhite mahogany suite is Scholle quality through and through; it is a faithful reproduction of Hepplewhite, and is finished beautifully.

Of course it carries the Scholle guarantee, which means you can buy the furniture, have it sent out and set up in your home, look at it, take your time to decide if it is exactly what you want, and if it proves in the least unsatisfactory, for any reason on earth, you can return it and get other goods or your money back.



This Scholle guarantee of satisfaction sounds reckless as an offer made by a retail store. It isn't; it's perfectly safe for all parties, because of the kind of furniture we sell and because you shouldn't have something unsatisfactory to you no matter how good it is. Think this over and you'll see why the Scholle guarantee is the only fair way to promise satisfaction.

G. O. P. JOCKEYS LOOKING AROUND FOR 'DARK HORSE'

Think Present Field in the Race Is Handicapped.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

"Uninstructed and unpledged" delegates to the Republican national convention—those who are in the combination to wait until they get to Chicago in June before tieing in to any presidential candidate—are now in a fair way to compose an actual majority of the convention.

Delegates have now been elected from one-half of the 48 states, and 457 of the 984 party representatives have been chosen. More than 300 of these are now claimed as certain to stand with the "uninstructed and unpledged" group. Earlier claims of candidates that any one of them would have 200 instructed delegates have been revised downward, and there is little if any prospect that any one will have 125 delegates under instructions.

Contests Piling Up.

Contests are piling up, particularly in the southern states, and it is already evident that the national committee will have a week of preliminary work, precedent to the convention on June 8, in making the temporary roll. Some of the experts are figuring that the total of contests, when business begins, will be nearly as large as in 1912.

Dark horse talk has taken a fresh start, in view of the results in the more important states where delegates were elected during the week just ended. One of the big men in the camp of the "uninstructed and unpledged" said yesterday to THE TRIBUNE:

"So much feeling has developed recently among those candidates who now seem to be in the lead that it may be wise and even necessary to consider some one who is not now a candidate. The members of our organization have no other thought in mind than to do that which is best for the party. They believe that it is for the best interests of the country that we should have a Republican president. With so many good and available men in the party they will not agree to nominate a candidate who will have to be defended after his nomination."

Contests Affect Wood.

Contests of the complete delegations are now on record in Florida, Georgia, and Mississippi, and one is coming in South Carolina and possibly in Alabama. In each instance, with the possible exception of Florida, it is a row between a delegation instructed for Wood and one that is uninstructed and representing all other candidates in the field. This was particularly true in Georgia, where a riot was staged at the state convention Tuesday. In Mississippi, the Howard faction has instructed for Wood in a convention that it held by itself. The Mulvihill faction, headed by the national committeeman, who was seated by the national committee at its St. Louis session, will not hold its convention until May 5.

Johnson Victory Feature.

Senator Johnson's clean cut victory in Michigan's direct primaries Monday easily, was the dominant political feature of the week. Campaign managers and politicians have fifty-seven different varieties of explanations, the only agreed answer being that Johnson has the thirty delegates. The delegates yet have to be chosen by district and state conventions, but under the pre-primary agreement of the candidates and the Michigan primary law, it is difficult to figure how any of them can be pried loose from the Californian.

New York elected eighty-eight uninstructed delegates. Johnson failed to accomplish anything in the fight that he made in Brooklyn and in five Manhattan districts. Hoover made a poor showing in the single district, where he contested the regular organization. The impression in New York is that Johnson and Hoover will get no New York votes. Probably twenty votes of the eighty-eight are figured as tending to Wood. Lowden will have a formidable support in the delegation, it is said.

Wisconsin for La Follette.

Wisconsin surprised the talent by electing a delegation that is almost entirely under the personal control of Senator La Follette. Either two or four of the twenty-six delegates were elected by the combination made by Senator Lenroot, Gov. Philipp, State Chairman West, and La Follette opponents. The La Follette delegates will vote for the senator if he wants them, but they are uninstructed, legally.

Rhode Island elected an uninstructed delegation of ten, headed by Gov. Beekman. Lowden managers claim six of the ten. Georgia elected contesting delegates, one set instructed for Wood, the other being uninstructed.

St. Paul's Church Has 75th Anniversary Today

The First St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church, 1301 North La Salle street, celebrates today its seventy-fifth anniversary. It was founded on Easter day, April 11, 1846, with the Rev. C. A. T. Selle as pastor. The anniversary will be celebrated today by special services and a review of the church's history. The late Rev. Henry Wunder, D. D., served St. Paul's as pastor for sixty-two years. The Rev. John Baumgaertner succeeded him at his death, and was pastor until his death in 1918. The present pastor is the Rev. Henry Kowert.

PASS BONDS AND SAVE $7,611,480 ON LIGHTS—KEITH

'Issue Will End Darkness on 250 Miles of Streets.'

Voters will save the city $7,611,480 by voting for the proposed electric light bond issue, according to an appeal issued yesterday by Commissioner William G. Keith, head of the department of gas and electricity. He says:

"For ten years the city's portion of the taxes has not been sufficient to provide for the necessary additional electric street lamps. Without a bond issue not one additional lamp can be placed in service for years to come.

"There are now 250 miles of improved streets without lamps of any kind. These will be lighted if the bond issue is approved. There are 10,500 rented 50 candlepower gasoline lamps, operated at an annual cost of $59.04, that could be replaced by 100 candlepower electric lamps, which would cost only $9.39 annually if the bond issue is passed. It is estimated 250 miles of streets will be improved in the next five years. These streets will be in darkness if the bond issue is not passed and lighted if it is passed.

Cites Huge Rent Total.

"If the bond issue is passed, economies in operation will save more than enough to retire the bonds at maturity. If it does not and pass the city does not place an additional rented lamp in service for twenty years, the taxpayers will pay in that time $12,500,000 for rented lamps now in service.

"If the bond issue does pass in twenty years the saving in operation costs will more than retire it and every street in the city will be lighted with modern, standard, efficient, and economical street lamps.

"The materials and labor used in this work are not such as would be used in house building.

"If you vote no, you spend your taxes to rent 50 candlepower lamps. Vote yes and you will get 85,000 new 100 candlepower lamps and provide equipment for as many more, when required, at a nominal cost.

"Vote yes and the saving in actual operating costs will retire these bonds at maturity and leave a net saving of $7,611,480."

Peril to Chicago Plan?

Ald. Henry D. Capitain has stated that in his judgment the proposed city bond issues, amounting to $34,500,000 and exceeding the constitutional debt limitation by $33,436,907, might imperil the early completion of the Chicago Plan projects.

An attempt was made to obtain a statement regarding this claim from Michael J. Faherty, head of the board of local improvements. Mr. Faherty said the cost of the Chicago Plan enterprises would not be known for at least two years; meantime he will go as far as possible with the money available and trust to the public to vote any sum necessary for completion of the work.

Details of Bond Plan.

It is proposed to issue the $15,000,000 in new street lighting bonds in installments of $3,000,000 annually. Bonds in force are retired at the rate of about $5,000,000 annually. It follows that approximately $2,000,000 in bonding power will be available each year, to be divided among the proposed $5,000,000 bond issue for small parks and playgrounds, the proposed $5,000,000 issue for a convention hall, and the proposed $9,500,000 issue for new bridges.

That statement presupposes, furthermore, that no additional issues are voted for purposes not now contemplated, and that no deficits develop similar to those which have marked the progress of the Michigan boulevard link, in which about double the amount originally contemplated will be invested before the work is finished.

DGE TUTHILL IES AFTER 35 EARS ON BENCH

ast Union Veteran to Preside in County.

Judge Richard S. Tuthill died yesterday at his residence, 1316 Lake street, Evanston. He was 78 years old.

An illness which developed shortly after the judge was rescued from drowning in the lake at Evanston last June hastened the end. At the time when he died were the widow, and a daughter, Mrs. Thomas H Sidley.

He had served thirty-five years on the bench and was the only Union veteran of the civil war left among the Chicago judges. His activities ranged from charitable and welfare work to political and legal attainments.

Weathered Many Landslides.

Although his political affiliation was with the Republican party, he possessed the faculty of weathering Democratic landslides and winning elections despite the fact that others on the ticket were defeated.

The civil war broke out while the judge was at Middlebury college, Vermont. He left school and enlisted under Gen. Logan as a scout. Later he became a lieutenant in a Michigan light artillery regiment. At the close of the war he settled in Nashville and was admitted to the bar in 1866.

He was Chicago city attorney from 1871 to 1879 and served from 1884 to 1888 as United States district attorney. In 1887 he was elected to the circuit court bench. He had held the office since without interruption.

He founded the Juvenile and the St. Charles Home for Boys, and was known as "the friend of the wayward boy."

One of the judge's decisions which caused world-wide comment was his ruling that Lord Bacon wrote Shakespeare's plays. It resulted from the Shakespearian controversy between Sir George Fabian and W. N. Selig.

Funeral Is Arranged.

Funeral services will be held at 3:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in St. Mark's church, Ridge avenue and Lake street, Evanston. The active pallbearers will be George R. Folds, Harold G. McKey, E. J. Stevens, Frank McKey, Egbert Robertson, and Walter S. Ross.

The honorary pallbearers will be all the judges of the Circuit and Superior courts, Maj. Gen. Charles G. Dawes, Thomas Kane, Rufus C. Dawes, Dr. Theodore Zeigfeld, Knowlton L. Ames, George Walsh, Judge Orrin N. Carter, Henry T. Holtz, Edwin C. Day, Charles B. Dibell, Municipal Judge Wench, Maj. E. D. Reddington, Judge Samuel C. Stough, and Judge Potwin. Cantilever Shoes
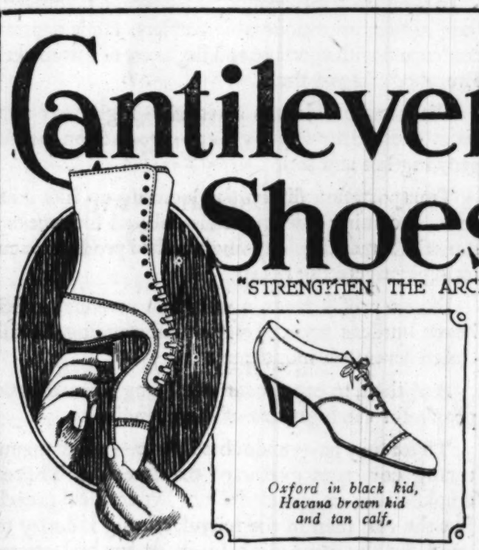
"STRENGTHEN THE ARCH"



Oxford in black kid, Havana brown kid and tan calf.
CORRECT LINES AND GREAT COMFORT
CANTILEVER SHOES (No. 57) fulfill all the requirements laid down by the Y. W. C. A.
The National Y. W. C. A., in the interests of its many thousands of members, made a thorough study of women's footwear and reported that proper shoes should have
1. A straight inner sole line, conforming to the outline of the foot and permitting the toes to point straight ahead as they do in a natural, easy posture.
2. Room for the toes without crowding.
3. A broad, low heel, set to share the weight of the body with the ball and the outside of the foot.
4. A flexible shank, allowing action of the arch muscles. Far from restraining the instep, as metal supports do, a flexible shank bends with the foot and allows perfect freedom. On the other hand, the arch of the shoe should be shaped to meet the foot at every point, so as to provide the necessary support to the small bones of the instep.
CANTILEVER SHOES combine every one of these characteristics. In addition, there are such details as a broad padded tongue to permit snug lacing without binding the muscles.
Expertly fitted by courteous salesmen. We guarantee to fit you absolutely or your money refunded.

The MANUFACTURER is doing his part

WHEN you buy a pair of shoes, a sack of flour, a stick of shaving soap, or any other manufactured product, do you consider the conditions under which these and all other goods are now made?

In producing merchandise the average manufacturer faces almost insurmountable barriers. He is constantly confronted with shortage and high cost of raw materials. Everybody knows that.

His labor problem is a veritable nightmare—labor costs mounting day by day—production-per-man growing less and less.

Transportation difficulties looming up like a stone wall. Incoming raw materials delayed for weeks and sometimes months; outgoing, finished products encountering exasperating delays.

Excess profits taxes, a war-time revenue, inflicting heavy burdens upon him, notwithstanding hostilities ceased seventeen months ago.

And then, to cap the climax, being blamed by some people for the high cost of merchandise.

There may be—undoubtedly are—a few manufacturing concerns guilty of profiteering. There are crooked lawyers, quack doctors, hypocritical preachers. But the real men in the manufacturing industry today stand for the same high ideals as our best attorneys, physicians and members of the clergy.

As big, broad, constructive business men, our manufacturers are doing their part in this Period of Re-adjustment.

They are more than willing to divide profits with the worker who puts his hands, his heart and his brains into his work.

And they want, far more than you probably realize, the good will of every American citizen. To that end they are giving the consumer as much value as they can. No money is knowingly wasted in manufacturing or selling. Net profits are only fair, although for obvious reasons political demagogues may attempt to distort the figures.

Our intimate acquaintance with more than a score of representative American manufacturers leads us to speak thus in the manufacturer's behalf.

The manufacturer is doing his part.

Not only is he overcoming the conditions which now confront him, but he is loyally supporting sound business principles.

Through his highly trained salesmen, he is showing middlemen the wisdom of rapid turn-over and small profit per sale, as against the old method of big profit and slow turn-over.

He is educating the consumer, through powerful advertising done by himself and his dealers, that to buy the standardized well-known article is cheapest in the long run.

By so doing he is eliminating many parasites of the business world who cannot exist under the searchlight of publicity.

By increasing his own business, he enlarges his buying facilities and lowers his overhead. This reduces manufacturing costs and in the end means lower prices to the consumer.

In other ways too numerous to mention, the manufacturer is doing his part—doing it now. He is helping America to retain her position as the greatest, the richest and the happiest country in the world.

Now—in these bright times of peace and prosperity the manufacturer is entitled to the confidence and the respect of the American public, just as in those black days of war when production was the biggest problem that confronted the world.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

APRIL 11, 1920.

MICHIGAN NINE HAS CLASS THAT MAKES A CHAMP

Pitcher Parks, Shortstop Knode, Real Stars.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 10.—[Special.]—One needs to associate with the coach and players of the University of Michigan only a few hours to gain the impression that after all it may be possible for college boys to play a pretty fair brand of baseball. It was not even necessary to see the athletes in action on the diamond.

The field was too wet from snow to be used, but any observer could tell from the actions of the boys working in the shelter of the grand stand and from their talk in the dressing room that they were as well up on the fine points of the national game as many of the professionals, differing only in their manner of speech.

Many Champion Players Back.

Michigan won the championship of the Big Ten last year. Many of the champions are back and some new stars have been uncovered, while one or two old ones in military service a year ago have returned. Consequently it seems the Wolverines are to be reckoned in the coming combats. If any team succeeds in winning more battles than they do, that team should land the title.

It is evident from the start that Michigan's success is largely due to the expert and dignified coaching of Carl Lundgren, old time Cub pitcher in the championship days of Frank Chance, and previous to that star pitcher of the University of Illinois.

Carl is qualified beyond measure for the job. He has all the experience and inside knowledge of a major leaguer, and at the same time the refinement and culture of a college man. He has been here six years and has become a part of the university, the same as the original walk and 'The Yellow and the Blue.'

Parks a Real Pitcher.

But it is about Capt. Vernon ["Dicker"] Parks that one must talk. Under the precise direction of Lundgren he has developed into a college pitcher de luxe. Not since George Sisler was here to dust the boys off the plate has Michigan boasted such a pitcher, and the chances are that if Parks desires to take up baseball as a profession he may land with the big fellows as easily as Sisler.

He's a right hander with unusual speed, a splendid curve ball and control. He simply waded through the conference teams a year ago, setting some of them down without a hit. If a batter got as many as four blows it was something worthy of a boast.

Parks came to the front last year, his first season on the varsity. He has two seasons yet to play, by which time he should know as much about the tricks of the slab as his coach does.

Other Slab Worthies.

But it won't even be necessary for Parks to pitch all the games. Ed Ruzicka is back. It may be remembered that Michigan won the diamond championship in 1918 also, and that the pitching of this Ruzicka person was the reason for it. Last summer he was in the service. Now he, too, has two more years to play.

Ruzicka got his start with Harrison Tech in the Chicago High school league, and his battery mate in those days was E. G. Mraz, now third baseman for Michigan. The other hurlers from here are H. J. Saunders, a senior, and J. C. Smith, a junior. Parks has a younger brother also trying out this year, and developing fast.

Lieut. B. Genebach, Lundgren has developed a capable catcher, to hold his star fingers. He played half back for Tad's football eleven last fall, but in spite of that seems to be an athlete. Some of the others on the team are showing up well, even though they were guilty of being members of that football outfit. Among these are J. Perrin and Arthur Weadock, both outfielders.

Real Star of Squad.

However, the real star of the team hasn't yet been mentioned. He is Kenneth [Mike] Knode, shortstop last season, who is destined to play either part, or second this season. This lad is said to be about the best ball player in the conference. He's a swell hitter, but on his feet, knows how to run the bases, and can perform on the infield like a professional.

Already Mike has been approached by big league clubs. Last year he was captain of the team. In June he will be graduated from the medical department, and, though he might play professional ball, he seems greatly taken up with medical work, and anxious to get at it. A friend of his stated that Mike believes he might go out and be a $6,000 ball player for a few years, but in the mantime forget his medicine, and thus lose the chance to be a $20,000 physician after a few years of practice.

To Take Southern Tour.

Other worthy infielders on the squad are: A. J. Karpus, working at third or second; P. J. Van Boven, trying for short, and J. F. Newell and C. W. Froemke, fighting it out for first base. F. E. Kirchgessner and E. P. Langenheim are speedy athletes, who are slated for left field and center field, respectively, with Perrin in right and Weadock as utility man.

The first conference game for the Wolverines will be against Indiana at Bloomington April 24. Previous to that they will have taken a week's tour in the south, playing six games against southern colleges, which should fit them to face the speedy pitching of Mr. (Kay) Kunkel of the Hoosiers.

TALES of a TEE-BOX TOURIST

You can't keep a golf bug down. This particular individual is a disciple of Morse and is employed at a loop news emporium. He resides near Jackson Park because of its excellent golf facilities.

As the courses are not open he practices on a strip of sand near the old bathing beach. It was a cold afternoon and he was practicing a few mashie shots when a lone motorist came along the driveway. He slowed up his machine and as he passed took occasional peeks at the player.

"That's not curiosity," said the golf bug, "that's envy."

GOLFERS TO PLAY ANOTHER SEASON AT OLD WINDSOR

BY JOE DAVIS.

Through the generosity of officials of Armour institute south side golfers will be able to play over the old Windsor course this summer. The property recently purchased by the institute will not be built on this year and has been turned over rent free to a club now being organized.

This will be in charge of Henry G. Berry, former manager of the Windsor Golf club. Unfortunately for the players this club house has been sold to a nighborhood club, making it necessary to obtain other quarters.

New Greens to be Ready.

Some of the turf on the putting greens was sold, but as there is plenty of fine turf on the course it will be possible to have new greens ready at an early date.

It is proposed to charge a reasonable membership fee to cover the expenses of the club house and the upkeep of the course, and there is no doubt the limit of membership will be reached inside of a few weeks, the course being so close to the city.

Beverly to Entertain.

Following the example of several local clubs Beverly country club has planned for a series of Sunday afternoon entertainments, the first being scheduled for next Sunday, when Miss Gladys Swarthout of Chicago, soloist of the Minneapolis symphony orchestra, will sing.

There was practically no golf on local courses yesterday, as the ground still is soft from the snowstorm of Easter Sunday. The Skokie club had a big crowd out for its opening dinner and dance.

The little course at Jackson park was open and about fifty players were out. Weather permitting, it will be open again today.

Nail Pro at Memphis.

Parker Nall, diminutive star of the Wheaton Golf club, has forsaken the amateur ranks and taken a position as professional with the Overton Park club of Memphis, Tenn.

The Austin Golf club will hold a general meeting at the town hall, Lake street and Parkside avenue, Tuesday night to reorganize the club and elect officers. A proposal to change the name to the Columbus Park Golf club will be acted on. Supt. John A. Pelka of the West Parks board informed a delegation from the club that a shelter with locker accommodations will be provided.

Jack Daray of the Highlands club of Grand Rapids was in the city yesterday on his way home from Biloxi, Miss., where golf had a big season. At Greenwood, Miss., where golf was unknown five years ago, a party of lumbermen have constructed a course and presented it to the city.

O'Neil to Lay Out Course.

George O'Neil, the Lake Shore professional, has been engaged to lay out a fifty-four hole course for the new Pasadena Golf club. Part of this will be constructed over land occupied by the Altadena Country club, so that eighteen holes will be ready for play next winter.

Olympia Fields will open its competitive season May 15 with a medal play handicap. The sports and pastimes committee has put a large number of match play events on the program, believing this style of play more popular than medal.

TED CANN BEATS CHICAGO STARS IN RECORD SWIM

Detroit, Mich., April 10.—[Special.]—Those two sterling Chicago swimmers, Perry McGillivray of the Illinois A. C., and Clement Browne of the Chicago Athletic association, were forced to take the spray from the heels of Teddy Cann of Detroit in the 220 yard event of the National A. A. U. championships in the Detroit Athletic club's tank tonight, but they made the Detroiter establish a new world's mark in order to accomplish the feat.

Cann's mark for the distance was 2:19 4-5, which eclipsed Norman Ross' old record of 2:21 3-5. The local swimmer assumed the lead at 150 yards and held it to the finish, winning by seven yards. Browne and McGillivray staged a pretty race, the former winning from his fellow townsman in a desperate finish by a scant foot.

The girls team of the Women's Swimming association of New York also established a new world's record when they defeated two Detroit Athletic club teams in the 400 yard national A. A. U. junior relay championship event in 5:03 3-5.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

National prohibition may or may not have an important bearing on the outcome of the major league championship races which are to be inaugurated next Wednesday. Its effects will be watched with interest by those who know the injurious results of wartime prohibition during the latter half of the baseball season of 1919. The results may be better this year, yet sufficiently powerful to be noticeable in the league standings next October.

Intemperance among professional ball players practically disappeared in the decade previous to the war. The "booze hounds," of whom a few were left in the early years of the twentieth century, soon dropped out, either because of age or reduced vitality. The youngsters who replaced them, warned against the incompatibility of hard liquor and athletic endeavor, eschewed intemperance through selfish motives, if for no other reason.

Switch Their Beverage.

That does not mean the majority of ball players became teetotalers. Many of them drank beer, perhaps unwisely, but not too much to impair their bread winning ability. After July 1, when it became difficult to obtain the 2¾ per cent which had satisfied their thirsts, some of them turned to the stronger beverages which wartime prohibition merely increased in price, without reducing the visible supply discernible to the naked eye of any one who did not wear government goggles. The number of players who turned from beer to booze increased as the drought continued.

That explains some things which caused comment last season, including certain events in the late lamented world's series.

Can They Get It? They Can.

Whether national prohibition will decrease or increase the consumption of alcohol among major league players remains to be seen. Because it will be more difficult for the average American camel to obtain, it does not necessarily follow that it will be more inaccessible to the average diamond star. There are so many folks who count the cost of red likker, even at $25 or $30 per quart, as nothing compared to the privilege of shaking the hand that wields a dangerous bat or propels a snaky curve that opportunity is certain to knock frequently at the doors of favorite players.

The effect of yielding to such temptations will be more injurious to the athlete than those of the "buffet." The trained athlete could inhale a skinful of 3 per cent malt bitters occasionally without seriously impairing his faculties in the immediate future. Not so the player who furtively imbibes even two or three portions of high proof stuff, donated from private stock, or who samples the varied brands of kick emanating from the secret still or the home brew formula. And there is always the chance the "stick" in a covert drink may be real wood.

Depends on Common Sense.

Whether or not intemperance increases among major league players this year depends largely on the common sense and foresight of the athletes themselves and on the alertness and influence of their managers. Also on the wisdom and sincerity of their friends.

Aside from that the outlook for the different teams in the coming pennant races has been pretty thoroughly discussed in these parts recently, and it only remains for me to summarize briefly here the prospects of the National league contenders.

The Cubs, if Herzog can avoid the surgeon's knife until fall, will have a stronger team than when they started last spring, and if Tyler comes back they will be better than when they finished last fall. Without Herzog the infield will wabble; without Tyler the Cubs will need another good southpaw. They have the best catcher in the league and a strong, fast outfield.

Handicaps in Chestiness.

Cincinnati will have its world's champions intact with all the handicaps that result from chestiness. Moran will find it harder to maintain discipline and a fighting spirit. Moreover, the new pitching rules may affect the Red slabmen more than those of any other team.

The Giants are a strong outfit except on the infield, which is experimental. There McGraw will have two inexperienced players and a pair of veterans who seem to be slipping. And the new rules will make it necessary for him to do his pennant shopping early.

Brooklyn has a sterling pitching staff, a patched up infield and outfield and a reliable catching staff. Pittsburgh, under new management, is likely to prove the 1920 brunette horse. The Pirates are strong on the slab and good in the outfield, but uncertain on the infield. The Phillies also have practically a new leader. They are a bunch likely to make lots of runs, but have only a fair defense.

Cardinals Hitters.

The Cardinals are a good hitting, fast team, but had the worst pitching staff in the league last year. The Braves' infield is their best bet. Their pitchers are doubtful and their outfield fair.

Chicago, Cincinnati, New York, Pittsburgh, and Brooklyn have good chances for first division berths, but Philadelphia, St. Louis, and Boston will surprise their friends if they climb out of the second division.

PASKERT CLEARS BAGS BY TRIPLE AND BRUINS COP

Kansas City, Mo., April 10.—Grover Alexander, who is slated to start the season at Cincinnati next Wednesday, worked six innings against Kansas City today, the Cubs winning, 8 to 6. Aleck had lots of stuff.

Rudolph Weber replaced the Cub ace, but was a trifle wild in the ninth and Newkirk finished. Paskert's triple in the fifth, cleaning the bases, was the feature. Pitcher Gaw, purchased from Newark, joined the Cubs today. Score:

RUTH HITLESS AS ROBINS WIN 13 ROUNDER, 3-2

New York, April 10.—Thousands of fans crossed the river today to get their first glimpse of Babe Ruth in a New York uniform. The $150,000 home run king not only disappointed them by failing to get a hit, but the Yankees fell down on the job and dropped a thirteen inning game to the Robins, 3 to 2.

The noted Babe came close to one of his famous clouts when he slammed one over the right field fence, but it went foul.

A fumble and two singles gave the Robins a pair of runs in the third inning, but the count was evened by the Yankees in the second and fifth. The two teams ran tied until the thirteenth, when Konetchy singled and scored on Ward's sacrifice and Elliott's single. Score:

OPENS WARFARE ON SUNDAY BALL

New York, April 10.—Resumption of warfare against Sunday baseball, legalization of Sunday theatrical performances and other "worldly" amusements was announced tonight by Dr. H. L. Bolby, secretary of the Sabbath Observance committee of the Presbyterian church.

The wave of bolshevism and anarchy striking at American institutions is due, he said, to a lack of respect for Sunday laws and the failure of public officials to enforce these laws.

"Church maintenance and extension would be sorely handicapped, should we lose the Christian Sabbath," he said. "If the Sabbath goes, the church must follow, quickly."

In the Wake of the News

"PLAY BALL!"

WEATHER permitting the White Sox will open the local baseball season Wednesday at Comiskey park against the Detroit Tigers. The Cubs will engage the world's champions in Redland.

Neither Chicago team is picked by the dopesters to win the pennant. The Sox are given a good chance against Cleveland and Detroit in the American league, and the Cubs against Cincinnati and New York in the National league.

Being a pennant contender without being an actual favorite for the flag is an ideal strategic position. All managers pit their strongest teams against the favorites. Star pitchers are reserved for such occasions.

Have you ever observed that more mishaps befall favorites on the race track than the other horses? The public choice is more likely to be cut off or carried wide on the turns or suffer bumping. That is because all other riders are watching that horse and trying to dissipate his chances. So with baseball.

The Cubs, offhand, would seem to have a better relative chance than the White Sox, who won in the American league last year with a numerically inadequate pitching staff of class largely by their nerve. Mitchell's infield will mean much in the final story of the Cubs' standing at the end of the season. With the Sox it depends on the slab outfit and first base.

Rub, rub, rub,
Till the long steps
And the endless corridor are done.
Day in, day out.
Often it seems my back will break
And my arms fall from their sockets,
And my legs crack at the kneecaps,
Worn raw by the crawl, crawl, crawl
Over the hard floor.

A poet sang that he dreamt
He dwelt in marble halls.
I stretch my creaking joints;
I gaze at my hands where the skin
Is broken, and at the hangnails
Where the blood seeps through
And mixes with the dirty water.
Then I look around at the polished

What a fool that poet was!

But today I saw Blank, the profiteer,
Hobble to his waiting limousine;
It took him ten minutes.
I've heard he can't sleep, and has

FELSCH IS HERO IN MILWAUKEE AS SOX WIN, 6-2

Milyaukee, Wis., April 10.—[Special.]—Oscar Felsch came home today and showed the town folks something. In the presence of many admiring relatives and friends he smashed a two-baser to the left field fence in the sixth inning with two of his comrades en route and started the Sox on their way to a 6 to 2 victory over the Brewers of the American association. The populace had clamored for a "heimlauf," but a double is satisfactory when neither club has made a run.

Claude Williams and Red Faber also showed the natives a few paragraphs of excellent pitching. Lefty fanned six men in five innings and allowed only one hit. Faber there tossed the remaining five rounds, giving four hits and whiffing five.

Good Hurling by Faber.

Faber's work was keen in the seventh inning, when Milwaukee made one run. Smith singled, but Gainer and Huhn were so puzzled by Urban's come-back curve that they forgot to strike at the third one. After Eddie Collins had kicked away a tally, Danaher stood idly with his bat on his sholder while Faber bent over a third strike.

The Sox got three runs in the sixth. Collins walked and stole. Jackson also walked and Felsch biffed the heroic two-baser. He scored on Jourdan's single that almost took a hand off First Baseman Gainer.

Risberg Starts Hitting.

One of the pleasant features of the contest was that Swede Risberg started hitting. He collected two singles, a triple, and walked once. He batted in a run and scored two himself. Risberg has been weak with the flail this spring, but seems to have struck his stride. He reported for practice late, so it was no wonder that he was slow getting his eye on the ball.

Manager Gleason arrived just before the game after a mysterious conference with Owner Charles A. Comiskey in Chicago. What the boss had to say to the manager was not made known by the latter, but it was noticeable that Gleason was in an amiable frame of mind. The opinion prevails that Gleason wants an experienced first baseman and that Comiskey is about to unloosen the wallet for that purpose.

End Spring Games Today.

The Sox conclude their spring training games here tomorrow, after which they return to Chicago for two days' practice in preparation for the opening of the American league season.

Sox Yannigans Cop, 6-5, in Game at Des Moines

Des Moines, Ia., April 10.—[Special.]—The White Sox Yannigans defeated Des Moines today by a score of 6 to 5, but it required ten innings to do it. Lowdermilk did the slab work for the Sox, with Lees behind the bat. Des Moines used two pitchers, Bucklew and Filmer. The Yannigans play here again tomorrow, then go to Moline for a game on Monday, which will finish their training trip schedule.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Many of the old traditions and customs and all of the old prices will be gone when the baseball season of 1920 in its new and modern dress is ushered into our midst Wednesday with the White Sox and Detroit Tigers combating at Comiskey Park.

There is no place for the old fashioned 25 cent fan, but indications are there will be hosts of $1 rooters to take his place. The $10,000 player has replaced the $2,500 performer and peanuts and pop will be ten a throw, but regardless of diamond prima donnas and high prices, the old game will be the same as twenty years ago.

After getting away late in the training period and experiencing bales of trouble with eccentric and mercenary players, the White Sox under the spirited and old fashioned methods of "Kid" Gleason have rounded into form and are ready to open the American league race in better shape and with a brighter outlook than they had a year ago.

Not Shot to Pieces.

They went through a year ago and won the pennant. Consequently the chances this time are splendid, regardless of rumors that the team is shot to pieces and destined to utter failure.

Gleason was a star player twenty years and more ago. He hasn't changed his ideas of the national game and his success of last year and his chance for honors again lie in the fact that he possesses the ability to handle the tough situations that arise in modern time from the whims and fancies of the new style diamond performers.

The "Kid" has a rough manner and a clean heart that commands the respect of each of his men. If they aren't in the fight for the pennant, it will be because they have declined physically, or because injuries will handicap them.

New Man on First.

All of the performers of a year ago will be back except Chick Gandil, and his place at first base will be filled either by Ted Jourdan, utility man of 1917, or "Swede" Risberg, shortstop last year. If the latter, Buck Weaver will go from third to short and Fred McMullin will play third instead of utility roll. In any case, it looks as if the team will not be greatly weakened by the loss of Gandil. If Jourdan should strike the stride here that he did at Minneapolis last year, it will be strengthened.

The comeback of "Red" Faber, however, is the main reason why Gleason is hopeful. Last season Red wasn't worth a dime to the Sox. He sat on the bench all summer and wondered why he didn't regain his old time strength of 1917. A year in the navy had pulled him down. He was under weight. Now, it looks as if Gleason wouldn't sell the Cascade boy for $25,000. His old weight is back and with it his old speed.

A Sweet Slab Staff.

With Faber back and with Eddie Cicotte, Lefty Williams, and Dick Kerr in their form of a year ago the Sox pitching staff will be O. K. If the pitching staff is O. K. it's hard to see any reason whatever why the Sox shouldn't be fighting the leaders for the flag. There are stories of factions on the club and internal troubles. Gleason is just the man to handle anything like that, and he'll handle it if he has to floor a few athletes to make his point clear.

A pre-season guess on the race would be that Detroit and Cleveland will be chief contenders with the White Sox for the pennant. Both of those teams are splendidly set up for the coming grind. Both are well organized and well fortified. If Jack Coombs can succeed in making a good pitching staff out of the hurlers over there the Detroit team shoud run away from all others. It's the best offensive machine of them all.

Cleveland Is Sanguine.

Cleveland has an outfit capable of producing runs enough to win a pennant. Like Detroit, the Cleveland team needs better pitching than it has had in the past. Over in Cleveland they are sure they will get it. If they do Tris Speaker's boys are likely to be battling some National league bunch next October.

Down on Broadway, a street in a town called New York, they think the Yankees will win the pennant. With Babe Ruth on the team those New York fans can't see how the Yanks can lose. But the team is losing Frank Baker, at least at the start, and it is no faster than it was a year ago, when it lost out because of the plodding way the fellows ran the bases.

Two Dark Horses.

There are two dark horses in this race, St. Louis and Washington. Neither looks like a pennant winner, but if things break just right either might go over. The Browns have hitters and one great star in Sisler. They seem to lack pitching strength, but have some bright prospects for improvement in that department.

The Senators have three kids in the infield. In every other way they are first class. If those kids, all three of them, should make good, Walter Johnson might have a chance to get into a world's series after all.

Whether the Red Sox or Athletics will finish last is hard to figure. Mack's team has youth and enthusiasm. The Red Sox haven't.

HORNSBY HOMER WINS FOR CARDS OVER BROWNS, 2-1

Victory Keeps N. L. Team in St. Louis Series Fight.

St. Louis, Mo., April 10.—[Special.]—It was Roger Hornsby's day at Cardinal field this afternoon. Until the seventh inning it appeared as if the Browns would breeze along with a 1 to 0 victory to clinch the city championship, but the Te[illegible] sashed a single to center in the seventh inning, sending Stock to third, in position to count on Fournier's single. The run tied the score, shaping affairs beautifully for Hornsby's home run with one man out in the ninth. The wallop was dead to left field, but caromed off Johnny Tobin's shin and rolled to the left center field fence.

It was a fitting play to climax an excellently staged contest, but it was rough on Allan Sothoron, who had a slight edge in pitching on Doak all afternoon. The final score was 2 to 1. The outcome places the Cardinals within one game of the Browns, the latter having three victories and the Cardinals two. They play again tomorrow. Score:

GIANTS DEFEAT RED SOX IN GAME, AT NEW YORK, 1-0

New York, April 10.—[Special.]—The Giants and Red Sox, hardy travelers over a 6,000 mile route, from Texas to Manhattan, reached the end of their long tour at the Polo grounds today.

A triple by Kauff to right field and a single by Frisch, closely interwoven in the seventh frame, gave the Giants enough of an edge to take the measure of the Red Sox, 1 to 0. About 4,000 turned out to welcome the McGraw men. Score:

LURE OF BOXING APPEALS TO ALL SPORT PATRONS

Novice Usually a Regular After First Bout.

BY RAY PEARSON.

Boxing is one sport that gains its patronage and support from people in all walks of life. The glove sport, in this respect, differs to a considerable degree from other sports, such as football, track and field athletics, automobile racing, and the turf. Just what makes fans of the business man, the newsboy, and the college man is a question not easily answered, unless one wants to refer to that time worn saying that it "takes redblooded men for a redblooded sport."

However, the intention of this story was not to explain what makes a boxing fan, but to inject a few words into public print, telling of some of those who would rather sit at a ringside than at a dinner table. There is a saying that one hears when a discussion is held for the benefit of a fan newly born to fistiana and that is that a fan once initiated to ringside doings always is a fan. The game "gets" 'em and they stay got.

College Coach Becomes Fan.

Perhaps as good an example of how a boxing fan strings with the game after once being "enlightened" is that of a chap named Lewis Omer. Wherever college sports are known Omer also is known, for before the world war he was athletic director at Northwestern university at Evanston, Ill. Before the war Omer didn't know anything about boxing. He was "well up" in track athletics, football, and other sports in which the college student indulges. He could tell you without consulting a record book how fast this or that athlete could go over the sticks in the sixty; he could tell you whether John Smith was a better gridiron player than Bob Jones, and cite facts to prove his contention and wisdom.

But that had nothing to do with boxing, and Omer had nothing to do with the glove sport, either, until he decided to do his bit by going into service. He became athletic director at Camp Grant and there rose to the title of captain. It was while at this camp that he received his initiation into the mysteries of the glove sport.

First Duty, Then Pleasure.

As boxing was the biggest sport at the army camp, it was necessary for Capt. Omer to delve into it in a big way. He did with the result that he became more than a convert. In fact a few months' work with boxers actually made him a rabid fan; and if one asks him today what he thinks about the ring stuff he'll tell you it's the greatest sport ever.

Now here's another example. The writer walked into the office of a dentist recently. The object of the visit was to have a bum tooth fixed, a visit that under purely business conditions would have required something like perhaps twenty or twenty-five minutes. But it took something like an hour and a half to complete the job, and all because this particular tooth physician had seen his first ring bout. He had been invited by a friendly dentist who already had acquired membership in Addam, to attend the scrap between Jimmy Wilde and Jack Sharkey at Milwaukee.

Tongue Wags; Work Lags.

Now this dentist whose job was to fix the troublesome molar knew a lot about other sports, principally those in which the collegians take part, for in his college days he himself had engaged in athletics. But he didn't know anything about boxing until he saw Sharkey swat the Britisher. Now to hear him discuss Jack Dempsey, Wilde and all the other "big timers" in the game one would think he knew all about it.

Jack Johnson-Fulton Go Announced by Tom Jones

San Diego, Cal., April 10.—A twenty round bout between Jack Johnson, ex-heavyweight champion, and Fred Fulton of Minnesota, will be staged at Tia Juana, Mexico, in May or June, according to Tom Jones, Johnson's manager. Jones said he had obtained the consent of Tom O'Rourke, Fulton's manager. Jones talked to O'Rourke over long distance telephone at Portland, Ore.

"O'Rourke's terms are a little steep but I think we can meet them," said Jones.

Sam Langford Wins in His Debut as Wrestler

Sam Langford, heavyweight fighter, made his debut as a wrestler last night at the Eight Regiment armory, where he defeated Marty Cutler in a one fall match. Although a little green at the game, Sam winglocked his opponent and before Cutler could recover he was pinned with a headlock in 3:25. In the semi-windup Jack Anderson won from Cyclone Clancy with a half nelson and arm in 4:52. "Kid" Edwards and "Kid" Carter, amateurs, wrestled fifteen minutes to a draw in the opener. The proceeds of the show, staged by Kid Howard, went to a fund to purchase athletic equipment for the regiment.

Martinson and Cazeau in Mat Draw at C. A. A.

Paul Martinson and Cazeau wrestled thirty-five minutes to a draw last night in the main bout of the wrestling show at the Chicago A. A. The contest was featured by rough work. In the opening event Peterson defeated Cyclone Jenkins in 15:18 with a body scissors. Herman Koch won from "Kid" Kelly in the other bout with a body scissors and wrist lock in 19:20.

Maysack of Parker High, chairman of the Chicago Public High School Athletic league, yesterday announced the team and individual qualifiers in the annual indoor swimming championships, the finals of which will be held next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Y. ILLINOIS TEAM WINS AND LOSES AT BIRMINGHAM

Birmingham, Ala., April 10.—[Special.]—With Ingram pitching a superb game and the team backing him in grand style, Howard college this afternoon triumphed over University of Illinois baseball nine, 3 to 2. Airtight pitching featured throughout the contest, both sides obtaining only four hits. Howard's safeties were cleanly hit, but two of Illinois' were of the scratch variety.

Ingram's curves were breaking just right, and the Illini lads were unable to touch him with any degree of success. Wrobke pitched excellent ball himself, but had one bad inning, the sixth.

LOCAL NATATORS BIG FACTOR IN OLYMPIC TRIALS

Ross, Wallen, Browne and Taylor National Stars.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Chicago, home of some of the world's greatest swimmers, will be the Mecca for aquatic sports this summer when official trials for the American team which will compete in the seventh Olympiad in Belgium will be held in either Lincoln park lagoon or the basin at the foot of Randolph street.

Although Ted Cann of the Detroit A. C. has won the National A. A. U. 50 and 100 yard championship indoor swims, the former New Yorker may be defeated in the open water by any of the local talent. The shortest race, free style swimming, in the Olympic games will be the 100 meter event. For this event there is a wealth of good swimmers.

Cann's Mastery Disputed.

Perry McGillivray, D. L. Jones, Horn, and Town of the Illinois A. C. and Browne, Elliott, Topp, Small, and Huszagh of the C. A. A. will take a lot of racing to be beaten out of first place. Harry Hebner, the war horse of the Tricolor club swimming team, is not all in by a long ways and will bear watching.

For the 400 meter swim, the Chicago talent will be practically unbeatable. Norman Ross, the "Big Moose," and Capt. Buddy Wallen, both of Illinois A. C., and Clement Browne, C. A. A., are a trio at their best over the distance.

Bolden Good in 1,500 Meters.

Ross, Wallen, and Browne will be the mainstays in the 800 and 1,500 meter swims, while Bolden of Great Lakes will be a factor. Pickel of the C. A. A. will be a starter and may land a place in either event.

Chicago will be well represented in the 200 meter breast stroke. G. H. Taylor of the Chicago A. A. annexed the National A. A. U. 200 yard national championship recently in the Illinois A. C. pool by defeating Stephen Ruddy of the New York A. C., a nephew of Joe Ruddy, captain of the Mercury Foot water polo teams of the old days, by a touch. A. Brunhardt of the Chicago A. A. was third.

Crack Back-Strokers.

For the 100 yard back stroke there are a number of swimmers who will make a strong bid for the team. Perry McGillivray of the Illinois A. C., holder of the world's 150 yard back stroke record for 75 foot tanks at 1:48 4-5, is the leading candidate. Harry Hebner of the same club, holder of the 100 yard record for 75 foot pools at 1:08 2-5, is another contender. Abe Siegel of the Illinois A. C. and Fergus and Hafner of the C. A. A. are the other leading back stroke artists.

WOODS AND WATERS

EARLY FISHIN' HINTS.

THESE are the days when a male citizen may seize his trusty spading fork and proceed to make a garden, filled with visions of Golden Bantam sweet corn and other garden sass. Everything goes lovely until another actor appears upon the scene in the form of a wriggling, twisting insignificant angleworm. Then something happens.

As everybody knows, the suggestive powers of an angleworm in the springtime are very great, and a new train of thoughts enters the mind of our gardener. Somehow he just can't help remembering that his old cane pole is hanging up under the eaves in the woodshed, and instead of the "snap" of wax beans he seems to hear the regularly timed "slosh, slosh" of an anchored boat or the gurgling swirl of running river water.

The gardener now tries to get his thoughts back on lettuce and beets, but the pesky worms won't let him. He grits his teeth and continues with his garden making. Then he discovers an old tomato can. Ceres, or whoever it is that watches over the destinies of amateur gardeners, groans, but the red gods chuckle.

Our gardener is a changed man. Instead of digging as if it were a duty, he goes at it now with great gusto. He keeps on with his garden making—until his worm can is filled. Then he goes a-fishing.

Early fishing for black bass, where it is permitted by law, is not ordinarily productive of good strings. Until the water temperature reaches 50 to 55 degrees the bass are sluggish with a sort of spring fever feeling—you know how it is yourself—and show little interest in casting lures or flies. We all know exceptions to this rule, but even when they do strike they fight with little spirit, and all the joy is taken from the sport by the knowledge that bass taken in April or early May are ready for spawning. Pickerel, however, are through with family duties before May 1, and one may take them without any regrets.

The little western pickerel or grass pike may be given attention now. These little, red finned fellows inhabit creeks by choice and snap viciously at minnows, cut bait, small spinners, or even angle worms. The same applies to its eastern cousins, the reticulated pickerel and the banded pickerel.

Rivers are likely to be high and roily now, and bottom fishing in the deep holes is the rule. A big, generous gob of worms on a strong hook behind a nickel plated spinner, about the size of a dime, fished deep and moved slowly, will tempt almost any river fish from a thirty pound carp or channel cat to a hungry chub. That's one of the beauties of early river fishing; you never know what you are going to hook. A nice, lively minnow, although not fancied by carp, suckers, and such fishes, is a likely early lure in rivers where there is a variety of fish life. Catfish, basses, sunfishes, pikes, and perches all dote on minnows.

The river wall eyes are over the spawning period by now and they are often induced to take a minnow early in the spring. Let it be a good sized one, if possible, on a long shank hook behind a nickel or brass spinner. These river wall eyes do not bite as willingly in the spring as they do in the fall, after the first frost, but early anglers must take chances.

The lake fisherman at this season will probably get better results if he will fish in deeper water than he does in early summer; a good place is the "drop off"—the outer edge of the shallows. The wandering schools of perch, bluegills, and other sunfishes are bound to come snooping around here in their ceaseless search for food. A small minnow, especially if the water is roily, is the prize lure for these fishes, but an angle worm is taken almost as willingly if the fish can find it.

For fishing a worm in roily water we are a strong believer in having a small spinner above the hook to serve as an attention getter. A worm thus reinforced should be moved slowly up and down in the water to give motion to the spinner.

If the early fisherman conquers his spring fever to the extent that he is willing to troll he should move his boat slowly over the edge of the deep water. A most effective early season trolling lure is a small spoon hook baited with a pickerel gullet or the white skin from a perch's belly cut "swaller tail." Whenever a fish is hooked by this slow trolling it is good strategy to drop anchor there and fish that spot well with minnows or worms. Thus one often locates a school of feeding fish and that is one of the secrets of big strings in early fishing.

Whether the early angler gets many fish or not, he at least goes fishin', and that is one of Mother Nature's best spring tonics. No spring fever medicine known to science equals a fish pole and a can of worms.

DOBIE GATHERS CORNELL ELEVEN FOR SPRING WORK

Ithaca, N. Y., April 10.—A new era in Cornell football was ushered in this week when Gilmour Dobie, recently appointed head coach for three years, called out for spring practice prospective candidates for next fall's varsity. This is the first time in years that spring gridiron practice has been held here. All of last year's returning regulars, who are not engaged in some other sport, as well as last fall's freshmen, are expected out in togs by the end of this week.

Some six or eight members of last fall's varsity team form the nucleus of of the spring training squad.

Dobie comes to Ithaca in a different capacity than is usually the case with football coaches. Like Jack Moakley in track and Charles E. Courtney in crew, he will make Ithaca his home and will be here all year around. This arrangement is one of the features of his contract.

SPEED DISPLAY WHEN MEYERS MEETS KILONIS

Wrestling fans who have tired of seeing the big fellows in action and are anxious to see the lighter and faster grapplers work will have an opportunity on Wednesday night when Johnny Meyers, the local wrestler, and John Kilonis of Norfolk, Va., meet for the middleweight championship. This will be the main bout of the wrestling show staged by Col. James E. Stuart's Eleventh infantry, I. N. G., at the Second regiment armory, Madison and Rockwell streets.

Meyers and Kilonis will weigh in at 158 pounds at 3 o'clock on the day of the match. They will wrestle on a winner's and loser's end.

The main bout will be supported by a corking semi-windup between Lou Talaber and Ben Stefanski. Both are contenders for the middleweight title and the match is attracting a deal of interest. Benny Ginsberg, the Jewish heavyweight, will meet Casamere Powloski, local Pole, in the opener.

Billiard Notes

WITH eight games to play, three of which are carded for this week, Augie Kleckhefer is leading the Chicago league race with 10 wins and 4 losses. Jim Shea of Ace and the Morin-Kenney combination from the Recreation room are tied at 11-5 for second place. Klatcher, who was second last week, has been forced into fourth position. He has won 9 and lost 5. Bert Tredick is next with 9 wins and 6 losses, while Carl Steffanson follows with 9 wins and 7 losses. The race is one of the best in the history of the league. Tomorrow night Kleckhefer will meet Lundgren at Lundgren's and Dougherty will play Burton at Forrest's.

B. Butler Sutton has returned from his eastern trip, on which he showed fine form. Maurice Daly, Albert Cutler, and Tom Gallagher agreed that the Chicago veteran is playing better than in several years and that the stroke he adopted last December is a big factor in his improvement.

Local horsemen are showing interest in the announcement of the South Shore Country club of its annual horse show, which will be held at the club arena Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, June 10, 11, and 12, with a night performance Friday.

"The show will be held during the most perfect season of the year," said J. K. Dering, chairman of the committee in charge. "The arena, overlooking Lake Michigan, is an ideal spot, and the affair will be marked by many smart society gatherings."

Associated with Mr. Dering on the committee are Thomas E. Wilson, W. E. Skinner, William E. Dee, William J. Sutherland, Thomas H. Cross, Harry Newman, E. J. Lehmann, O. W. Lehmann, and William Daniel.

"I know of no way of judging the future but by the past." Patrick Henry.

Patrick Henry voiced no new discovery in this sentence, but a truth which even after ages of experience is often overlooked.

The Peerless factory has tried to perform each day's work so that as a part of the past it should become also a guarantee as to the future.

"History," says Carlyle, "is the essence of innumerable biographies." The history of Peerless is written in the lives of the individual members of this closely-knit organization, in their ideals and the processes by which they have attained their ideals.

For they have gone about their tasks in an orderly manner, each to his own, but all focused constantly upon the goal of better motor cars; without the unhealthful haste induced by a desire for quantity production, but carefully, scientifically, efficiently.

For more than eighteen years they have built every Peerless car entirely in their plant—that is why the Peerless is, in the finest workmanlike sense of the word, a unit, and not an assemblage of disassociated units.

For the past five years—since the development of the two-power-range, eight-cylinder principle which has made Peerless famous—they have not seen fit to make a single fundamental change in the design of the car which has answered instantly and enduringly every demand made by the exigencies of motoring, and from past accomplishment we are content that the future shall be judged.

Because of its deep significance to every reader, we record that the foundation of our business reflects equally enduring fundamentals.

With us—a pledge goes exactly for the service and intent it promises. We cannot do more and we would not do less. It is this "good business" platform which privileges us to refer any prospective customer to any present Peerless owner without any reservation concerning men, methods or merchandise.

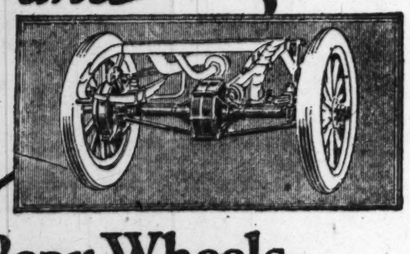
Spark Plugs and Rear Wheels



APPLY the full force of the motor to the rear wheels and one of two things must give way—the road or the load. But cut down the efficiency of the motor with a poor spark plug and these wheels will turn up less mileage than you have a right to expect.

Bethlehem Spark Plugs enable the engine to transmit every ounce of power to the rear wheels. Improved engineering ideas reduce liability of fouling. Special-formula porcelain reduces breakage and current-loss to a minimum.

Bethlehem Spark Plugs are tested individually on special electrical and compression-testing apparatus before they leave the factory.

CON CON PLANS TO HAVE VOTERS STUDY ITS WORK

Methods of Distributing Document Discussed.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Springfield, Ill., April 10.—[Special.]—It has been decided definitely, although informally, to give every voter in the state an opportunity not only to study the full text of the new constitution, but to read the reasons for each section, before it is submitted to a referendum.

To facilitate this, Chairman Walter H. Wilson of the committee on expenditures, today sent to each county clerk of Illinois a request for suggestions. At an early meeting of the committee State Supt. of Public Instruction Blair will be called in to get his judgment of having the school children of the state do the distributing and correspondence has been started with the federal government to ascertain whether any unusual coöperation can be obtained from the postal department. Furthermore Chairman Woodward has called a meeting for next Wednesday of all chairmen and the committee on rules to discuss this and subordinate subjects.

Wants Full Text Printed.

Delegate Wilson desires that the full text of the present and the new constitutions be printed. He would have the old constitution printed in text type, the parts omitted from the new constitution placed in brackets and the substitute and new matter of the new constitution in black faced italics.

In addition, he would print for each changed section a statement of the convention's purpose, what the section will permit and prohibit, and what the anticipated general effect will be.

That is practically the system used in New York in 1915. It is not up to the committee on expenditures to decide these questions, but they must be considered to prudently handle the funds of the convention. To distribute by mail such a document to every voter the committee estimates it will cost $30,000 for each 1,000,000 voters, and they reckon that 2,500,000 copies would be necessary.

Printed in Four Languages.

Following the 1870 Illinois convention 55,000 copies of the present constitution were printed, 30,000 in English, 15,000 in German, 5,000 in French, and 5,000 in Scandinavian languages. These were supposed to be distributed by the delegates themselves. In addition the convention agreed to pay $30 to each weekly newspaper which would print the constitution in full.

Of the recent state conventions, Michigan, in 1908, set the modern pace. It attempted through the postmasters to get a copy to every voter. Through a federal government arrangement enough copies were sent to each postoffice to supply one copy to each person who obtained mail at that office. This pamphlet called attention to every change, the reason and purpose for it, and gave limited auxiliary information.

The Ohio convention in 1912 attempted to improve this system. It printed the same information in less convenient form and attempted wide distribution. In addition, it spent $63,000 for newspaper publication of the same material. Two newspapers in each county were assigned the task of such publication.

One Committee to Be Named.

The committee on expenditures is now getting information from Massachusetts, which held its convention in 1918, and additional data from New York.

The only constitutional convention committee which has not been appointed is that on address and submission to the voters. President Woodward is expected to announce the personnel of it this week, that the plan may be decided upon.

International Motor to Vote on Stock Increase

New York, April 10.—[Special.]—A special meeting of International Motor Truck corporation stockholders to vote on increasing the authorized common stock from 80,840 to 320,000 shares of no par value has been called for April 27.

Of the new issue 70,777 shares will be used to pay the 100 per cent stock dividend recently declared to holders of record May 7 and 141,554 shares will be offered to stockholders at $50 a share, at the rate of two for each share held by each at the close of business May 7.

Subscriptions are to be made on or before May 24 and payment is to be made in four equal installments, as follows: May 24, July 24, Sept. 24, Nov. 24, 1920.

First National Considers Capital Stock Increase

The directors of the First National bank are considering an increase in the capital stock, which now is $10,000,000. While no action has been taken, there has been informal discussion of such a plan and this has been reflected in an advance in the market quotation of the stock from around 490 to 515, the high mark, within the last ten days.

It is regarded as probable that the First National may issue new stock and offer it to stockholders on favorable terms. This was the method adopted when the capital was increased in 1910.

The combined capital, surplus, and undivided profits of the First National and the First Trust and Savings bank, which is owned by the parent institution, is $37,471,539.

Michigan Estate for Sale

About 1,400 acres in the Michigan woods, 65 miles north of Grand Rapids. A farm on the place of about 100 acres largely takes care of the expenses of the property.

In the center of the tract is a lovely little lake of about 15 acres, fed by springs and always full of water. The house, situated on a hill to the south of the lake, contains nine rooms all on one floor, most of them large and finely finished, two bath rooms and a furnace. On this hill is a smaller house for servants with four rooms, a garage, an ice house, a studio with a billiard table, and a wind mill and tank which furnishes water for the house, gardens and lawns.

On a hill to the east of the lake is the farm house, two barns, a silo, tool sheds, etc. There are two wells on this hill, one supplying the house through a compression tank and the other being in the barnyard and operated by a wind mill.

The soil is streaked, part being good to farm and part of it light and covered with woods. The climate is invigorating and delightful. There are many small lakes and streams in the vicinity and fishing is good and there is partridge and duck shooting.

While this place is practically in the wilds, it is on the edge of farming country and has good roads and telephone connection and rural free delivery mail service. Price $30,000.00.

MAY OATS LEAD GRAIN ADVANCE; CASH AT $1.06

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

New high marks were made for all grains, with oats in the lead. Heavy buying of May oats affected the cash and No. 2 white sold at $1.06, an unheard of figure. The strike situation at the railroads was the main factor and induced heavy covering by shorts, as only forty-seven cars of grain of all kinds arrived.

Profit taking and week end evening up, few traders caring to have open commitments over the Sunday holiday, carried prices off from the top, but net gains were 1¼c on May oats, with July up ⅝c, while September was ¼c lower. Corn gained ⅝c to ¾c, rye ¼c to 1c, and barley 1c to 2½c.

Oats and rye were the leaders in the grain market in the closing days of the week, with May oats up 5¼c, compared with a week ago, and other futures 1⅜@3⅝c higher, July leading. Rye gained 4½@4½c, barley 4@4½c. May corn is 2¾c higher and other futures 1⅝@2⅜c higher for the week.

New Top on Corn.

A wave of short covering in corn induced by the spreading of the rail strike throughout the country carried July and September into new ground on the crop, and the May to $1.68⅜, or within 3⅝c of the high point made last July. The close was at intermediate figures as the resul of heavy profit taking by longs through commission houses, and week end evening up.

There was considerable selling on the fact that the Corn Products Argo plant was to shut down until the rail strike was settled, as that industry has been unable to ship its product.

Unlicensed longs must liquidate May corn and other grains before the first day of that month. The bulge in the last few days has cut down the short interest materially, and the technical position has been weakened to such an extent that scattered longs might find the market poorly supported unless they take advantage of the sharp bulges to get out, regardless of the fture course of values.

Record Prices for Oats.

Cash oats and futures in all markets sold at new record figures. There was heavy buying of May and selling of July here to close spreads, and the difference widened to 9½c, against 8½c the previous day. May closed within ½c of the top, while September was a shade lower.

While rye sold at new high figures on the crop, the best prices were not maintained, due to heavy profit taking by the northwest. Export demand was brisk, with 32c over May f. o. b. steamer bid at Baltimore. Receipts, 1 car. No. 4 sold at $1.93½.

Small Gains in Lard.

Provision prices were irregular. Lard had support from shorts and was sold on the bulge by Armour, while there was selling of May and buying of September at $1.50 difference. Weakness in hogs was offset by the strength in corn values. Packing here since March 1 aggregate 537,000 hogs, or 246,000 less than last year. Prices follow:

Home-Building Money to Loan!

At 5½% and 6%

We, in line with the unanimous opinion of the Chicago Mortgage Bankers Club, believe it to be a public duty on the part of the 270 mortgage firms of Chicago to do our individual parts toward financing the house shortage, and accordingly we have set aside a fund to loan at 6 per cent interest to help build homes in Chicago. We will consider some exceptionally secured house loans at 5½%.

Hog values suffered a further break of 20@25c, best closing at $15,000, with day's average at $14.40, the lowest in more than months. Receipts at 5,000, including 2,400 direct to Swift from Omaha and Sioux City, were largest of the week.

The Armour houses remained out of the hog market all week and no shipments were made to eastern points, due to the embargo. Strike conditions at the close of the week were considered more favorable and increased receipts are expected the coming week.

Cattle trade closing day of the week was in better shape, with the tendency of values higher, some heavy steers selling at $14.50, high point of the week. All of the 4,000 sheep received Saturday were billed direct to Swift.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 5,000 cattle, 13,000 hogs, and 5,000 sheep, against 13,788 cattle, 42,191 hogs, and 11,749 sheep corresponding Monday a year ago. Two years ago receipts were 25,290 cattle, 60,919 hogs, 13,142 sheep.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

May oats show congestion and were up to 96c, or 10c under the cash price for No. 2 white at Chicago and Kansas City. Seaboard exporters and big cash handlers there are said to be long and were credited with buying of May and selling the July yesterday. They were the leading interests, while professional traders had September to sell and weakened it, making a small net loss for the day, while the nearby futures showed strength.

Scattered selling of May corn and buying of July was a big feature of the market yesterday. Trade sentiment is mixed. Prices are high and there is a nervous situation, owing to a possible settlement of the strike, which would increase receipts and at the same time make it possible for liberal shipments to the east.

Trading in wheat for future delivery is not expected to be resumed much before July 15, on which date the grain corporation's contracts with mills expire. Julius H. Barnes, however, says that as the time approaches for the expiration of these contracts conditions may be such as to allow of trading at an earlier date.

Millers are estimated to have resold around 250,000 on cash wheat to the grain corporation. The latter's offer to rebuy on account of inability to make shipments, however, expired yesterday, and it is understood practically all of the wheat resold was disposed of to other mills.

A complimentary banquet is to be given Julius H. Barnes, wheat director of the United States Grain corporation, in New York on April 22. It is expected there will be 2,000 in attendance. All the leading bankers, financial men, and representative grain men of the country are to attend.

Spring pigs are reported as dying by thousands in Illinois, Indiana, and Iowa, as shown by various official and private reports from the three states. The number of sows held on farms in Indiana is officially reported as 90 per cent of last year, or the same as Missouri.

Small Investors Buying Rail Stocks.

Ownership of the largest and best managed railway systems of this country is more and more passing to small investors. Letters received by this department for months past indicate a steady increase in the number of small holdings of railway shares.

The Pennsylvania railroad, whose stock always has been widely held, recently issued figures showing an increase of nearly 11,000 in the number of its stockholders in the last year. There are now 117,725 owners of shares, and the average holding has a market value of only about $3,600.

The same tendency has been seen in most of the great systems. If complete statistics on this point were available the figures would show that the old idea of the railways belonging principally to Wall street is far out of date. The financial district may still own most of the poor roads, but the combined savings of small investors have been steadily taking over ownership of the better ones.

The railroads are just entering on a new and critical period of their existence. It remains to be demonstrated whether they have been "unloaded on the public" or whether the small investors by the weight of their combined influence can restore them to a sound and prosperous basis. The new owners should watch developments closely.

The money of small investors has been going into industrial stocks as well as rails in the last few months. The United States Steel corporation reports a recent increase of nearly 10,000 in the number of holders of common stock. As of Feb. 28 the average holding of common was sixty shares and that of preferred forty-five.

ADDRESS X T 527, TRIBUNE.

The B. F. Goodrich Company
5 Year 7% Convertible Notes

THE history of rubber is an absorbing story of the development of one of nature's wondrous treasures into one of the industrial giants of the twentieth century.

Among the basic materials, rubber, in its multiplicity of uses, holds a unique position—its sensational evolution as an industry has been second only to the automobile. As a business, it is as staple as leather.

The B. F. Goodrich Co., pioneer in the manufacture of pneumatic tires, is one of the leaders in the industry. The popularity of Goodrich tires taxes the capacity of its vast plant at Akron, where a floor space of 107 acres, in modern buildings, is engaged.

Net profits available for interest during the past five-year period averaged $14,217,000. Its net earnings for the year 1919 were $17,279,612, or more than eight times the interest requirements on the present note issue. The company has no mortgage indebtedness. Earnings of more than 16% on the common shares would indicate wonderful possibilities of these notes under the conversion privilege.

The record of the company is one of marvelous growth and earning power which bespeaks the confidence it enjoys with the trade and the public.

FEDERAL RESERVE GETS NEW LOANS OF $12,050,000

The Chicago federal reserve bank, which a week before for the first time in its history borrowed from other federal reserve banks in order to maintain its legal reserve, last week increased its borrowings by $12,050,000. The weekly statement shows the Chicago bank has indorsed and turned over to other reserve bank paper representing loans totaling $20,050,000, whereas this item, which is carried as a contingent liability, stood at $8,000,000 on the preceding week.

By this increased borrowing, the bank was enabled to improve its reserve position. Reserves against combined note and deposit liabilities rose to 41.12 per cent from 38.74 per cent in the preceding week, while reserves against note circulation, after deducting 35 per cent against net deposits, rose to 43.84 per cent from 40.47 per cent.

The ratio of reserves also was helped by an increase of $17,951,794 in gold reserves, a decrease of $15,814,384 in borrowings by member banks at the reserve institution and a decrease of $2,455,714 in total deposits. On the other hand, note circulation increased $6,389,865.

New York Showing Poor.

The weekly statement of the New York associated banks made a rather poor showing. There was no evidence of the continued gold imports finding their way into the banks' vaults. This would indicate a policy of restricting Wall street loans by the Federal Reserve bank. The chief features of the statement were a decrease in deposits of $67,838,000, a decrease in loans of $46,463,000, and a decrease in cash of $18,700,000. As a result, there was another decline in the excess reserve, which decreased $10,043,600 from the preceding week, this item standing at $11,777,100. The figures follow:

N. Y. Reserve Statement.

The New York Federal Reserve bank's statement showed a weakening in its reserve position. Gold reserves declined $122,385,000, gross deposits fell $38,400,000, note circulation declined $12,228,000, while loans increased about $18,000,000. The member banks reduced their deposits with the reserve institution by more than $25,000,000.

The consolidated statement of the twelve Federal Reserve banks shows a continued improvement in reserves. The ratio of total reserves to net deposit and note liabilities combined rose to 43.3 per cent from 42.9 per cent in the preceding week, and the ratio of gold reserves to note circulation, after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposit liabilities, rose to 48 per cent from 47.4 per cent. The New York Times.

New York, April 10.—[Special.]—Stocks were under pressure during the first hour of trading today, later showing more resiliency.

It looked as though the railway strikes were utilized by short sellers to put out fairly large lines of industrial shares, with the purpose of covering before the end of the session, and late purchases for this purpose lifted quotations from their lowest levels.

The list was, however, decidedly irregular at the close, with declines far outnumbering gains. What looked like pool activities were discernible in a few issues which had moved forward the day before. The railroad shares, which might have been expected to be more directly affected by labor disturbances than the industrials, moved sluggishly without a definite trend.

Easy Money Is Factor.

A survey of price changes during the week should be considered to a degree in the light of developments allied more closely with local speculative influences than with the larger business and transportation aspects. Call money lent at 6 per cent pretty steadily until an upturn to 10 per cent occurred on Friday.

Evidently easy money was seized upon as a bull argument by the professional traders, who actively bid prices up until Friday morning, then turned to take part of their profits.

The impression that call funds would continue for some time in substantial supply at relatively low rates was firmly maintained in commission house gossip, not being greatly disturbed by the sudden swing of the rate upward from 6 per cent. It is to be said, nevertheless, that day to day followers of stocks have displayed a tendency to "play close to their chest," not pursuing the rise far before taking profits.

Act to Aid Stutz Shorts.

The protective committee formed two days ago to look after the interests of the shorts in the corner of Stutz Motor Car company stock today addressed a letter to stock exchange houses inviting the coöperation of the firms and their clients who might be short of Stutz stock in any action which the committee might decide upon.

This was the only new development in the Stutz situation, aside from reports from Atlantic City that Allan A. Ryan would return here Sunday or Monday with the intent of issuing a new statement setting forth his position.

Add a Touch of Anything You Please—It's the Trimming Recipe This Spring

by CORINNE LOWE

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—"She had on everything but the kitchen stove!" That piece of canned humor with which all of us are so familiar has now lost its meaning. We have included, if not the stove itself, some of the stove's own members. What did I see the other day, for instance, but a French frock of black taffeta with girdle of isinglass rosettes! Yes, really.

This is certainly a spring of elaboration. Never in this world were there so many fantastic, delirious kinds of trimming. In fact, if this sort of thing keeps up we are going to shame our South Sea island sister. We can imagine this lady with a looking glass coquettishly inserted in her wigwamlike coiffure staring at her New York rival of the spring of 1920 and saying, "Well, well, my dear, I can understand the beads, and the straw, and even the oilcloth, but when it comes to isinglass and bits of white paper—after all, isn't there such a thing as artistic restraint?"

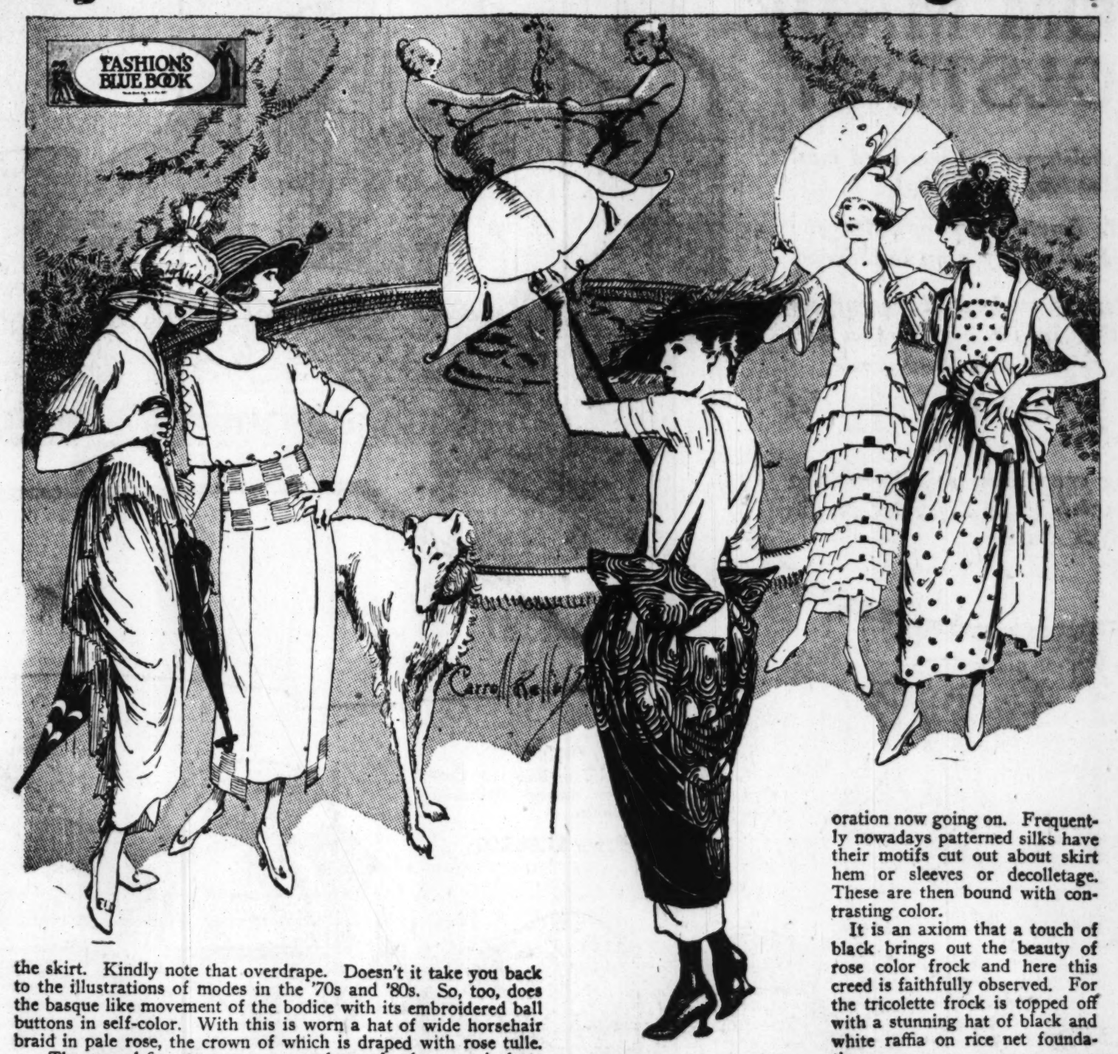
We answer her question immediately. There isn't. Embroidery and stitchery is used in such abundance that it often amounts to an all over design. The passion for plaits is registered in every kind of garment. But of all trimming accessories, beads are by far the most widely employed. Almost every other blouse or frock which you see nowadays is beaded. Sometimes these beads form a design of their own. At other times they are introduced as part of embroidery or leather motifs. Not infrequently they just pick out the printed design of the fabric.

Blue is the favored color for crystal beads and bugles. Thus, an imported blue serge which I saw the other day had motifs of dull blue crystal beads. However, blue serge certainly has an open mind this spring. One of its favored modes of trimming is the colored raffia embroidery. An even more striking manifestation of the way this material can catch any wandering germ of trimming is the use of large leather daisies in dull red which are scattered over the skirt, attached by silk stitching and centered with self-color beads. Beads again, you see!

White crystal beads are much liked on the colored taffetas and georgettes. And, by the way, so many of the new gowns of these materials designed for afternoon and evening wear look much like the gowns worn by the Velasquez Infantas. There is the same bouffante skirt—its fever slightly reduced, to be sure—the same tight little bodice with perhaps a point in the front, the same round, low decolletage.

Jade green is much liked in both georgette and taffeta, and for trimming of these we find often the white crystal beads combined with perhaps lace or gold stitching or both. Don't forget, too, that on any kind of green costume, either gold or silver forms a marvelous touch of trimming. In this connection I want to mention a jade green taffeta now on view. This is decidedly after the Spanish manner and its Velasquez line is heightened by the use of a lacy design of white and gold beads about the low, round neckline, the scalloped border of the full skirt, and the extended line of the hips. It is really a lovely creation.

The skirt, which is either plaited all over or else has some panel or flounce bearing the plait message to the world is seen again and again both in imported and domestic models. At the left we give an original version of the plait motif in this charming gown of potter's clay taffeta. The only trimming here is the plaited finish of the short sleeves and the plaited overdrape of the skirt. Kindly note that overdrape. Doesn't it take you back to the illustrations of modes in the '70s and '80s. So, too, does the basque like movement of the bodice with its embroidered ball buttons in self-color. With this is worn a hat of wide horsehair braid in pale rose, the crown of which is draped with rose tulle.



The second figure wears a sports dress of pale rose tricolette with embroidery of the same tone and the sleeves are cut out in a manner that hints at the frequent experiments in this sort of elaboration now going on. Frequently nowadays patterned silks have their motifs cut out about skirt hem or sleeves or decolletage. These are then bound with contrasting color.

It is an axiom that a touch of black brings out the beauty of rose color frock and here this creed is faithfully observed. For the tricolette frock is topped off with a stunning hat of black and white raffia on rice net foundation.

The center model brings us to the use of the regular jungles of embroidery of which I have spoken. The design occurs in white soutache braid upon a black glace taffeta overskirt draped over a narrow white glace taffeta underskirt and combined with a bodice of white taffeta. Again the stunning combination of black and white and rose color! For the hat is in tones of rose with black velvet lining and the smart little parasol contributes a black handle to its rose color silk top.

As I have mentioned in previous letters, there are two predominant and rival claims to the popular silhouette. One is the tight little bodice with the full skirt. The second is the long waisted frock girdled about the hips. The long waist line is undoubtedly gaining in favor and it is combined frequently not only with the straight line skirt but with the puffed out hip line. Thus you see it in the center figure and in the model second from the right it is written so plain that all who run may read.

This model has a gray satin bodice by way of introduction to a skirt composed of flounces of gray batiste, each one of which is bound with silver cord. The sleeves are of batiste. With this goes a hat of gray cellophane topped by a silver ornament.

One sees much nowadays of the silk bodice combined with chiffon, voile, or georgette skirt. Particularly is this true of the taffeta bodice. And many are the interesting variations worked out in this wise.

Along with the general trend to much elaboration which includes a wide employment of checks, and plaids, and plaits comes the excessive use of the polka dot. Polka? This is too gentle a word. The dot simply gallops through all kinds of fabrics. In summer frocks this is to be noted in the popularity of dotted Swiss. The dot is often in color—cherry, green, yellow, or blue—and the introduction of frocks combining organdy and dotted Swiss bids fair to become a habit. One of the most charming of such creations mingles a Swiss having cherry red dot with organdy of the same tint. The latter fabric forms plaited short sleeves, side panels, and the back and front of the bodice. The Swiss is used for skirt, suspender straps, and girdle.

The last model here indicates the raging dot in the button rosettes of beige colored taffeta sown upon a background of the same kind of taffeta. The girdle tying at the left in a huge sash contributes an interesting feature. This is finished by a hat of beige tulle embroidered in silver thread and raffia.

FROM left to right—Reminiscent of the basqueing and draping eighties is the smart afternoon dress of potter's clay taffeta glace, with its knife plaits and embroidered ball buttons. With this is worn a hat of wide horsehair braid in pale rose color, the crown of which is draped with tulle. Next, a sports frock of pale rose tricolette embroidered in self-tint, elects for companion a hat of black and white raffia on rice net foundation. In the center, the gown of black and white taffeta glace receives its motifs at the hands of narrow white soutache braid. A hat and parasol in rose and black give the proper touch of color. The new long waist line is illustrated in the next model, a gray satin bodice completed by a flounced skirt of gray batiste. Worn with hat of gray cellophane trimmed in silver gauze embroidery. The last is a beige colored taffeta with button rosettes of self-material, which is consummated by hat of beige tulle embroidered in silver and raffia.

This smart new Golf Suit of English tweed Knickers and Polo Cape adds zest to the game.

A Complete, Exclusive Specialty Shop for Women

THIS suit of Scotch homespun is decidedly mannish in its tailored lines, but very feminine in its partiality to unique features of trimming. These are the double pockets and double-crossed belt—very chic!

JADE green—that exquisite color so popular for spring—makes this gallant little suit of wool jersey just a bit more charming than it would be in any other hue! Its charms are further enhanced by modish stitching on the pockets and belts.

ONE of the reasons that make motoring such a very popular pastime is this leather coat, with its smart gabardine lining and gabardine collar. It is made of very finest quality French kid leather.

"COME out into the boulevards, where all the hearts are light," this suit of rainbow tweed seems to sing. It is made in the "semi-Norfolk" style, with very mannish lines, and, to emphasize this theme, has mannish buttons and tucks.

EVERY wise little sports coat knows that to be really "swagger" and smart one should take to oneself thoroughly English lines. This coat is made of genuine "Worumbo" Camel's Hair Chukka Cloth, in the new Chau (pronounced chow) color.

HERE'S a smart riding habit of English twill that will bring a glow of pleasure to the eyes and cheeks of its wearer that even the exhilaration of riding cannot equal! Very severely English are its lines, as is true of every successful sports costume.

STEVENS SPORTS APPAREL

THE new sports department on the fifth floor has many new ideas to offer this week in stunning sports apparel. This shop is the first to introduce unusual color developments and exclusive materials that make sports clothes especially noteworthy this season. The exhibit includes smart sporting topcoats, greatcoats, suits of Scotch tweeds, Irish homespuns and English woolens, riding habits and all accessories for the sports costume.

I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Her feet beneath her petticoat
Like little mice stole in and out.
As if they feared the light.

THERE are three good reasons—one in each line—why the above could never be written in 1920 A. D. "As if they feared the light"—ha! ha! "Sure an' that's the very last thing they do be after doin'!" says Pat, just over, and slanting them with his swiftly developing cynoo eye.

However, this is not going to be a sermon on whether they should fear the light or face it openly and frankly since the designers, the fashion books, the store windows, and the style following populace would oppose me were I to begin a Puritanical drive on skirt lengths. Besides, if they are daintily shod and stockinged and turned—there's no denying it's a dull eye they can't brighten.

They're going to be short and decidedly silhouetty! Maybe the better to show off the French toed and French bowed and French heeled. Certainly shoes never reached a broader creative genius than in this particular era. You have your choice of vamps from one inch to five in length, two or three sets of bows, straps in single file across the ankle or in double or treble or more. And heels from a half inch to three full inches high. And stockings every shade from flesh to black and back again. So altogether the face has a rival in first glance, since time and energy and everything is being done to enhance the landscape in the ground direction.

Wobbly Heels Mar Effect.

Such being the case, heels will get first consideration. Keeping them straight has been preached since Achilles made it the famous spot of vulnerability. All is lost in shoe and dress expenditure if the heels wobble to the right or the left. The higher the heel the worse the offense when they start to wobble.

The shine, too, and the lack of it has been with us since sandals were discarded with the same old arguments for a perpetual shine and not a single argument against it.

At a private fashion show I attended recently I noticed the models wore tan-ish gray suede shoes and stockings. I was struck with the saving grace of this particular color for a dressup shoe because worn with a street suit, an afternoon dress, or a summer frock they fit in perfectly. I thought it a tip worth passing on. With blue tailored or tan suit or black or dark brown they looked particularly well. The patent leather has the objection of heat drawing for spring and summer wear.

Match Hose and Shoes.

To make a perfect one piece picture instead of a two or three piece one, have your hose match your shoes in color. Wear black hose with black shoes, and unless your dress is white or light colored, avoid white stockings. The idea is to have the skirt and the shoes and stockings all thought of in terms of the "three can be company and perfectly good at that."

Wear hose to match your light topped of gaitered shoes so that there will be no conspicuous band to spoil the effect.

Putting the hose on properly has everything to do with their niceness of appearance and their wearing possibilities as well. Haven't you seen the seam running up the back of the leg in a zigzag line and spoiling the picture? Fastidious women insist that it be directly in the center of the calf of the leg and absolutely straight. The psychological effect of this care in putting them on straight is important in itself, for if one is careful about that she will be careful about every other little detail of her shoes and hose.

Besides, by a proper and careful adjusting of the stocking you may prolong its life by years. Gather the top of the hose over your hand until you have almost reached the foot, then slip the foot of the hose over your foot, adjust the foot properly, and then pull up the leg portion. Or, in other words, don't hold the stocking out and attempt to stick the foot and leg in, if you would prevent runs and thread pullings.

When Wearing Short Skirt.

All of which leads up to the point of this story. If you insist upon wearing short skirts, keep the effect from the hem to the ground as ideally presentable as the circumstances will allow—I mean your particular circumstances—and then go ahead and improve them as much as you can.

If you wish to reduce legs and ankles you would better practice the leg swinging and kicking exercise, that their shapeliness may be more pleasing to yourself and observer.

Answers to Inquiries.

FLORENCE S.: THE FOLLOWING skin whitener I am sure you will find effective used on your brown neck and arms: Zinc oxide, two drachms; boric acid, one drachm; oil of sweet almonds, one-half fluid ounce; anhydrous lanolin, one and one-half ounces avoird.; glycerin, two fluid drachms; rose water, one-half fluid ounce.

RUDIN: CORSETS WOULD HAVE nothing to do with improving your rounded shoulders. You should go in for some exercise, first learning to walk and stand correctly. If you wish, I'll send you some splendid shoulder exercises in return for a stamped, addressed envelope. If a woman is heavy, I most certainly advise the use of a corset and one that is made to fit the figure. An uncorseted figure, unless of slender proportions, is not attractive.

If We Couldn't Tell a Lie

UNCLE JIM'S STORY

DISOBEDIENT KIMBO GETS INTO TROUBLE.

ONCE on a time there were three little monkeys, Bimbo, Limbo, and Kimbo. They lived with their mamma monkey in a cage under a great circus tent, and little boys and girls came to see them and fed them popcorn and peanuts.

"Children," said mamma monkey one afternoon, "I am going to leave you alone here while I go out in the tent and race with the clown. Now don't run away. McQueen's a good man, but he has a bad temper and he was very cross this morning when he fed us."

"All right," said Bimbo and Limbo, for they were very good little monkeys and just frisked over to their swings and began tumbling about their cage.

"All right," said Kimbo, too, but he winked one eye and did not mean what he said. For Kimbo was a naughty monkey. He wore a bright green coat and cap which was where his name came from, and he was always in mischief of some kind.

"Wait till I'm alone," he said to himself and the minute his mamma was gone he slid out under the door of his cage and scampered under the tent sides without being seen.

Kimbo was scared at first, for he was only a baby monkey after all. He kept close to the tent sides and hopped along in his green coat, eating all the peanut shells he could find.

"Guess I've had enough," he thought as he began to feel rather sick. But here some small boys caught sight of him and began to chase him so he had to scamper under a small tent not very far from the big tent.

But inside the tent Kimbo nearly died of fright. There in front of him was great black Catch-Em, the grizzly bear, all dressed up in his yellow trousers with red ruffles around his feet.

"What are you doing in my tent" growled Catch-Em in a terrible voice.

Tears ran down poor Kimbo's face. Was Catch-Em the bear going to eat him up?

"Please, I'm going right home," squeaked Kimbo, for it seemed to him that Catch-Em would look a hole right through him with those dreadful sharp eyes.

How he wished he had never run away from his own cage. He tried to run, but his little feet would not move.

"No, you can't go home—jump on my back," roared Catch-Em. "I'm getting too old to dance around and make the little boys and girls laugh. You can amuse the children after this and I will eat the peanuts and popcorn."

"But I want to go home."

Then Catch-Em the bear did a dreadful thing. He raised his huge paw, which looked like a mountain to Kimbo, and what might have happened I'm sure I don't know if the tent door had not opened and in walked McQueen.

He had a black mustache and a cane, and he looked very cross and fierce. Kimbo gave one tiny squeak and started to run. He rushed out under McQueen's feet and ran this way and that. He had forgotten his way back. He last one little green shoe by a lemonade stand and his green cap flew under the merry-go-round. By the time he slid under his own home tent there was a big crowd of boys and girls chasing after him, trying to catch him.

"Help, help," squeaked Kimbo, all out of breath.

Lucky for him, he ran right into his mamma. She had just finished her race with the clown and was hurrying back to her cage as fast as she could go, thinking all her baby monkeys were taking a nap. Kimbo nearly knocked his mamma over, he was so glad to see her.

"Mamma, what do you think, I was nearly eaten by a bear," he cried.

Of course his mamma was very angry with him. She made him go to bed without any supper. And as all the peanut shells he had eaten had made him sick she gave him a big teaspoonful of bitter tasting medicine.

But Bimbo and Limbo, who had stayed at home in their cage as they were told to do, had nice brown slices of bread with molasses spread all over it.

Cream After That.

Everybody in the boarding house was dissatisfied with the "cream" which was served with the coffee. One young man, who seemed more dissatisfied than the rest of us, delighted in calling it "H2O plus." One morning we were horrified to hear him call for it under this name and the landlady standing just back of him. She watched to see what was passed to him and quickly left the dining room. Needless to say we had good cream after that. M. G. S.

Only One There.

A few years ago I happened to make a small lumber town while on the road in Washington, and stopped at a boarding house for my meals. During the meal I said to a lumberjack at my side, "Please pass me the cream," whereupon he replied in loud tones, "Look, everybody, we have an optimist among us." J. M.

Moon Lore. by Doris Blake

MORE folklore is fastened upon the moon than upon any other astronomical feature, reflecting undoubtedly the wealth of sentiment the dear old satellite is an active party to.

The myth of the man in the moon may have grown out of the lovesick young couples' hope that 'twere a man rather than a woman to whom their blissful secrets were entrusted. There is no lore substantiating this belief, however.

Some folklore hath it that the supposed man in the moon was a mortal with a passion for working on Sunday, which netted him the doubtful punishment of being banished to the moon. What an interesting transition that would be—hardly to be viewed in the light of punishment!

There are any number of versions of moon occupants. And every so often a moon "hoax" is sprung on the people, the sentiment in the average makeup delighting in foolish mysteries about the fair planet.

Another reason for the man being in the moon is that he stole wood on Sunday. He was allowed to choose between the sun and the moon as his future abode. Choosing the moon he was provided a fagot set on fire to keep him from freezing to death.

Another tale is that a poor woman knocked at the door of a rich man and begged for food for her children. He refused, whereat she wished that he would be consigned to the coldest place in existence. He was banished to the moon.

Some more keenly discerning see a woman alongside the man in the moon and account for her presence there by her churning on Sunday while the "old gentleman" chopped the wood.

A pretty eastern fancy is that the figure in the moon is that of Ina, who weaves the clouds into white cloth and who sent her husband back to earth by the rainbow ridge in order that death might not defile her heavenly home.

A Chinese belief is that there is a frog in the moon and it is worshiped.

To the Danes is attributed the fancy that the moon is made of cheese made from the milk of the milky way.

Almost as popular a superstition as throwing salt over the shoulder is making a wish on a new moon.

In some countries it is popular to courtesy to the moon twelve times and then make the wish.

To see the reflection of the moon in a well or body of water of any kind means good luck.

If one horn of the new moon is hidden, it is a sign of a storm.

Cutting and singeing hair at different periods of the moon is still a popular habit, although nonsuperstitious folk sanely protest it is the regularity of the clipping and singeing that has the effect.

"Lie on your back and look at the moon; make a wish, it will come true soon."

It is bad luck to point at the moon.

Crops planted on the increase of the moon will flourish, according to moon lore.

"Look at the moon through a new silk handkerchief. The threads multiply the vision, so as many moon as you see it will be that many years before you are married."

To see the one whom you think much about and want to see say:

"I see the moon and the moon sees me;
The moon sees some one I want to see—
O, moon, send some one back to me."

To see a full moon forming the background of a church steeple, you will hear of a friend's marriage.

If you see a new moon first through a window pane, turn over a coin in your pocket to break the ill luck.

As a weather prophet the moon is given honor by the superstitious.

If one horn of the new moon is hidden, it is a sign of a storm.

"A ring around the moon will pass very soon;
A ring around the sun gives water by the ton."

If the new moon falls on a Saturday, the following twenty days will be wet and windy.

If the crescent of the new moon is tipped so that the water could run out, it indicates dry weather.

When the moon rises red and large, with clouds, rain may be expected.

Magnetic Orbs.

I have never told this to any one, and would not be telling it now if I had to sign anything more revealing than my initials.

I was managing a restaurant, and, during the absence of the cashier, had taken charge of the cash register. A girl with the prettiest pair of black eyes I have ever looked into came up to the counter and laid down a bill and a 40 cent check, giving me a friendly smile. I placed the bill in the cash register and slowly counted out $4.60 in change while I returned the smile and gazed into her eyes. O, those eyes!

She deliberately recounted the change and placed it in her purse, smiling at me again and giving me the full benefit of her magnetic orbs. After she had gone and I had stilled my beating heart, I turned to close the cash register. Imagine my feelings when I discovered that there was not a single $5 bill in the drawer!

I had given Brighteyes $4.60 for a dollar bill. My face turned a fiery red and if there had been a hole handy I would have crawled into it. But as there wasn't, I unobtrusively slipped $4 from my own pocket into the cash register and made a few resolutions.

Out Fell the Fish.

Although I experienced my most embarrassing moment almost a year ago, I have not forgotten it yet. After fishing for almost half a day all I caught was two small fish, which of course I did not wish to display, so I wrapped them in a small piece of paper and put them in my hat. While sitting in the car homeward bound, who should enter but my fiancée. I tipped my hat as she came forward and to my surprise out fell the fish, but that was not all; when I stooped to pick them up they jumped all over the floor, not being entirely dead. When I finally caught them I can assure you I did not put them back into my hat.

Patterns by Clotilde

How to Use the Patterns

THE shirtwaist No. 9603, which is shown today, is a useful addition to most wardrobes. And there is such a wide choice of materials, from the heavy linens, wash flannels, etc., to the lovely ginghams, batistes, organdies, crêpes, or georgettes.

See that the back and under arm lengths are right, and don't take a chance with materials that are to be laundered and shrink. The cloths are so lovely before being laundered that many will risk their not giving trouble afterwards. But they surely will unless proper allowances are made.

The fronts are gathered on the shoulders, and in basting the shoulder seams together hold the front next to you and arrange the fullness evenly. Gather in small stitches, else the fullness will lie in uneven, ugly plaits.

No. 9584 is a simple, attractive design and not difficult to make. The skirt should be finished in the back with a "wash" placket, which means the long strip that goes from one end to the other. This requires special attention at the end of the opening, where the turning in the strip is made, else there will be a pucker, or maybe a short space where the strip and skirt show little spaces.

To avoid poor work there, clip the seam each side of the turning point, lay the entire length out straight, and backstitch in small stitches for a space of about a half inch each side of the turn. Then, after the basting has been finished the rest of the way, the entire length can be stitched in a seam, and the turning point will be firm and smooth.

Embroidery of all kinds is so popular as trimming it will be pretty to decorate the edge of the peplum with something of the kind. And part of the same design should be used on the sleeves and the front of the waist.

The length of the peplum can be changed to suit the figure by measuring down from the bottom all the way around the desired number of inches, but always remember the lower edge is quite circular, especially through the sides, so it will have to be carefully handled to avoid stretching.

The finish at the neck is a piece of work that will require care. The left side of the neck of the waist, from the middle back to the right edge of the front, should be finished with a facing, and the right side of the neck left with the raw edge. Then the collar is stitched together around the lower edge in a seam on the wrong side, turned right side out, and basted together near the upper edge. Exactly in the middle of the back the collar should be clipped to the depth of a seam, say one-half inch, and the left side of the collar set into a narrow band, beginning exactly in the middle of the back and extending to the end of the collar. Then the right half of the collar is basted to the raw neck edge, a narrow bias strip is basted on and stitched in place, and the facing hemmed down over the seam. The left side of the collar is then fastened to the dress with snaps.

No. 9580 is a dear little dress for some small girl. To get the best effect two materials should be used, a plaid or some other design for the main part of the dress and a plain color for the front and sash.

While the skirt can be plaited or gathered, it will be prettier if plaited, and even in a wash dress the plaits will not be difficult to iron well.

Plaid gingham for the dress and a plain gingham in one of the colors used in the plaid will make up prettily, and the sash and front can be bound with still another of the colors in the plaid. Or if a more dressy material is desired, taffeta or some one of the flowered silks or silk crêpe would make up attractively.

Many women have difficulty in sewing hooks and eyes, snaps, or buttons on so they come together exactly as they should. In marking for hooks and eyes or snaps, turn the garment wrong side out and pin the two edges (of the waist, for instance) together, first pinning together at the neck line and then at the waist line. After these two places have been pinned together, the backs or fronts, as the case may be, are pinned together at intervals close enough to hold well. Then, beginning at the neck line, pins should be put in at regular intervals all the way down, sticking the pin straight through both thicknesses. After this has been done mark with a sharp pencil on both hems a short mark exactly on a line with each pin. Then when the dress is unpinned you will have accurately marked places for the fastenings, and no ripping will be necessary.

9603—Woman's waist. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 1¾ yards of 36 inch or 1⅓ yards of 44 inch material. Any size requires ⅝ yard of 36 inch contrasting material and 2¾ yards of plaiting.

9584—Misses or small woman's dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years. The 20 year size requires 4¼ yards of 36 inch material or 3⅜ yards of 54 inch.

9580—Girl's dress. Sizes 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 12 requires 3½ yards of 36 inch material with ¾ yard of plain material and 5¼ yards of binding.

Seeks Friendship.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been reading your column for some time and thought probably if I wrote you I could meet some gentleman of good character who would like to make the acquaintance of a lady of refinement. I would like him to be middle aged. I am near middle age myself."

I wish I could be the means of making acquaintances for my lonesome readers. There are so many of them, it would seem, who somehow unfortunately miss the home they crave above everything else, but you must understand that it would be a tremendously difficult business for me to attempt to find friends among the other sex for readers because of the responsibility involved. I have no way of knowing the character and responsibility of correspondents other than I can gain from the letters received, which would hardly be sufficient were matrimony the object in view.

Going with a Fellow.

Dear Miss Blake: "I am 16 years of age and I am going with a fellow, but I don't care for him. My parents like him and want me to go with him. Do you think I ought to go with him or not?

JEANE."

Aren't your parents a bit unkind in forcing you to go steadily with any young man at your age? It sounds like most unreasonable parental conduct, and I think you would better try some persuasive daughterly tact on them.

MOTHER'S EASTER BONNET.

AFTER designing hats for a millinery house for six years, I opened up a shop of my own in the stockyards district of Chicago.

One afternoon a young man entered my shop and asked to see some hats for an elderly woman, explaining that he was a farmer who had come to Chicago with a carload of cattle, selling at a great profit, so he wished to surprise his mother with something she would enjoy—an Easter bonnet.

I phoned mother at our apartment across the street and she came over. With mother as a model the young farmer, accepting my suggestions, selected a pretty bonnet. Before the afternoon was over the young man spent the $50 intended for gifts for his mother, purchasing gloves, handkerchiefs, scarf, and the like, touring our neighborhood under my directions. He went homeward bound a joyful youth, happily guarding his precious purchases.

Not quite a year passed when my mother died. Lonesomeness and worry led to ill health; my business began to fail, and upon the doctor's advice I closed the millinery shop and with no particular destination I bought a ticket for Denver, intending to seek health and rest there.

Too miserable to care about anything, I sat staring out of the train window, when suddenly the train came to an awful jerk and stopped. Quite unexpectedly a hat from a rack above came tumbling down and fell into my lap upside down. Picking up the hat I was about to return it to its owner, an elderly woman in the seat behind me, when glancing at the hat lining I saw my name imprinted in silver bronze on the lining. The hat then must have come from my hat shop in Chicago!

I asked the woman how she came to purchase the hat at that particular millinery shop. She, a nice, chatty, motherly sort of a woman, came to sit with me and quite proudly related the story of her son's first visit to Chicago and of his purchasing an Easter bonnet for her. I recognized the hat and after listening to her story of the trip I informed her that I happened to be the "nice young lady" who helped her son make the selection.

Her surprise was complete. She gathered me into her arms and kissed and hugged me, insisting on thanking me over and over again for my kindness.

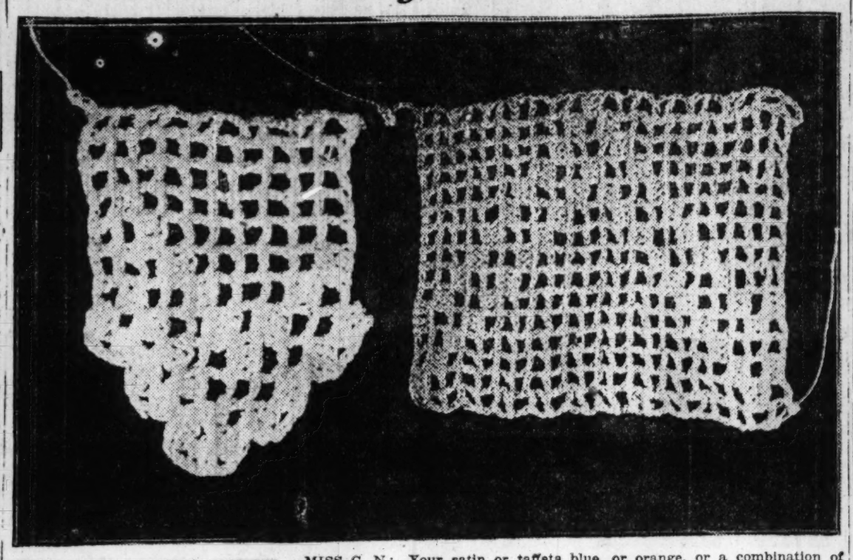
As we rode along I found myself quite unconsciously pouring out my troubles to the sympathetic listener, and when she heard that I was going to Denver with no one there to greet me, she insisted that I give up Denver altogether and instead stop with her for a few weeks on their farm in South Dakota. I accepted the invitation.

The rest of the spring and all of summer found me feeding chickens early every morning, and riding out in a one horse buggy on moonlight evenings with Jerry at my side.

I soon decided that Jerry was the only man I could ever love and the country appealed to me. I'm back in Chicago now, selling the little property I have and purchasing my trousseau, for I am a promised June bride. J. H.

Practical and Fancy Needlework

By Clotilde.



If you have any question relating to sewing that you would like to have answered write to Clotilde, Chicago Tribune, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

MISS C. N.: Your satin or taffeta blue, or orange, or a combination of blouse, which you intend wearing with those colors. For a lightweight material your brown dress could be embroidered for a blouse, georgette, or crepe in black or the right shade of green, de chine would be suitable.

INSERTION AND EDGING.

THE accompanying illustration shows an insertion and edging that work up beautifully for a number of different purposes. Done in fine thread, the insertion and edging are beautiful on sheets and pillow cases, using simply the insertion on the sheets and both on the cases. Done in heavy cotton, the edging is stunning on bath towels.

Make a chain of forty-eight stitches, then turn work around to start back. Work one double crochet, putting it in the fifth stitch from the end, then work another, putting it in the next stitch, and so on until you have made four double crochet stitches. Then work a chain of two, then a double crochet, putting it in the third stitch from the last double crochet. This leaves a chain of two at the bottom as well as the top. Then crochet a chain or two, then another double crochet, this time making the group of four, as before.

Then keep on with the chain of two stitches, and then one double crochet, until you have come to the end of the first chain, which should show ten little squares.

Then make a chain of five stitches and turn the work around to go back again. You see the little squares are made of a chain of two on all sides, so the chain of five at the ends makes another square, when the middle stitch is taken up by the double crochet when that end is reached again.

The illustration should make the work easy to follow, there being two groups of four double crochet stitches in each line, gradually working towards the opposite end until there is a sort of ladder of eleven of them. Then you start the groups going towards the opposite end again, and so on indefinitely.

The edging is the same general design as the insertion, except that there are shells made at the lower end. These shells are made of two groups of the double crochet stitch, three in each group, with a chain of two between the two.

At the place where the edge forms a point make three groups of the double crochet, three in a group, and a chain of two between each group.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

CONCEITS OF THE SEASON.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special correspondence.]—Gentlemen of science, I take it, will scarcely be interested in the party of the first sketch. For, whereas they are beginning to interest themselves in a possible fourth dimension, the lady here displayed has not even a third. Hardly more than is visible here on paper is visible to the naked eye in life.

Of length and breadth she has a plenty, but for the matter of thickness, she is like a cross section of a manakin which might have been dissected for a slide to display the fashions perhaps to another planet, under a microscope. She comes as nearly being a flat surface as anything in the way of the human figure that I have ever seen, and a paper doll has just about as much thickness as she.

This is what the French call a "fantaisie," and that is their way of saying that even they consider it too dressy to wear to market and that you are not expected to appear in it at the woman's club except on the Shakespeare evening.

This little conceit is composed of bright orange taffeta, and neither material nor color do much toward toning it down. Need I mention that it is hooped (you can almost figure that out for yourselves) and that it has frillings of the taffeta going horizontally across the widest area of the sides. On the outer rim of the left side of the skirt, and about a mile away from the woman herself, is a black bow. The back is covered with a draping of the same color as the dress.

The creator of this piece of art is Lanvin. But do not let me give the impression that I saw it at her shop. I have not as yet seen her collection, although I hear that it is very pretty indeed. The other day a friend who buys many things there said to me, "Let's go up and see the things at Lanvin's." I agreed and went tagging along after her up the stairs.

A Fantastic Evening Gown by Lanvin.

When we reached the last lap of the climb, a woman blocking the passage demanded of my friend if she had a rendezvous—not a vendeuse or saleslady, and whether she was a customer—but whether she had a rendezvous. My friend shamefacedly said "no," whereupon the woman shooed her away with her apron in the gesture with which my grandmother out in Indiana used to banish the chickens from the back porch. My friend in humiliation departed, I after her like a trailer.

It was a wonderful day, and I was relieved to be able to go conscience-clear and sit in the Tuileries. But I could not but reflect on the policy of some of the French. That woman buys things there. I have a friend who dresses her daughter completely from those models, although she prefers another house for herself. Her vendeuse has been trying to persuade me to buy from her for a long time. This policy must be a great assistance to her in her work. I am going round one of these days, and when I am ready to get in I expect to get in, but meantime it is astonishing how complete my life still seems to feel without the experience.

I only mention it because American women are going to have something of this sort of treatment here and there this summer, and if I hear of any of them putting up with it, I expect to be provoked. Most of the houses are most hospitable; but if they are not, remember there is enough chic on the boulevards to satisfy us simple minded Americans for some time. I saw the dress described on the stage of one of the theaters, and it is really a work of art.

A Blue Serge Dress With Accordion Plaited Skirt.

A conceit of the season is the high ruff. Whether it will be popular only the future can disclose. Almost every year the French launch some sort of movement in favor of a high collar but French women and Americans alike turn it down. Now I hear people at the openings say, "Get that thing from round her neck so I can see what the dress is like."

Still, there is scarcely an afternoon from or a tailleur without its ruff. They are made separate, so that they cannot do much damage, if they do not do much good. The girls pin them to their hair in the back to make them stand high, and they are often accordion plaited.

Whether or not you like the ruff, the accompanying dress is nice without it. It is of blue serge, the skirt accordion plaited, and the bodice plain. There is a white kid belt and the cuffs and the collar are of plaited organdie. Worth is the author. Many people are saying that he has some of the prettiest models of the year.

Madeleine & Madeleine seem also to be among the favorites. You will see from the accompanying model and the first one that the houses do not seem to care how big they make their bows this year, nor where they put them. This bow is of blue and gold brocade, and is the source out of which rises the train, which flows down the right side of the gown and along the floor for something less than a yard to the right and back of the wearer. Big blue buttons form the belt and go, like suspenders, over the shoulders. The remainder of the dress, which some old fashioned people—in Switzerland and in parts of Holland—might regard as the principal part, it being the dress itself, is of black jet and tulle.

Bright Sayings of the Children

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

I took my boy for his first visit to my sister's home and he was highly excited over having her two little girls to play with. When the time came for his nap I took him into one of the bedrooms and put him to rest just as I observed the rules at home. All was quiet for a few moments, when we suddenly saw the door leading to the bedroom open slowly. He was afraid of me and still wanted to come back to his playmates too badly to stay in there. For five minutes he stood on the other side of the door while we waited amusedly for the forthcoming defense, when he quietly peeked out and asked, "Did somebody knock at my door?"

A. W. T.

Arthur was visiting in the country where playmates were few. He amused himself with a little neighbor girl younger than himself, but on being invited to play with an older girl well supplied with toys, he entirely abandoned his former playmate, regardless of all her attempts to lure him back. On being remonstrated with by his aunt for his neglect of Millie, he disgustedly remarked: "O, Aunt Emma, I'll go back to Millie some day, but a fellow sometimes wants a change."

Mary was the only girl and took an active part in all the rough games of her brothers. The fact that she was a girl was a handicap which often spoiled her fun. One evening Aunt Tillie was amusing Mary's mother by telling fortunes from cards. Mary showed such keen interest that Aunt Tillie asked her to make a wish while she cut cards for her. Of course the right card came up and the wish had to become true. But Mary would not believe.

"Now, please, dearie, won't you tell us what you wished for?" he aunt asked.

After some hesitation Mary replied: "I wished I was a boy."

J. L. B.

"Why, Esther, I thought I left a happy little girl at home playing with her dolly," I said as I came in from a trip downtown.

"You did," said Esther tearfully; "but my happy is all ungladded 'cause my doll's broke."

C. R.

Ross was explaining something to his baby sister Grace, and when he finished Grace said, "Huh?" Ross patiently began all over again and when he finished the second time she said "Huh?" again. Ross explained several times, until he finally got tired and said, "O, sister, you asks too many twestions!"

Billy had a pugilistic encounter the other day and his mother said: "Why, Billy, I'm hurt to think you hit Oscar that way."

But Billy squared himself by saying: "I'd be worse hurt than you are if I hadn't."

While visiting us, Althea was heard to use a slang expression which did not sound well in so small a child.

"Be careful, Althea," we told her. "Everybody that says anything like that around here has to put a penny in this little box."

"Well," said Althea, "that's all right; but I'll bet if you tried that scheme on my papa, you'd get a lot of nickles."

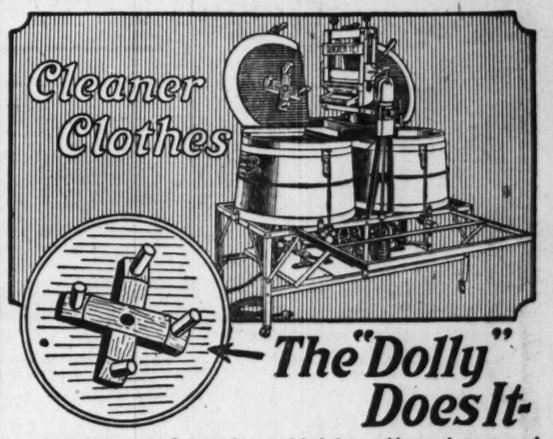
Cleaner Clothes



The "Dolly" Does It-

The fundamental principles of successful clothes washing are hot water and plenty of good soap. Hot water expands the textile of the fabric. The soap dissolves the dirt and the water washes it away. The Quicker-Yet self-adjusting, cross-arm "dolly" agitates the water, making the best suds possible. Thus the soap is used to best advantage. The cross-arm "dolly" allows the clothes to nest in between the arms of the dolly, removing strain from the pegs, washing the finest fabrics without harm. No metal protrudes through the Quicker-Yet dolly. The dolly can be raised, while in operation, so as to get a different hold on the clothes if desired. Is it any wonder that the does your washings quicker and cleaner? And remember that the cypress wooden tub keep the water hot from start to finish as they retain the heat. Also, bear in mind that in a Quicker-Yet Washer, the clothes are under water all the time that the dolly is working.

Quicker-Yet Washers are sold all over by good dealers both for cash and easy payments. They cost no more than the best and in many cases less. There are three styles. If you do not know the name of the Quicker-Yet Dealer in your locality, write us. Be sure and see a Quicker-Yet before you buy.

COOLER CLOSETS IN KITCHENS.

SAN DIEGO, Cal.—[Special correspondence.]—A few months back, at a meeting of several hundred housewives, an aged woman in the most feeling tones said that now, when she was "just ready to die," she had heard of the cooler closet. She had but just had one put into her house in the country after seeing a description of them in an October magazine. Doing her own work, she had found this the greatest step saver and lightener of work she had ever had.

These cooler closets are practically universal in the kitchens of California bungalows and of a type superior to that described in the magazine article. That description of the cooler closet said that the draft should be admitted through the floor either from the basement or from the space underneath the floor created by the foundation, with a vent just under the roof. In some countries ground under a building will take a scum of mold, and basements are likely to contain stale air. The intake, like the vent, can and should be in the outside wall, the intake at the bottom and the vent at the top of the sectional cooler closet.

These closets are on the north side of a house, and as the writer of the article in question said, "the abnormally cool interior is entirely the result of a natural draft." And again he said: "It is surprising how cool its interior remains in the very warmest weather." The principle is exactly the same as that of the fresh intake of air for the furnace which circulates in a room, after being warmed, and escapes by a high ventilator.

Great Utilizers of Space.

These closets extend from floor to ceiling, so are great utilizers of space, of which they require but little. They are said to add next to nothing to the expense of the construction of a house, and they are a highly worthy kitchen feature to be loved by fresh air enthusiasts. Fresh air is as good for foods, which all respire like human beings, as for people, and better far for people because ventilated, as it were. These closets are cool enough to preserve any food, except on the warmest days, and are all right for the less perishable foods at all times.

These coolers are built in like the rest of the closets of what are called buffet or cabinet kitchens, the most modern kitchens, in which there are so many closets and drawers that no pantry is necessary, and with the cooler closets, no cellar in the country homes is needed.

The openings of the cooler closets are surrounded with casing like the windows, and screened over. If you watch for them as you ride through a city like San Diego, you will see these openings, generally as small as the smaller panes of glass, in the sides even of four story apartments. Water is precious, and ice more so, in a region like this, yet not only here but in other countries of similar snowless seasons, people have learned how to keep butter beautifully firm, or even as hard as a rock; cooked food without molding, as it will rather quickly in the ordinary icebox; milk for several days, and fruits and vegetables in prime condition merely by means of air coolers. In New Orleans they have great wire closets hung in the shade, which they raise and lower by pulleys. I have seen similar devices in various parts of Europe.

In a California Bungalow.

The house where I am visiting has a cabinet or buffet kitchen which is 9x10 feet, or almost square. The sink is exactly in the middle of the north wall and under the three part window. The space under it is open, but on either side there is a counter with drawers immediately under and closets under those. In the right hand corner is a cooler closet about 16x18 inches on the outside, extending to the ceiling and divided into three sections. It extends out from the north wall to the casing of the door which opens into the dining room. By the way, the three part window is an advantage, because the central part protects from drafts while the sides, open, cool the kitchen.

To the left of the sink and the closet with counter top is the door into the breakfast room. In the corner between the door and the north wall of the breakfast room is another, this time a three cornered, cooler closet. Beyond that and set into the wall are closets and drawers, the upper closet part with glass doors making a china closet. This closet extends out from the wall only three inches, the rest being sunk into the wall.

Many of our builders make the mistake of constructing deep closets which are inconvenient, particularly when shelved, because often several rows of things at the front must be moved or reached over to get what is in the back. They do things better in these California bungalows.

Plenty of Storage Space.

The stove in this cabinet kitchen is tall and narrow and against the west wall between two doors, that to the breakfast room and that to a back hall and laundry, in the latter of which is a sectioned closet reaching to the ceiling, furnishing splendid storage space for ironing board and other equipment. Opposite the stove is a table and stools which will shove under it, making up the rest of the kitchen furniture.

In all but a foot or so of the wall opposite the sink are buffet closets or cabinets, nine doors opening into them, besides three drawers and two bins.

The shelves in the cooler closets are removable and are painted once or twice a year. Some are of slats and others of coarse meshed wire reinforced with slats of wood. These can be taken out at any time to wash them.

It is easy to see how completely work may be systematized, steps saved, and cleaning operations lessened in a kitchen like this, in comparison with work in a kitchen the lower half of the wall space only of which is utilized, and the floor more or less used for storage and furniture that must be moved with every cleaning.

In these cabinet or buffet kitchens counter room is nearly always supplied, and that is invaluable for convenience and expedition in work. Few of our kitchens, though twice the size of the one I have described, have anything but the sink drainers to work on near water, and perhaps only one of those, but that is almost another story.

By Elizabeth O. Hiller.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

Planked White Fish.

Clean, ripe, and split lengthwise a three pound white fish; remove the bones, fins, and tail. Trim off the thin edges of the flank and place skin side down on a hissing hot, well greased oak plank. The plank should be one and one-half inches thick, eighteen inches long, and ten inches wide, and oval in shape. Brush flesh side of fish with soft butter; surround the fish with coarse salt [plank should be an inch wider on each side of fish and longer by two inches] to prevent plank turning. Bake twenty-five minutes in a hot oven. Remove from oven, scrape off the salt and wipe the rim of the plank with a cloth wrung from hot water. Spread fish generously with maitre d'hotel butter. With a pastry bag and large rose tube having ten prongs, surround the fish with a border of hot, well seasoned mashed potato, having two rows of the fluffy frills surround the fish. The potato border should completely cover the rim of the plank. In the spaces at head and tail of fish, set small or large [as the space will permit] potato roses. Lightly brush the edges of the frills with slightly beaten egg and return to oven to brown delicately. Serve with romaine, dressed with Thousand Island dressing.

Rice Waffles with Maple Sauce.

Sift together two cups of flour, two tablespoons of sugar, four teaspoons of baking powder, and one-half teaspoon of salt. Add three-fourths cup of cold cooked rice and with the tips of the fingers work in the rice until well mixed; add one and three-fourths cups of milk and the yolks of two eggs beaten until thick and light, and two tablespoons of melted butter. Beat thoroughly and then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of eggs. Cook the same as other waffles and serve with maple sauce.

These waffles with the maple sauce will make a delightful luncheon for school boys and girls.

To make the maple sauce, cook one cup of maple sirup and one teaspoon of butter until it spins a thread; pour slowly and in a fine stream on the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs, beating constantly. Cool, then cut and fold in one-half cup of heavy cream whipped until stiff.

Veal Potpie With Dumplings.

Cut two pounds of veal from the shoulder into two inch pieces, first wiping the meat thoroughly with a cloth wrung from cold water. Cover meat with two quarts of cold water, bring quickly to the boiling point, skim, reduce the heat, and simmer until the meat is tender (about three hours). The last hour of cooking add one-fourth cup of sliced carrot, one medium sized onion thinly sliced, one stalk of celery cut in one inch pieces, a small piece of bay leaf, one-half teaspoon of peppercorns, and one-half tablespoon of salt. When meat is tender, carefully remove from kettle and strain the liquor. Mix one-fourth cup of flour with enough cold water to make a perfectly smooth, thin paste; stir this into the liquid until the boiling point is reached; then add three tablespoons of butter, in small pieces. Reheat meat in the gravy and turn the whole into a baking dish or casserole. Sift together two cups of flour, one-half teaspoon of salt, and four teaspoons of baking powder. With the tips of fingers rub in four tablespoons of butter (or lard, if the latter is used more salt will be needed), then pour on gradually rich milk or thin cream to make a soft, moist dough. This dough should not be stiff enough to knead. Drop the dough by tablespoonfuls above the meat in the dish. The dough should rest on the meat and cover it completely. Bake in a hot oven twenty-five minutes. When putting the stew into the dish reserve some of the gravey and keep it hot to serve in a sauce boat apart.

The HOME HARMONIOUS

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, Sunday Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

FOR INDIVIDUAL USE.

THIS might be a little primer lesson: "Here are two chairs. One chair is mamma's chair, the other chair is papa's chair." Without a doubt the merest child could tell at a glance which was which.

Do you remember the time when every living room had a center table? The principal attraction that drew the whole family about it in the evening was the center light. Now each member of the family has an individual light on an individual table beside an individual chair, and the old center arrangement with its conglomerate burden is in the discard.

The lamp and reading table in the lower illustration have a distinctly "manny" air. The goose neck standard is pliable and its shade, which slips around at any angle, shields the eyes and casts a strong light from the plated lining. It is full strength luminous. The chair is upholstered in golden tan mohair, velvet striped with pin lines of deep purple.

More "millinery" in character is the lamp shade or the little pie crust chairside table across the room. It is in straw-colored silk veiled with light old blue. Between the silk foundation and the gauze veiling is a bright little appliqued flower. This treatment is repeated on the shield shade of the wall light. The chair has a smart slip cover of light mauve glazed chintz blocked with a gay pattern in American Beauty rose, olive and blue. The group is completed with a luxurious rose taffeta cushion and a footstool upholstered in deep purple.

INDIVIDUAL LIGHTS AND CHAIRS.
[Drawings by Anita de Campi.]

C. K. S.: Keep to the cream hangings at windows. Paint the floor either gray or dark blue. I am sorry that I cannot go into the cost of building. Too much depends on the locality, local conditions of labor, and upon the quality of material employed. Submit the plan to a local contractor for approximate prices. Let the window shades harmonize with the outside of the house.

A FRIEND IN NEED
By Sally Joy Brown.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

For an Invalid.

"I have a guitar and a box of old phonograph records that I would gladly give to some one. They will have to be called for and the applicant will have to let me know when he will call, as I am employed during the day. They would be good for some poor shut in who cannot afford to buy any.

"MRS. K. D."

Some invalid will be made happy by this kind and generous offer.

Just Looking On.

"I am 12 years old, and would like so much to have a pair of roller skates. My mother has many children and cannot afford to buy skates for me. All the children in our neighborhood have them and I have to look on while they are having a good time. R. M."

One of the first signs of spring, when all the little boys and girls would a skating go. Is there not a pair of skates for Rose? Lookin' on is not much fun.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS
By Loretta King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Loretta King, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

EQUAL CHANCE WITH MEN.

"DEAR MISS KING: I notice that you occasionally receive complaints from girls who think that they are not being given an equal chance with men in the business world. I am no longer a business woman, but before my marriage I earned my living for eight years, and during that time my own experience and that of my associates showed that women were promoted on their merit and on the whole received as great consideration as the men.

"Although I have been out of business affairs for four years, I still am interested in the success and achievemtens of all women workers, and especially those of my friends.

"A friend of mine who started to work in a minor position in the credit department of a large retail house has recently been promoted to be manager of credits for the house, a position which a woman has never before held with that firm.

"Six years ago she was running errands and doing the odd jobs about the office. She is bright and ambitious, and from the time she started in the credit office was determined to learn everything she could about the work.

"She made herself so useful and valuable in the department that whenever a vacancy occurred that meant a promotion to her she was given the job. She was promoted faster than any one else in the department. No promotion was given her through favoritism, and at every step upward in her work the other people in the office acknowledged that the reward was due her.

"A month ago the manager of the department resigned because of ill health, and the question of his successor was the gossip of the house for several days. No one really thought that my friend had a chance at the job, but the manager on retiring had recommended her to the officials of the firm as the best qualified person in his office to carry on the work.

"The directors of the company gave his suggestion favorable consideration and appointed her temporary head of the department. Her management satisfied the heads of the firm that she was capable of handling the work of the department, and instead of importing a new man for the position they officially appointed her the other day head of the department.

"This is one of several instances I know of where a woman has won the executive job when in competition with men. A. M. S."

This letter from an ex-business girl tells an encouraging story. There are enough such instances of woman's remarkable success in business, I think, to dissipate the business girl's fear of entering into competition with men.

Is He Coming?

If so, remember that you are now going to be able to buy a baby carriage of the finest weave at the price of the coarsest reed.

For the man has been born who has changed the old, imperfect hand method of weaving wickers that has been unchanged for over six thousand years.

Marshall B. Lloyd

—whose name will go down in history—has patented a method of weaving wickers and invented a loom that does in a matter of MINUTES what used to take the fastest fingers many weary hours.

You can watch those baby carriages grow and take shape before your very eyes.

The most beautiful carriages, strollers and sulkies woven as fine and evenly as grandmother's knitted scarf.

Three hundred thousand of these beautiful carriages are ready this year, and ten thousand stores now have them. But still there are not enough to supply the demand.

So act quickly if you wish to be sure of yours.

Watch the papers today and every day for the announcement of stores that have these Lloyd Baby Carriages ready for you.

And also watch the window announcements and displays of your neighborhood stores. Or, better still, send this coupon.

"YOU radiant creature," I cried admiringly as Jessie threw off her wrap. "Another new blouse, and, oh, that glorious ribbon on your hat—"

"Hush," Jessie's voice thrilled me. "The blouse is four years old and the ribbon was once white and soiled. I washed them both in DYRITE to come to this tea today. DYRITE is indispensable in my household. It has saved me hundreds of dollars."

Farmers Vote to Elect Uncle Sam Real Roadmaster

Sentiment for National Highway Plan Shown in Referendum

FARM sentiment is strongly in favor of the construction and maintenance of a national system of highways by and under the direction of the federal government, if replies received to a referendum by the American Farm Bureau federation can be taken as a criterion. The federation is one of the largest farm organizations in the United States, with local federated organizations in twenty-eight states.

Answers to the highway question are still coming into the office of J. R. Howard, president of the federation, but those received thus far are almost unanimously in favor of a broadened national road policy. Several of the writers express the belief that only through actual governmental participation can a network of highways be built. Many letters express the feeling that once the states and counties are relieved of the burden of aiding in construction and maintenance of the main lines which have an interstate importance the construction of farm to market roads will proceed much more rapidly.

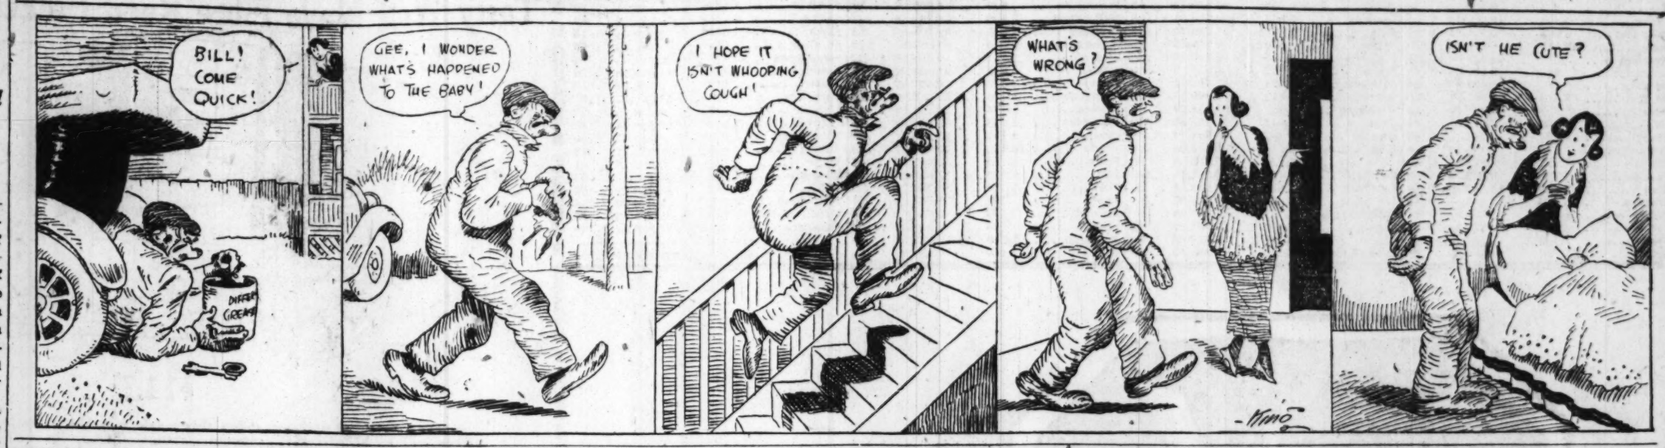
The statement of Senator Charles B. Townsend, chairman of the senate committee on postoffices and post roads, that no further road appropriations should be voted at this session of congress because of the unsettled condition of the treasury and that large funds are already available for continued construction, is concurred in by several of the farm bureau officials who hold that further increases should not be undertaken.

The federation is the second national farm organization to undertake such a referendum on national highway legislation. As a result of similar discussion, carried on by members of the National Grange, that body adopted a special report calling for a national highway law.

More Mileage.

Oil has a habit of collecting in little puddles in the depressions in the cement floor of the garage. This should be removed because the tires are almost sure to get into it, and if you let a section of the shoe become soaked with oil, the affected rubber will soften and undue wear will follow. The deterioration will be similar to that resulting when rubber is improperly cured.

GASOLINE ALLEY—HURRY, BILL; STEP ON IT!



MY FUNNIEST MOTORING EXPERIENCE

Every one who has taken the road in a motor car has some story to tell. What is your best one? The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published in "My Funniest Motoring Experience." Write as briefly as possible, on one side of the paper only, and address Funniest Motoring Experience, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

A Fair Day's Work.

It was a typical "detour" road and I found eleven big touring cars mired hopelessly when I came into it. My light car labored through at last and I left them at dusk, promising to send help from the first farmhouse.

"Ten dollars a car for the farmer who pulls us out," the leader of the party called after me.

I explained the situation to a grim and bearded old man who peered through a half opened door of the first house.

"Guess they'll be there tomorrow morning," he said at last. "Mules are tired out tonight," and he closed the door in my face. Then I heard him call to his wife.

"Ho! ho!" he chuckled. "Hundred and ten dollars. That'll be a fair day's work for muddy weather." J. T. R.

A Dramatic Entrance.

It was a steaming hot day when I first tried out my new car. Of course, I thought I knew all there was to know about driving and refused the aid of bystanders in backing to the curb before a downtown garage to put some air in a rear tire.

Turning with a flourish, I reversed and the car leaped backward. Then came panic and I could not find the brake until I found myself stopped by the soda fountain in the drug store next to the garage.

"One gasoline sundae," shouted a grinning soda clerk, and it seemed to me that half the town rushed through the outside swinging doors to laugh at me. D. V. M.

His Joy Ride.

Ten years ago while motoring through New Mexico I visited the Mascalero Indians during their annual feast week. Mine was the first automobile ever seen on the reservation and a husky young chief was delighted when I took him for a short ride and explained how the car was operated. Coming back to the festivities, I got out to invite some children to ride when a yell went up from the Indians and I turned to behold the chief driving my car about the reservation race track. He whizzed around that track for eighty minutes until the gasoline tank emptied.

"Heap ride," he observed calmly, climbing down from the stalled car, and strutted off to join in the dance. W. L. O.

The Experts Say

WHEN the spring hanger of a cantilever spring breaks, the car is difficult to steer; in fact, it will not keep the road at all. When this happens on the road an emergency repair is possible. Place the lifting jack under the forward end of the spring and raise the part so that it can be wired against the frame. This will hold if the car is driven slowly.

With the slanting type of windshield water is likely to leak through the slight opening between the two panes of glass when a heavy storm is encountered. This trouble may be obviated by making one of the panes overlap the other, which, of course, calls for the fitting of a new upper or lower half.

Changes in temperature exert an extremely unhappy effect on the finish of the car because of the difference in the co-officients of expansion of metal and paint and varnish. To insure the highly finished surfaces from cracking, the car should be housed in a garage maintained at a nearly uniform degree of temperature. Also car owners who utilize their barns as garages make a mistake in so doing, as the ammoniac gases always present in a stable are ruinous to the varnished surfaces of the car.

In tightening opposed nuts, such as those holding the bearing caps in place, one nut should be drawn up a little and then the opposite one tightened a little. It is wrong to tighten one nut fully and then proceed with the other, as this method tends to spring the metal and cause poor contact.

Blizzards do not Stop Electric Trucks

They do not freeze up. They always start easily.

They are not too heavy to get thru the drifts. You never see one stalled.

No gears to shift—everything simple and accessible. Much cheaper, too. Today is a good time to investigate.

Thirty-nine Motor Cars in one City block. Traffic delays on every MAIN street and high road are largely due to the wide difference in performance ability among the cars that crowd it

Who Makes the Best Time

AMERICA owned 6,300,000 passenger cars at the end of 1919. A quarter of a million in and around New York. Over a hundred thousand in Chicago. Philadelphia, Boston, St. Louis, San Francisco—every city has a like congestion.

With everybody depending on his car for business purposes, the faculty of ordinary cars for getting in one another's way becomes a serious matter—and the striking ability of the Packard to run around and through traffic is doubly worth thinking about.

THE Packard Company speaks with high authority when it says that performance of the Packard kind cannot be "assembled" into a car and cannot be "tuned" into it.

It is fundamental with the design and construction of the car.

The Packard Twin-six engine, with its steady flow of flexible power. Throttled down to two miles an hour on high in the jam, and picking up to thirty miles or more in half a block.

The Packard brakes—designed by Packard, with large, long-wearing braking surfaces; equalized, with even, positive braking action on each wheel; easily applied, sure to hold.

The Packard dry disc clutch, positive and velvety in action—and the Packard forged, heat-treated gears, with their exceptional strength and long life.

The Packard stearing gear and other parts controlling the car, quick and positive in action, easy to handle, tough and reliable.

YOU often hear people say that they "get there so much quicker" in a Packard.

The Packard driver watches the road rather than the operation of his car.

He has less gear-shifting to do, less strain on his attention—and he can use the flexible power of his Packard to advantage every yard of the way.

State Resources for Good Roads on the Increase

Survey Shows Highway Work Proposed Under Bond Issue

BY J. L. JENKINS.

ILLINOIS, with more than 400,000 motor propelled vehicles in operation and a receipt in full for $3,246,166 paid into the state automobile license fund last year, has advanced to the first division in national good roads and motor importance.

But four states—New York, Ohio, California, and Pennsylvania—could show more automobiles in use in a survey completed recently with the aid of officials in charge of registrations in each state. Illinois counties made a uniformly excellent showing in the number of cars in use.

The state's financial resources for highway improvement, work to be financed entirely by car, truck, and motorcycle owners through increased license fees this year, are shown in the following table, based upon amounts collected from each Illinois county last year. The "mileage" column shows the number of miles of road construction allotted each county, originally proposed under the $60,000,000 state bond issue. This program is subject to changes, but is based on the estimates made when voters were asked to approve the issuance of bonds and the increasing of license fees:

Mountains of Waste Saved by SCIENTIFIC COMBUSTION

Install a Weil-McLain Scientific Combustion Boiler for Next Winter

Few people have any conception of the fuel waste that one winter shows—the terrible toll demanded by faulty combustion.

In Chicago alone—if an army of men were engaged to sift last winter's accumulation of ashes—the reclaimed fuel would make a mountain—thousands of tons. Think what this loss means in dollars. Think, too, what it means in heat units—in cold rooms—illness, etc.

This appalling waste of heat and fuel is largely due to "boiler indigestion"—to faulty combustion—a condition similar to indigestion in the human body.

In Weil-McLain Scientific Combustion Boilers—Science has perfected the way to save this waste—to extract heat from all the fuel.

The way is simple. Yet its efficiency was proved in thousands of comfortably heated homes during the zero days of the past winter.

In these boilers you find no exaggerated feature. You find no "high spots"—no "bright ideas" which are designed to give the salesman a "selling point."

Science discovered in these exaggerated features an insidious cause of "boiler indigestion" or faulty combustion. Why is this so? Because a boiler functions somewhat like the digestive tract in your own body. And any exaggerated condition in the boiler distorts its functioning—throws the whole thing out of kilter and causes faulty combustion—which is merely another name for waste.

In Weil-McLain Scientific Combustion Boilers you find a wonderful, scientific simplicity. Each and every part is carefully harmonized. There are no "humps." The functioning is smooth. The result is "Scientific Combustion"—that point where fuel gives off great heat with little waste.

On those bitter zero days shortly past, thousands of homes—of all kinds—located under many different conditions—enjoyed this scientific heating. And each year—as men became more and more dissatisfied with the price they pay for fitful, uncertain heat the number of homes installing these modern scientific boilers increases.

For your new home or building—or for a replacement—why not decide upon a Weil-McLain Scientific Combustion Boiler? Why not assure for yourself once and for all, the satisfaction and economy of a modern scientific heating boiler?

We invite you to visit our beautiful show rooms where Weil-McLain Scientific Combustion Boilers are always on display. We will gladly show you everything about them. Or, write us for any information you desire.

MOTORDOM

Care and Water Two Essentials of Spring Job

BY HIGH SPEED.

THE last two or three years have brought a remarkable development in American body building. The mechanism of the modern motor car has reached an approximate degree of perfection, leaving the manufacturers free to devote more time to increasing the attractiveness of the vehicle.

The present day American car as it leaves the factory is really a thing of beauty, with its highly polished surfaces and shinning metal. Naturally this has induced the owner to take more pride in keeping up the appearance of his gasoline steed. The result is that cleaning methods and equipment have greatly advanced over those of a few years back.

The present day owner, using modern methods may keep his car looking new all the time, nor will we have to spend more than a few minutes a day to accomplish this end. For instance there are now on the market a number of liquid and wax polishes, which will give admirable results, if they are used as directed.

In the use of wax polishes the first step is thoroughly to clean the body of the car. The polish is applied to the surface with a piece of cheesecloth and then another clean cloth is used to distribute the wax evenly all over the surface. Car owners commonly make the mistake of thinking that the more wax applied the better. As a matter of fact a thin film is all that is needed. The polish will last for from four days to a week and after it has been applied at the beginning of the week, a little rubbing with a clean cloth will bring out the luster again. The wax polish may be used for body, fenders, hood, and other lustrous surfaces and it will also be found that if the under side of the fenders is cleaned and giving a good coating of wax, less mud will be deposited and what there is may be easily removed.

The most recent type of body polish is that which is sprayed on the surface with a large sprayer. In using this polish, the body must first be thoroughly cleaned with water. If the body surfaces are merely dusty, the polish may be sprayed on and then be wiped off with a clean cloth. After spraying the polish over the surface, a piece of cheesecloth is used to wipe off the excess. There is no necessity for vigorous rubbing.

The present day owner must not assume that these new and really useful aids to beautifying the motor car have superseded plain water. The contrary is true. The car must be washed just as formerly, after which the new polishes do bring out the luster of the original finish.

Washing the car is not the casual job some owners seem to imagine. To begin with, the car should be washed immediately after it has been soiled. If mud is allowed to remain on the varnished surface for more than a day, it is difficult to eradicate it. For the washing plain water should be used, neither too hot nor too cold, about 50 degrees being the proper temperature. A large sponge soaked in clear water and then sopped against the surface, so that the water trickles down, is best.

Never turn a stream of water at high pressure on the body. This will grind particles of sand and other grit into the varnish to the detriment of the finish. The idea is to float the mud or dirt off the surface.

Soap should never be used on the body except for removing grease or oil spots. A small piece of soft cloth, well covered with castile soap suds, serves well to remove grease from the panels. The hood should never be washed while it is hot, as this will result in discoloration. In cleaning the radiator send a stream of water from the rear instead of from the front, to keep moisture out of the mechanism.

In drying the body a clean chamois skin should be used, the rubbing being done in straight lines. If spots of tar or road oil are found on the body, it is best to treat them with salt butter or kerosene. The butter softens the deposit so that it may be wiped off easily. Kerosene should be applied locally and wiped off within a minute.

TUNGSTEN
Always on the job

Sturdy and Dependable

Tungsten Spark Plugs are acknowledged by experts and experienced motorists as the ONE plug that gives unusually efficient and lasting service.

They're built heavier and stronger—the IMPROVED PORCELAIN core withstands the excessive heat and explosive pressure month after month without cracking or checking—the big, thick, heavy shell is strong and rugged enough to meet the severest demands that can be made upon it—copper asbestos lined gaskets between metal parts and core prevent leakage and eliminate danger of porcelain cracking.

There's a special type of TUNGSTEN SPARK PLUG to fit every automobile, truck, tractor or gas engine. They're cheaper because they're better and last longer. Your spark plug troubles end when you use TUNGSTENS. Ask your dealer's opinion—he will tell you why they're better. If he can't supply you, write to us.

Make Your Motor as Good as New

An automobile motor is one of the most delicately adjusted machines ever devised, and must stand more abuse, shocks, neglect, wear, stress and strain than any other machine.

A dirty, carbon encrusted motor, that leaks compression is rapidly wearing out and cannot possibly deliver maximum power; it needs the attention of an expert mechanic.

Ask your Repairman to clean your motor thoroughly, and install Burd High Compression Piston Rings, to insure 100% efficiency and the maximum power.

Burd Rings can't leak. They hold the highest compression developed by any motor. The Burd Patented Guard seals the gap effectively and automatically compensates for wear.

Your mechanic will tell you that they are not an expense but an economy. Burd Rings more than pay for themselves by saving gas and oil, and preventing frequent replacements of spark plugs, valves, pistons, piston rings, etc.

But more than that—they make your motor as good as new—powerful, smooth running, economical, efficient, and prevent most of your engine troubles.

Summer Tour to Tap Beauties of Canadian Lakes

ANOTHER new field for motor tourists will be opened up by the 1920 international good roads tour of the Michigan Pikes association, which is to start at Detroit June 14. Practically all arrangements have been made and the entries are already largely in. The tourists will travel from Detroit to Toronto, Ont., thence north over the great northern highway to the beautiful Muskoka Lakes district, then to the mining region about Sudbury, and from there parallel to the north channel of Georgian bay to Sault. Ste. Marie, Ont. The return trip will be made from Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., by way of the eastern branch of the Dixie highway to Bay City, thence to Alma, Lansing, and Detroit.

It is expected that about 300 tourists will take part in this two weeks' tour. They will carry with them a variety of equipment which discounts anything before attempted in any tour. There will be blanket and tent trucks, since the tourists will camp out most of the nights, and there will also be kitchen and refrigerator trucks, baggage trucks, shower bath truck, fire engine truck, and general repair trucks.

Not all of the two weeks will be consumed in traveling. The first Sunday out the party will explore the Muskoka lakes. They will also spend a day fishing in the Spanish river and two days at Sault Ste. Marie.

Pathfinding parties have reported the roads good and the scenery is said to be beyond description. What is particularly worth while about this tour is that it will show how readily accessible the scenic regions of Ontario and northern Michigan are to the city dwellers of Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, New York, and other states in the northeastern portion of the United States.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

HENRY PAULMAN, Chicago Pierce-Arrow distributor and good roads champion, has been named chairman of the Illinois State automobile association good roads committee for 1920. He will direct the association's good roads and good fellowship program, in addition to working out extensive development plans as president of the Illinois Automobile club.

Uncle Sam has awarded the Garford Motor Truck company a certificate of merit for distinguished service during the war, Grant C. Nichol, Chicago manager, announced.

Maximum production and the thorough working over of domestic markets must come before American business men can master world trade, said Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car company, on his return from a tour of Europe.

The Allison-Rood company, distributor of Lincoln cars, has moved from its temporary offices in the McCormick building to 2518 South Michigan avenue.

Eastern truck manufacturers are advocating the use of the trailer and semi-trailer to solve special hauling problems. They point to numerous instances of cost reduction in heavy tractor hauls to prove their contention.

L. Zecha, Maxwell-Chalmers distributor of Java, has been the Chicago guest of A. J. Banta.

Harry L. Bill, former production manager for the Winton company, has been made vice president and general manager of the Saxon corporation.

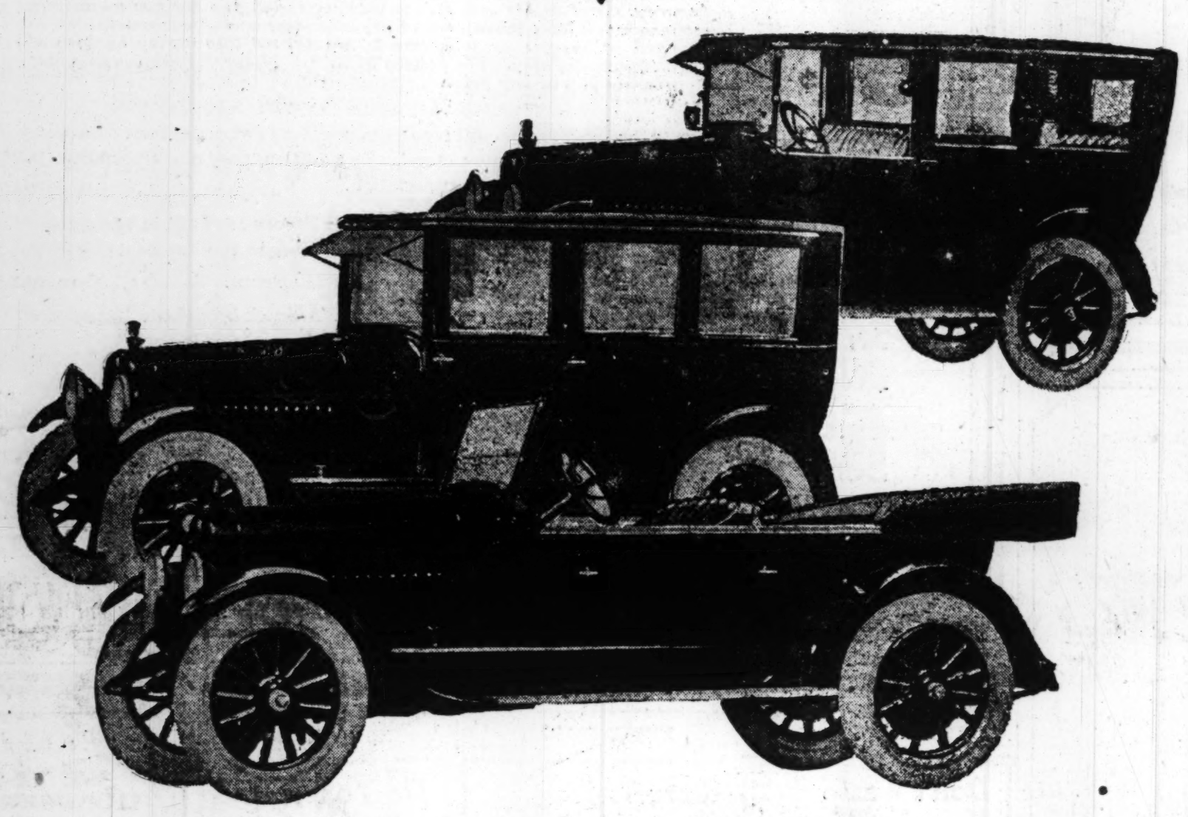
The Vesta Battery corporation has announced an issue of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock to the amount of $450,000, and 3,000 shares of common stock as the result of rapid business expansion. Employés have purchased many shares, company officers say.

President J. B. Linerd of the Globe Rubber Tire company announced a stock dividend of 10 per cent to all common stockholders of the company.

Driveways are the only alternative in the solution of present day automobile delivery problems, according to Detroit manufacturers, who declare that the acute shortage of freight cars makes road deliveries necessary within a radius of 800 miles.

Twenty-four years ago but four automobiles existed in the United States. One of them was listed among the wonders of Barnum & Bailey's circus as a "horseless carriage." Now 2,000,000 cars are scheduled for production this year, according to figures compiled by Harry Branstetter, Chicago Kissel dealer.

HUDSON SUPER SIX



Style Permanency Enhances Hudson's Famed Endurance

Lasting Design is the Natural Compliment to the Durability of the Super-Six Motor

However mechanically good, a vast satisfaction is lost to the owner, if design changes in succeeding models mark his car out of date.

Thus style permanency must be a major factor in a car that serves for years.

Its value is exampled by the earliest Super-Sixes, built nearly five years ago. In all essentials they are modern today. They are modern in appearance. They have lost none of their operating smoothness, flexibility or power. Their performance is characteristic of all Hudsons. Few would see in their looks or performance anything but a car of recent production.

Think Ahead When You Buy a Car

Time will bring you, too, the keenest appreciation of Hudson's mechanical endurance and style stability.

Usually, you will find new worthwhile ideas first in Hudson. But they must earn their place by merit. They must effect a real improvement.

Undoubtedly, thousands of Hudson owners chose it primarily for its beauty of design, its luxury and distinction of appearance.

But let nothing blind the real issue. It is performance; and endurance is foremost. Speed and power have their place. But they are secondary. Hudson has no cause to underrate them. For it holds the stock car speed and power records. And the Super-Six motor has beaten the world's fastest racing cars, not once but many times.

In official tests the Super-Six has outperformed all other types of motor cars in speed, endurance, acceleration and hill-climbing.

The records prove it is open champion. It draws no distinction of type, size, cylinders or price. It has won against the field.

But Hudson could not hold such supremacy without some basic advantage that others cannot use.

Its dominance lies in the Super-Six motor which controls vibration. Perfection would mean a vibrationless motor, free from friction. No machinery is that. But the Super-Six motor comes within 10% of it—closer to the ideal than any other type. Nearer approach seems impossible.

Why the Super-Six Principle Gives the Mastery

In the exclusive Super-Six motor, power is increased 72%, and motor efficiency 80%. Endurance is practically doubled.

The new car qualities of performance are retained through years of service.

The outstanding fact is not merely that Hudson is faster and more powerful. You do not need direct application of such speed or power. But it is important that these records result from absolute smoothness. That you do want.

And the over-capacity of speed and power means reserve ability and freedom from strain in any task. It makes for a long life car. It means minimum wear, fewer repair needs. It means easy riding, without fatigue.

Naturally such a car is in demand. Since it was brought out five years ago, it has been the largest selling fine car in the world. This year, as in all years previous, many who want Hudsons will have to wait for delivery.

Cole Aero-EIGHT

BALANCED TO ZERO

What gives the Aero-EIGHT its 15,000 miles on tires and causes its 80-horsepower engine to require so little fuel?

The achievement of Cole engineers in coupling such high tire mileage and striking economy of operation with such a wealth of power and performance ability is due, primarily, to the fact that the Aero-EIGHT is balanced to zero.

All units of weight are uniformly distributed. Perfect equilibrium is maintained at all times. Wear is apportioned evenly; no single part is subjected to a greater strain than any other; and every ounce of energy, as well as every unit employed, is given full, free play.

HARD BOILED

By Guy F. Lee.

This Einstein dope on space, perhaps,
Amounts to something—mebbe not;
His minions may be sapient chaps,
And not distributors of rot;
Perhaps his system's great and grand,
It sure has depth, it may have height;
But what I cannot understand
Is how he ever sleeps at night.

These Einstein poets, too, perhaps,
Are harvesting the proper crop;
It's my opinion they are yaps,
But, then, I'm rather weak on top;
These Einstein painters—they may be
Art's truest friends and limners, quite;
But, just the same, what's troubling me
Is how they ever sleep at night.

This Einstein politics—the Reds—
It's possible they're smart and brave.
I'd like to see them lose their heads
More literally than they have);
These Einstein lecture lads are good.
At least they're good and recondite;
But, Land of Love, I never could
Tote so much lore and sleep at night.

If I had such a load upon
My mind and soul, I'd fail to rest;
I'd seldom close an eye till dawn,
With all that burden on my chest;
My conscience (it's a crabbed boss)
Would keep me in an awful plight;
I'd hate to put that stuff across,
I simply couldn't sleep at night!

Unnecessary decoration is never beautiful—for it is wasted effort. By the elimination of non-essentials is beauty created.

The new product of the Lincoln Motor Company attains a perfection of form through simplicity.

The American public will soon see how this grace is achieved.

But the handiwork of Mr. Henry M. Leland, Mr. Wilfred C. Leland and their associates, pioneer producers of fine automobiles, must of necessity carry also that deeper grace which has to do with a mechanical accomplishment, in which every ounce of its generated energy is beautifully put to work.

ART

Architectural Exhibit on at Art Institute

By Louise James Bargelt

THE Chicago Architectural exhibit, which opened at the Art institute on Tuesday, presents many features of unusual interest, especially to those who are interested in the development, artistic and architectural, of Chicago.

We have all heard so much of the new stadium which is to be erected south of the museum, and now we have on exhibit the completed plans of this stadium. They give an excellent idea of the stadium as a whole, including representations of the north elevation and the east elevation. Holabird & Roche are the architects whose plans were accepted.

Then there is a model in the first of the galleries of the Centennial Memorial building which is being erected in Springfield. R. E. Schmidt, who is the architect, is receiving the praise his work most certainly deserves.

Also, while we are speaking of Chicago, there is to be a new and most impressive Bahai temple erected here. Remey, the architect, has on exhibition some attractive drawings of this temple as it will be in its completed form. There is a charm and a picturesqueness about it which will give a decided touch of the orient to the neighborhood in which it is built.

Childs & Smith are showing a model of the plan under way to enlarge the Clarendon bathing beach. Among their other showings of especial interest are residences of unusual charm and attractiveness and a fine view of the Russell Sage dormitory, Lawrence college, Appleton, Wis.

The group of architects known abroad as the Chicago school is splendidly represented. Louis H. Sullivan, whose Transportation building at the Columbian exposition attracted world-wide comment and praise, shows a detail of the building's famous "golden doorway," and the Wainright tomb in St. Louis, Mo.

A memorial to Theodore Roosevelt at Oyster Bay—that is, a preliminary study of it—is shown, and the long vistas across the bay. Electus D. Litchfield of New York is the architect of this, as he also is of the St. Paul library plan.

Ruth L. Gerth of Chicago has some effective designs for lighting fixtures.

Robert Lee Eskridge shows a design for a music room which he calls "Serenade."

W. J. H. Hough of the American academy in Rome has some particularly fine work, including the interior of San Spirito, Florence, a cross section of the palace of the Caesars, an interior of the Pantheon, a fountain from the Plazza San Pietro, and an interior of the Palazzo, Vecchio.

Frederick M. Hodgon is exhibiting the plans of the "Capitol Building of the League of Nations" and Coolidge and Hodgon have a model of the theology group at the University of Chicago.

Contrasts abound in the exhibit. There is a rendering of a firescraper by V. Hagopian not far from a panel of spring flowers by Frederick M. Grant and again a group of United States government houses at Niagara Falls by Dean & Dean.

It is an interesting as well as a worth while exhibit and should be seen in its many details in order to be appreciated.

An exhibit of the Summer School of Painting at Saugatuck, Mich., opened at the same time as the architectural exhibit. This school of painting, it will be remembered, was founded in 1908 by Walter Marshall Clute and Frederick F. Fursman, and since the death of Mr. Clute it has been conducted by Mr. Fursman.

It is announced in a preface to the catalog that the work in this exhibition is representative of the summer of 1919. During that period there were eighty-two students from ten states and from Canada registered in the school.

In connection with this exhibit there is a prize of $25 for the best painting in the exhibition, this prize to be awarded by a jury composed of Chicago artists.

Color, a riot of sunshine, of the freshness of summer and the coolness of summer nights; the beauty of the sea, at all hours, in all moods; the charm of youth and the strength of age—all this is found in the canvases shown.

There is a glimpse of the sand dune country by Mary L. Bockins and the painting brings back the joys of the dunes, their appeal, their never failing satisfaction. And there is a Polish woman by K. Majewski which is excellent in its character rendering and the vividness of the type it reveals.

Edgar Rupprecht has a number of portraits which are full of charm—"A Bathing Girl," "Jeanette," and "Betty," all done in delightful color.

A romantic touch is found in Zaidee Scanlan's "The Cupola" Mildred Webster's "Dream of Saugatuck," Thomas Tallmadhe's "Summer Hotel," N. P. Steinberg's "Sketch," and Josephine Smith's "Landscape" are effective pieces of work. "Summer Afternoon" and "Cloud Study" are reminiscent of moods as well as landscape. Aneta Enters of New York has contributed them; they are evanscent, drifting clouds against a pastel sky.

A decidedly unusual exhibit of paintings and drawings by Stephan Hawe is opened at the same time at the Art institute, but a more detailed review of this will be given later.

Honesty

Every young man reaches a point in his career when he must choose one of two courses.

If he chooses to be clever, he will meet with tremendous competition.

If he chooses to be honest and finds happiness in his work, he will meet with conspicuous success.

By some peculiar magic the man who does even an ordinary thing well has revealed to himself a secret which thrills him with its simplicity and significance. He learns that while many people are striving to be clever—the worthy ones have merely learned how to be simple.

Once the public discovers that a man can do a simple thing a little better than his neighbor, they accord to him a respectful patronage which clever people find it impossible to explain.

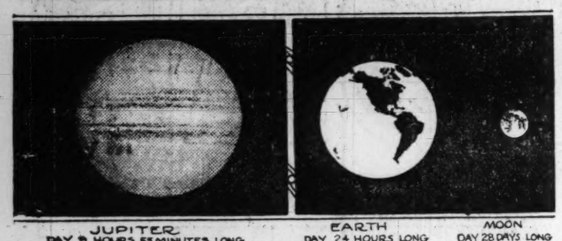
ASTRONOMY



JUPITER. DAY 9 HOURS 55 MINUTES LONG | EARTH DAY 24 HOURS LONG | MOON DAY 28 DAYS LONG

EXTREMES IN DAYS

BY S. F. MAXWELL

Questions on astronomy will be answered if a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Address your letter to Astronomy, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

IF THE EARTH STOOD STILL.

E. B. writes: "What would be the result if the earth should suddenly cease its spinning motion? Would it fall into the sun?" This question touches upon one of the most curious facts of celestial mechanics. The earth's rotation, or that of any other planet, for that matter, has nothing whatever to do with its position in space or its motion around the sun. Rotation and movement in a path are entirely separate among the heavenly bodies.

The spin of the world affects us closely, but it is a purely local affair, and the earth could go on indefinitely about the sun even if it stood stock still. But the process of changing from one turn every twenty-four hours to no spin at all would be a catastrophe.

The earth has rotated at its present rate ever since it first took shape out of a molten mass. The centrifugal force constantly generated by its motion has produced a swelling all around the equator thirteen miles thick. If the motion were suddenly stopped this bulge would collapse under its own weight, and as its ramifications pervade the structure of the continents all the land of the earth would be carried down with it. The seas would flow away from the equator and deluge the lands near the poles. Volcanoes would burst out at weak spots, and the whole earth would become a land of fire.

Perhaps the worst feature of such a hypothetical catastrophe would be the great lengthening of night and day. The sun would creep slowly across the sky, making one circuit a year. There would be great extremes of climate between the torrid summer, when the sun never set, and the unspeakably frigid winter, when it never rose. Such a world as this could hardly be habitable.

There is no prospect, so far as astronomers can tell, that such a condition will ever come to pass on earth. Neither we nor our descendants for many generations need fear that the orderly succession of day and night and winter and summer will be interrupted.

Other worlds, that circle around the sun much as we do, have different kinds of rotation from ours. Our satellite world, the moon, for instance, is a body with little rotation. The day is long there, two weeks in duration, and the night is equally long. On the planet Jupiter the whole day is less than ten hours long. If it were dawn there at what would be 6 in the morning, it would be noon at half past 8, dark at 11, and light again at 4, in what would be to us the afternoon. The sun would apparently race across the sky so fast that one could see it go.

It is easy to talk of bodies falling into the sun, but such things do not often happen. In fact, no first class celestial object has ever been actually observed to strike the sun, although there is a strong probability that small meteoric rocks frequently have such an end. If the earth were to suddenly stand still in its orbit, and then could have a free fall quite unattracted by the other planets, two quite impossible conditions, it would certainly strike the sun. But if it deviated from a straight line as it fell, it would miss the globe of the sun, go by it, wheel around, go back on the other side, and finally come back to a condition of rest at the starting point, from whence it would repeat the performance again and again.

"Close Limits" Manufacturing Insures Long Life

As is generally known, the remarkable smoothness of operation and absence of vibration which are such noticeable features of the New Series Marmon 34 are due in large measure to the exceptional accuracy and precision with which all parts of the High Efficiency Motor are finished and fitted.

This fineness of manufacture, previously considered practical only in laboratory or experimental work, is a result of the wartime experience of Nordyke & Marmon Company in building aircraft engines. The close limits and rigid inspection requirements demanded in the manufacture of the Liberty Motor were retained by Nordyke & Marmon Company as standard Marmon practice. And the results are immediately noticeable.

These unprecedentedly high standards of mechanical excellence do more, however, than produce exceptional smoothness of operation. They insure long life for the New Series Marmon 34. Such close fits and tolerances—such advanced engineering—reduce vibration and friction to the minimum and thereby greatly improve the duration as well as the quality of service.

It is the realization of this fact which is in large measure responsible for the remarkably large number of these new Marmons which have been sold so early in the season. The sales at all the shows were large, and since the shows orders are being booked in continually increasing numbers.

If you wish to secure a New Series Marmon 34 this spring, we suggest that you do not delay in placing your order. We shall be very glad to give you a demonstration at the earliest possible moment.

FARM AND GARDEN

Illinois Farmers Face Problem in Labor Shortage

By Frank Ridgway

FARMERS are now confronted with the most serious labor shortage ever experienced in this country. With the rush of spring work, sowing oats and plowing land for corn, the situation has become acute during the last few days. This condition is general over the country, but just now it is manifesting itself and receiving great interest in the central states. In Illinois, which is typical of many of its neighbor states, the farmers are calling for help in almost every county.

It has been known for some time that many farmers had not been able to secure their help for this season, but few realized that the demand was so great, and many trusted that some good farmhand would come along asking for a job. He failed to come and there are hundreds of farmers that can't get men at any price. Men are leaving the farm and going to the cities, and in dozens of cases farmers are left with several hundred acres to cultivate themselves.

Farm bureaus and labor agencies are trying to find men for the farmers, but few have been found. "Right now is a greater shortage of labor on Illinois farms than ever before, even during the war," said D. O. Thompson, secretary of the Illinois Agricultural association. He has received several letters during the last few days from the county farm bureaus in all sections of the state and they indicate that from a dozen to 200 or more men could be used in every county.

Good Offers Refused.

Good wages are being offered. In fact, more pay and better conditions for both single and married men are being offered this year than ever before. Even with all the special inducements that farmers are offering them to stay on the farm, from the mere boy to the married man with a family, they turn up their noses as they pass the farmer's home on their way to town to get a "good job," as they call it.

The wages vary in different parts of the state. The farmers are paying from $40 to $80, and in some cases, particularly in the northern part of Illinois, $100 a month is being paid. The single man also gets his board, room, washing, and a horse kept. Board alone is no small item even on the farm. These offers are being refused every day. In spite of the fact that farmers are paying more than ever before, it is impossible for them to compete with the wages paid by factories, mines, and other industries.

City folks as well as farmers are vitally interested in the labor shortage on the farms, for it will eventually affect all. Mr. Thompson says there is apparently no relief, and little can be done to overcome the condition. Farmers throughout the country pledged themselves early in the year to increase production in every way they could. They want to produce more—it is to their interest—and they would be glad to pay higher wages if they knew they could get out on it. They do not know this, and consequently cannot compete with the industries in paying big wages, because the farmer has no assurance of what the price of his products will be at harvest time. Rather than take a chance, many of them say they will let their land grow up in weeds this summer.

Farm Big Acreage Alone.

It is estimated 17 per cent of the young men have left the farms of Illinois. "The young men have left the farms so rapidly during the last few months," said J. G. Sailor, field man for the Illinois Agricultural association, "that from two to three farmers out of every ten have no help. Many of them have 320 acres of land they expect to farm alone because they can't get help. In the German settlements, however, they are not having so much trouble, for their boys are not leaving the farm to work in the city. Farm boys were expected to come back after the war, but only about 25 per cent of them returned to the farm after they were discharged," he said, "and the rest of them got work elsewhere. The work on the farm with tractors and automobiles fits the farmer boy to work in shops and garages, where good wages are paid. In touring the country I pass through many small towns, where I find hundreds of country boys in the last few months fixing spark plugs and crank shafts in garages, and last year I saw the same boys plowing corn and making hay on the farms."

The labor shortage will result in a decrease in production. Many quarter sections will be manned by the owner or one man this year, and one man cannot do a good job of farming on that much land. Letters to the state association indicate that more grass seed will be sown this season, and consequently less corn and oats will be grown. Officials of the Illinois Agricultural association point out that there isn't the patriotic appeal there was during the war, and the public will have to be "shown" in still higher prices, or possibly famine, before the actual condition is realized.

Worse Than During War.

The work on the farm is hard, and the farmer will have to continue the long working hours in order to keep things moving where he is without help. Every member of the family will have to be drafted into service during the next few months on the farm. The farmers' wives helped in the fields during the war, some helped last year, and, according to reports, more farm women will be seen in the fields driving tractors and binders this year than ever before.

These facts are borne out by the following extracts from letters from county farm advisers in all parts of the state:

"On Saturday last there were seventy requests for single farm laborers and thirty requests for married farm laborers for the farmers of McLean county. An average of six laborers reporting for jobs daily. Scarcely 50 per cent of these would even consider farm jobs. The situation in this county, therefore, is more serious than during the war," writes O. D. Center. He added: "The farmers are not so exacting in their requirements as formerly. I know of several instances where $65 a month, board, washing, and horse upkeep have been paid for experienced single men. One prominent farmer proposes to put in such crops as he can handle himself with the help of his own 14 year old boy. The remainder of his 240 acre farm will be put down in grass. This is a single instance. It could be repeated over and over in this county."

Over in Vermillion county, west central part of the state, "the demand for farm labor is fully 50 per cent greater this year than it was last year and the wages are 25 per cent higher," says A. Lumbrick, advisor. "There will be some shortage in production this year, both grain crops and live stock, due to this labor shortage. A good deal of clover will be left standing that otherwise would have been plowed under for corn if help had been more plentiful."

On the opposite side of the state from Vermillion county there is a 25 per cent shortage of farm help, according to R. W. Dickenson, adviser. "The labor shortage will perhaps result in the buying of more light tractors and attempting to do the work with less men. It will result in considerable land going to clover. The farmer is going along, doing the best he can, and at the same time waiting for something to happen," says Mr. Dickenson.

E. M. D. Bracker, adviser of Knox county, says: "Some farmers have expressed themselves as being disgusted with present condition and are planning to farm as much as they can and let the rest go by the board. One of the biggest things we can do this year is to keep up the morale of the farmers."

In Lee county the farmers are planning to coöperate and exchange work.

These statements are taken from letters that are typical of many others and serve to illustrate the seriousness of the labor condition now on the farms of this state.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Two Big Meetings to Be Held in Chicago This Week

By the Rev. Frederick L. Gratiot

COOK COUNTY conferences of the interchurch world movement and the sixty-first annual convention of the Chicago Sunday School association will occupy Chicago ministers and lay church workers this week.

The Interchurch conferences are being held in every county in the country preparatory for the financial drive to be begun the end of this month. In Cook county they will be held on Thursday from 2:30 to 9:30 p. m. at various convenient localities.

The Sunday School association will hold its three day convention in the Third Presbyterian church, Ashland and Ogden avenues, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

In the "call" sent out by the Interchurch it states:

Mission workers in foreign fields got together first. They realized the necessity. Can we of the churches at home afford to do less? The interchurch world movement does not advocate an organically united church, but it proposes that an "allied" church shall undertake present day tasks.

The allied church will eliminate waste of money and lost motion in missionary effort, and will organize the whole membership of the church for work.

The world war opened the eyes of the Christian forces to the needs of the whole world. Interchurch surveys are charting these needs on a world scale so that all may see and face the facts.

The facts call for the greatest Christian crusade ever organized against paganism and materialism. This means a new life for your home church in coöperation with at least 140 organized agencies of thirty-four Christian denominations, and 3,000 county conferences such as yours.

When all get the vision of a world program and the consciousness of an allied advance, each one will measure up to his obligations as never before.

All church members and friendly citizens are invited.

Denominational rallies will be held as arranged by denominational directors.

The schedule of conferences is as follows:

EVANSTON—In the First Methodist Episcopal church, corner of Church street and Hinman avenue. For the section including Rogers Park and Evanston, and points north.

OAK PARK—In the First Presbyterian church, at Lake street and Kenilworth avenue. For the west side, including Austin, Oak Park, Forest Park, Maywood, and Melrose Park.

FOR CHICAGO—In the Belden Avenue Baptist church, corner of Belden avenue and North Halsted street. For the section north of Madison street to Rogers Park, and west to Austin.

FOR CHICAGO—In the Kenwood Evangelical church, Forty-sixth street and Greenwood avenue. For the south side.

The Sunday School association will begin an interesting three day program Thursday afternoon. It includes addresses by national leaders in religious education, stereopticon lectures, movies showing the effects of applied Christianity on several communities, and a patriotic pageant, "The Flag."

Among the speakers are Dr. William E. Chalmers, president of the Sunday School council Evangelical denominations, Philadelphia; Dr. Frederick W. Shannon, pastor Central church, Chicago; Miss Mary E. Abernathy, director Community church school, Gary, Ind.; Dr. Norman E. Richardson, dean, department of religious education, Northwestern university, Evanston; Dr. Joseph F. Artman, professor of religious education, University of Chicago; Dr. Henry F. Cope, secretary Religious Education association, Chicago; Dr. George H. Betts, professor of religious education, Northwestern university, Evanston; Miss Nancy Lee Frayser, lecturer and specialist in work with children, Louisville, Ky.; Miss Mary E. Hargreaves, children's division superintendent, Chicago Sunday School association, and president of the National Story Tellers' asosciation; Dr. Robert Rush Biggar, adult division superintendent, and Dr. Albert H. Andrews, president, Chicago Sunday School asosciation.

The convention opens on Thursday afternoon at 2:15. The opening address by Dr. Allen will be delivered at 2:30 on "The Affirmations of Jesus." Sectional conferences will follow, and the pageant will be presented at 6:30 in connection with the banquet. The speakers at the evening session will be Miss Frayser, who will speak on "The Child—the Challenge of the Church," and Dr. Richardson on "Jesus, the Master Teacher."

On Friday morning the ministers' session will be held. Miss Frayser, Dr. Betts, and Dr. Cope will speak during the morning, and Dr. Shannon will speak at luncheon on "The Education of Religious Experience."

Sectional conferences will be held in the afternoon, and at the banquet at 6:30 Americanization demonstrations will be made. In the evening William C. Pierce, field superintendent of the International Sunday School association, will speak on "Religious Education and the Present Era."

The Saturday session begins at 2 p. m. Dr. Chalmers will speak on "The Sunday School Teacher Building a Great Personality."

Weekday religious education, the adult department, and practical problems will be discussed in conferences.

The Rev. Albert H. Gage, Sunday school director, Chicago Baptist association, will give a stereopticon lecture at the banquet on the Daily Vacation Bible schools in Chicago.

The closing address by Dr. Chalmers will be delivered at the Saturday evening session. He will speak on "The American Churches and the Educational Processes."

The six-reel movie, "Homes with Hearts," will be shown in the evening.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

PROFITEERS, STRIKES, AND THINGS.

I'm told with many a caustic sneer
There never was a profiteer,
That prices aviate and soar
Because we're paying labor more,
And if we'd cut their wage in two
A happy epoch would ensue
And everything would cheaper be—
At least that's what they say to me.
Well, mebbe so,
I dunno.

And then I'm told by other birds
In bitter, burning, biting words,
That profiteers are doing dirt
By boosting prices till they hurt,
And labor's got to raise its hire
To keep some vittles on the fire.
"Let profiteers their wallops cease
And then," sezz they, "we'll give you peace."
Well, mebbe so,
I dunno.

The middle class—that's you an' me
(Between the grindstones—"middle"—see?)
Next morning read (Page 1, Col. 4)
"The Buttonholers Strike for More."
And then the tailors say: "We s'pose
We'll have to boost the price of clo'es."
If all us middle-asses (I mean "classes") struck
D'ye s'pose 'twould change our luck?
Well, mebbe so,
I dunno.

THESE well known cars, products of America's foremost manufacturers, have adopted Firestones either as standard or tional equipment.

Limited space permits us to show only 40 of the 73 passenger cars so equipped.

The tide has turned definitely to Firestones. There is a broadcast awakening of car owners to the fact that Firestone has taken the lead in tire values and is holding it.

From the big cord with its extra heavy tread to the 3½ inch molded fabric tire, the product of Firestone men is giving most miles of use for every dollar of cost.

Back of all this is the Firestone Organization—the community of tire builders, home owners and holders of common stock in the company, working toward their own personal and material betterment to hold you permanently as a Firestone customer by giving you greater tire value for your money.

The Franklin averages 12,500 miles per set of tires and 20 miles per gallon of gasoline—this is the report of thousands of owners.

"If you would be wealthy, think of saving as well as getting."
—Benj. Franklin.

When Gasoline Goes Up Another Cent Think of the Franklin

THE Franklin gasoline tank holds 13½ gallons. The Franklin will do better than 20 miles on a gallon; so one filling of the Franklin tank will take you farther than 260 miles.

This is no test-run figure. Franklin test runs show 40, 50, even 60 miles per gallon. In July, 1917, a test-run by 179 stock Franklin cars, made by 179 Franklin dealers, showed an average of 40.3 miles on one gallon.

The report to the Franklin factory by thousands of Franklin owners in the last 18 months shows 20 miles average. So every time you see the price of gasoline go up, think of the Franklin car. Think of the economy Franklin owners are enjoying.

And think of this economy not in terms of cheap car comfort. Compare these Franklin figures with what it costs to run the finest car you know. Because the Franklin is as high grade, as comfortable, as dependable as any car built.

Tires Just Advanced 20%

Inquire the price of a new tire and you will be surprised. Figure what four such tires cost you per mile on your present car. Then figure what four fine cord tires cost per mile on the Franklin, which will surely travel 12,500 miles on them.

This again is not a famous test figure. Thousands of Franklin owners—proud of Franklin efficiency—report tire mileage to the Franklin factory. In the last 18 months this report shows a 12,500 mile average per set of tires.

There are many Franklins running in Chicago on tires that have gone 20,000 miles. Compare this with the best tire mileage you ever heard of on any other fine car.

Economy Through Quality

These Franklin economies are not new. Since 1903 the Franklin has been the World's most economical fine car. Franklin economy of gasoline and tires does not come from flimsy construction. In fact, the Franklin is so sturdy that it has unusual life. Used Franklins that have run 3, 4 and 5 years bring prices astonishingly close to their original cost.

So Franklin economy must come from merits few other cars possess—merits of design and construction. It does. And the first of these merits is Franklin direct air cooling.

Direct air cooling of the engine has been a Franklin principle of construction since 1903. It has survived against the most bitter criticism and prejudice, because direct air cooling, as handled in Franklin design, is simply unfailing.

As long as the Franklin motor is running, it cools itself. There is nothing to break, or to become stopped up, or to leak, which might interfere with this cooling.

Scientific Light Weight

The Franklin engine, because it is air cooled, saves 177 parts required in water cooled motors. It is more than 100 pounds lighter than any motor of equal power. This light-weight motor permits light-weight construction throughout, without sacrificing strength.

For instance, the Franklin has a wood chassis frame which is lighter and stronger than steel. It is also more flexible. Franklin wheels, axles and driving gear can also be lighter and still over strength. This reduces the weight below the springs.

Less weight below the springs reduces the shocks which tires must withstand. No wonder tires on the Franklin show such phenomenal mileage.

The soft, easy action of the Franklin car—the feeling you get in it of being unbumped, no matter how rough the road—is due to the lessened weight below the springs; or rather to the preponderance of weight above the springs. Thus the car always gets the best of the argument when the wheels hit a bump.

Listen to a Wealthy Man!

Benjamin Franklin said: "If you would be wealthy, think of saving as well as getting." Transcribe this to read: "If you would enjoy your car more, think of what it will cost you per year for what you get out of it."

Franklin owners will tell you that the Franklin is the most delightful and enjoyable car they have ever driven. Its performance, its comfort are beyond what you imagine.

And every penny added to the cost of the gasoline, every increase in the price of tires—serves to remind the Franklin owner that the Franklin car is saving him money on every mile.

APRIL 11, 1920.

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond.

THE Dillpickle club, a saucy haven for the indignant and restless of the community, has established a theater, a sort of Grand Guignol, wherein short plays of a bold and disrespectful nature may be performed without vexing the gendarmerie.

You may not have heard of the Dillpickle club. Nevertheless, it is a celebrated little roadhouse for radicals, situated in Tooker place, which is a commodious alley off Dearborn street, near Washington square. Its founder, I believe, was Dr. Ben Reitman, now a prominent member of the city government, and its proprietor and impresario is Mr. Jack Jones, who, as one of our leading vagrom men, knows all the soap boxes from lower B'way to the Golden Gate.

On the Dillpickles' first floor is the café and reading room, an apartment fragrant with the aroma of spaghetti and fried ham sandwiches, and an ideal headquarters for refreshment and reflection. At its tables you may see the displeased at food, debating their various annoyances—an amiable lot of malcontents, dressed well, but oddly. The ladies present indicate many of the types ranging from the bobbed-hair ingénue to the third witch in "Macbeth," and the men from soda clerks to lit'ry critics. There is an absence of the forthwhile horny-handed. Months ago, when I first visited the Dillpickles, it was otherwise. On that occasion the jovial Dr. Reitman superintended a confessional in which the ladies of the club related the details of their girlish amours. The participants in that symposium were advanced char-women who had lived their own lives, and who were eager to tell the world of their early, sanitorious wantonings.

The working person, being at present engaged in other leisures, now gives way at the Dillpickle celebrations to those who only speak and think of work, and to a few snooping sightseers from the northeast side. In case you are one of the latter you sign your name in a book and give a dollar to the pretty, short-haired young woman in a smock, who is the chef, and who, Dr. Reitman will announce later, is regarded sentimentally by Mr. Jones. The director is a tall brunette in a black flannel shirt, resembling a clement rook or a radical cartoon done in charcoal, or perhaps Mr. Yeats after a rough night among the fairies. He explains that registration of patrons is exacted so that the actors, who play on a percentage agreement, may know that they get all that is coming to them. You investigate the pictures on the walls—two or three writhing blotches in red and black; some pious visages of Messrs. Debs and Haywood, and a portly Gary punching his insolent stick through the Constitution. Then Mr. Jones announces that the drama is at hand, and you go up a narrow stairway to the theater on the second floor. This is a sort of vagabond of the Little theaters, with comfortable benches in front of a tiny stage, seating 200 or thereabouts; and you may smoke until late in the evening, when Mr. Jones forbids you unless, as he says, you have brought your own fire escape.

If you were not there last week you will not see Mr. Ben Hecht's sodden little Easter idyll called "Dregs," because they put it away yesterday, probably for good. In "Dregs" a cold hobo, standing forlorn upon a snowy and remote Chicago corner, encounters Christ and talks to him in the filthy argot of the bum. The squalor of his words is incredible. He brings Christ to a gutter intimacy, proposing to him the most obscene of sins in phrases foul and not to be put into the mails. Yet, since these phrases represent the believable attitude of a half-delirious derelict toward Christ, and since they are real and pitiable in their expression of a humble friendliness, the natural impulses of a lowly good fellowship, they are to be regarded as blasphemous only if you suspect the motive of the author. Mr. Hecht is not so to be suspected, for I know him, impersonally, as an honest, though brilliant (local), critic of books, and a correspondent in foreign parts who wrote interesting things as he thought he saw them. He ends his shocking allegory on rather a maudlin note—the tramp discovers that he has mistaken his own reflection in a window for the person of Christ. A Mr. Ford, an English actor and a master of the type, plays the beggar mercilessly.

The gospels according to Hecht will endear him to no presbyterians. My slight acquaintance with the habits of the Grand Guignol, among the most forward of the Paris theaters, leads me to doubt that even it would stand for "Dregs"; and a pagan would resent the Dillpickle's effigy of the Saviour, which looks like something wax in a shop window on the wrong side of State street. Other items on the bill were Floyd Dell's "King Arthur's Socks" and "Asepsis," a funny, though dated, travesty on hygienic marriage from Mr. Mencken's "Book of Burlesques."

SERGEANT DUGGAN, herald de luxe for Mr. Cohan, arrives breathless in Chicago, brimming with news of Georges Renavent and "Genius and the Crowd." The last time I saw the sergeant was at dusk on Christmas, 1918, when, a few kilometers outside of Chaumont, he stood at the head of a squad impeding the progress of a car full of important journalists hurrying to the cable. The road was reserved for the motor of the President, who had just reviewed the army at Humes, and the orders were to let none other pass. Only after promising to print in THE TRIBUNE the sergeant's next contribution concerning Mr. Cohan was I permitted with my comrades to proceed. "I'll be a corporal before morning," said he as we left him, standing under his tin hat in the melancholy shadows of the Vosges, brooding over his impending demotion, a sacrifice to publicity. Appended is my fulfillment of the contract:

Dear Editor: Here goes a brief skeleton of what our new opery is about: "Genius and the Crowd" concerns a brilliant young violinist who is full of temperament and fire. Pursued by countless women, who make violent love to him, he is about to renounce his career on the eve of a New York appearance, in the belief that these foolish ladies constitute his audience and that they will drag him down and down. Through a romantic strategem engineered by a business friend, the violinist is made to play his concert and is brought to a realization of a real love affair that George M. Cohan has manufactured in his Cohanizing of the piece, and about which he is even keeping his advance man in the dark about. He wants it for the Chicago premiere, and the company has been rehearsing it all week at Atlantic City. The denouement, it is known, is brought about in the second act, laid in the shop of an old violin maker, an atmosphere of artistry and peace and quiet.

Types of character will be found adroitly sketched in Cohan's revision of the work of the two Philadelphia newspapermen, John T. McIntyre and Francis Hill, who originally wrote the piece under the title of "The Irresistible Genius." Such persons as the hustling reporter, the opera singer, who has buried three husbands and who is looking for a new mate; the superwoman, who is looking for a superman and who wants to be the mother of a superchild; the house maid and the rich girl, who wants to be allied with genius, are all portrayed with the usual Cohan touch.

The first and third acts are farcical. The second act is said to hold the heaviest dramatic touch that Cohan has given a comedy for some time. To bring about his idea for the plot, Cohan has added a character in the shape of an automobile salesman, who carries the Cohan breeze through the piece, and, incidently, this rôle will be played by Frank Otto, who was last seen here in the original cast of "Going Up."

CORPORAL DUGGAN.

MISS ALICE BRADY in "FOR EVER AFTER" GARRICK

THIS week's changes in the theaters:

Miss Patricia Collinge will take her new jampot, "Golden Days," to the Blackstone tomorrow, and will remain there a long time. "Genius and the Crowd" succeeds Miss Collinge at Powers'.

"The Sweetheart Shop," a new musical comedy produced by Edward J. McGregor and William Moore Patch, will reach the Illinois tonight with a libretto by Anne Caldwell, author of "Chin Chin," and "Jack o' Lantern," and music by Dr. Hugo Felix who wrote the score of "Pom Pom." Among the players are Harry K. Morton, an eccentric dancer, late of the "Greenwich Village Follies"; Esther Howard, Paul Nicholson, Una Fleming, Joseph Lertora, Zella Russell, Daniel Healy, Helen Ford, and Mary Harper. The story is about an insurance agent who insures brides and their husbands against domestic unhappiness.

Miss Alice Brady tonight will evict "The Shubert Gaieties" from the Garrick to start there a season in "Forever After," which is a dream romance in several stages. It begins in adolescence, traverses the battlefields, and ends in betrothal. James Crane, Miss Brady's husband and son of Dr. Frank Crane, will act the principal man's rôle.

"The Girl in the Limousine," a successful bed-play and companion piece to "Up in Mabel's Room," will be the fare at the Woods, beginning April 18. The leading parts will be acted by John Cumberland, Doris Kenyon, and Charles Ruggles. "The Greenwich Village Follies" is announced for the Studebaker, starting May 2.

"The Rose of China" will move to the Auditorium theater April 18, and its place at the La Salle will be taken by "Nightie, Night," a farce with Francis Byrne, Dorothy Mortimer, Suzanne Willa, Ruby Craven, Marie Chambers, Grant Mills, Malcolm Duncan, and others in the cast. Adolph Klauber and the Messrs. Selwyn are the producers.

Selwyn & Co. have announced the acceptance of nine new plays for production. They are: "The Mistress of Chance," a melodrama by G. W. Albyn and C. W. Bell; "The Double Bar," a drama by Martin Brown; "Rollo's Wild Oat," by Clare Kummer; "Love and Learn," a comedy which Edgar Selwyn is now writing with Vincent Lawrence; "The Voice from the Minaret," by Robert Hichens; an unnamed play by Avery Hopwood; a play for Leo Carrillo which they will produce in conjunction with Adolph Klauber, and another by Salisbury Field in which Margaret Lawrence will be starred. The Selwyns are said to be trying to get two theaters in Chicago.

From today's New York Times:

The illness of John Barrymore was anything but unexpected to those who have observed him at close range during the last few strenuous months and who have marked the tremendous amount of work which he has put behind him.

One who spent several hours with Mr. Barrymore at his home last week declares that his illness is hardly a breakdown, but simply the intense and immeasurable fatigue of one who has been overworking for many months. To this visitor he declared that he was not only unable to play Richard but that he was literally incapable of standing upon his feet for the period of time which Richard required. He has hied himself, accordingly, to the resort of a celebrated renovator for a long, long rest, and there is every reason to believe that he will be fully ready for a hard season in the fall.

Billie Burke has apparently abandoned her idea of an all-star revival of "The School for Scandal"—for the present, at least. At all events, nothing further has been said about it and two of her purposed fellow players, William Faversham and Norman Trevor, are about to engage in other enterprises. Mr. Faversham will devote himself to the screen and Mr. Trevor will begin rehearsals in a production which will have its premiere two weeks hence.

Margaret Anglin, out in San Francisco, is about to appear for the first time in "The Trial of Joan of Arc," a work hitherto identified largely with Sarah Bernhardt.

By Mae Tinée.

IT is a pleasure to welcome Barbee's Loop theater to our midst. "Midst" is good, for it's sure in the middle of things. One compliments the management on the beautiful interior and trusts that it may have a successful career.

In the Norma Talmadge picture chosen as the premier feature, the playhouse has an attraction that will probably bring satisfactory receipts to the box office. It is the last picture made by Miss Talmadge while working for Select, and her leading man is none other than Conway Tearle.

My dears, it is certainly open season for Mr. Tearle, isn't it? Did you ever see anything like the way the feminine stars are rushing that man? Were it not true that there is safety in numbers, one might fancy Mrs. Tearle setting a small and defiant foot down on his movie activities. Between you and me, however, I don't imagine he's particularly susceptible. Many's the yawn I bet he hides in well bred secrecy.

This picture was made from a short story by Wilkie Collins. It is quite an unusual and engaging little plot that affords Miss Talmadge the opportunity of appearing before you as neither you nor I have ever seen her before. I yearn to tell you all about her, but I feel you would much rather not be told. You're sure to see the picture, if you're a man, because Norma's in it; if you're a woman, because Conway's there. Producers bet on a sure thing when they run a combination like this one.

Aside from the two leads the acting in the photoplay is all right, but nothing extraordinary. The photography is good and the picture has been well directed. There's some unnecessary padding. However, there are not many producers who have the divine gift of realizing when enough's enough.

Anita Stewart is to be seen soon in the recent novel by Kathleen Norris, "Harriet and the Piper."

GEO. M. COHAN and his new Star GEORGES RENAVENT

Immediately after Mr. Cohan saw Mr. Renavent act in "Genius and the Crowd" he made a star of him. Mr. Renavent is French and several seasons ago appeared at Central Music hall with Lucien Bonheur's players from Paris. His company at Power's Monday night will include Marion Coakley, H. Cooper-Cliffe, Fuller Mellish, Vera Fuller Mellish, Rubi Trelease, Katherine Stewart, Wright Kramer, Ralph Soule, and a lot of others.

Ask Me! Ask Me! Ask Me!

M. L. M.: Thanks, ever so much, for the information. I remember now that "The Society Exile" was the name of the Elsie Ferguson picture so similar to "The Forbidden Woman." You fans do know so much more than I when we get right down to brass tacks, don't you?

GEORGIANA B.: I'll try to put the picture of your favorite in the roto some time again soon. Address Mr. Moore in care of Selznick, Fort Lee, N. J.

B. M. T.: Thanks for your nice, friendly letter. Address Constance Talmadge at 318 East Forty-eighth street, New York.

JAY DEE SEE: Again I purr at your approval.

G. E. G.: Sherlock Holmes has nothing on you. If you write and tell me just what the "inside dope" is you want, I'll see if I can't help you out.

E. L. H. JR.: Won't you please repeat your request, sending a stamped, addressed envelope? The list of addresses you want is too long to give in this column.

MR. R.: Good-by, Dolly Grey!

Ouija in Another Gooseflesh Drama with Crane Wilbur

By Burns Mantle

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—They are a crafty crew, these playwrights who have taken advantage of the psychic urge to interest people in a new kind of gooseflesh drama. They do not say that spiritualism is not true or that all mediums are frauds. They are particular to leave the question open. It may be they are a little in doubt themselves and not at all of a mind to risk giving offense to the spirits.

Crane Wilbur, the screen hero who this week made his Broadway debut both as playwright and actor in "The Ouija Board," is frank to say that he believes "most professional psychics are fakes," but he leaves the amateurs out, and later, in his play, proves their case for the automatic writing mediums.

This newest of the spirit plays is much the most exciting of the series, and the most ingeniously constructed. The Annixter family on earth consists of the father, a daughter, and an adopted son. Mrs. Annixter has been dead some years. She had been a good mother, but she made one false step during her lifetime when she ran away with a handsome crook. When he deserted her she returned to her home, at her husband's invitation; was forgiven, and so firmly reëstablished herself in Annixter's affections that when she died his worship of her knew no bounds.

Gabriel Mogador is a professional psychic, also a convicted forger. But by growing a beard he has escaped the detection of the police, and by posting himself in advance he is enabled to convince his clients of his gifts as a medium by reproducing the handwriting of their departed friends and relatives. It is thus he catches Annixter. The messages that come through Mogador from the late Mrs. Annixter are invariably in her own handwriting.

It was Mogador's scheme to influence the marriage of Annixter's adopted son to the Annixter girl and then take the fortune the boy would acquire away from him. The crisis of the play is reached when Annixter, seeking a final word of advice from the spirit of Mrs. Annixter regarding the proposed marriage, consults the medium in his dimly lighted séance room. Annixter concentrates and Mogador begins to write. For a time all is as it has been before. Then the unexpected happens. Mogador is no longer able to control the pencil. The message he is getting this time is genuine. Finally he swoons, and when Annixter reads what has been written he learns not only Mogador's real name but also that he is the man who had lured Mrs. Annixter from her home years before. With a cry of rage Annixter thereupon sticks a library dagger into the heart of the wicked psychic and rushes from the room.

This, you might think, would be a sufficient climax for one act, but Mr. Wilbur has another. Barney McCare, a detective, happens into the room immediately after the flight of Annixter, and finds Mogador dead but still writing. The second message is to the effect that the man who killed Mogador will himself die a violent death before help can reach him. The detective rushes back to the Annixter residence. There he finds that Annixter, while listening to a phonograph, has been mysteriously shot through the heart.

And, as though this was not enough for one evening, there follows immediately the discovery that the shooting of Annixter was accomplished by placing an automobile revolver inside the phonograph and attaching the trigger to the mechanism of the machine, this discovery being made just at the moment a second murder by the same contrivance is threatened.

A weird play but a thrilling one, and, because it has been carefully cast and is quietly played, one that is accepted as being reasonably plausible by the most sophisticated of audiences.

It isn't likely the present interest in ghost plays will continue long, but while it lasts "The Ouija Board's" popularity is assured. Assisting Mr. Wilbur, who plays McCare, the detective, are George Gaul, Howard Lang, Stewart Wilson, and Regina Wallace.

The Barrymore family is out of luck this spring. Two days last week Miss Ethel was obliged to cancel performances of "Déclasse" because her physicians reported her in bed with an attack of laryngitis, and a few days later John Barrymore was compelled to quit the stage of the Plymouth, at the height of his success in "Richard III.," because he suffered a relapse of the attack of influenza which laid him low in February.

The younger Barrymore is not particularly robust, and of an excessively nervous temperament. He also has been working much too hard. His rôles in both "Redemption" and "The Jest" were a severe tax on his strength, and during the latter part of his engagement in "The Jest" he was working on an average of seven hours a day in a moving picture studio during the screening of "Dr. Jeckyll and Mr. Hyde," which is another terrifically trying characterization. Immediately following this experience he began rehearsing "Richard," and the fear of failure in his first Shakespearean venture naturally weighed heavily upon him. It would not be at all surprising if he were unable to play again this season, though the promise is held out at this writing that he will soon return to the cast.

Were David Wark Griffith to come to Chicago, he undoubtedly would be a visitor at the Ziegfeld Theatre.
He, as the greatest cinema genius, would be interested in knowing just why the unknown director who created "THE WOMAN HE CHOSE" has been acclaimed his nearest competitor as a creator of pictures that will live for all ages.
This unheralded director has strangely touched upon the delicate human chords of which Mr. Griffith alone has up to the present possessed the secret.

Native Rag and Jazz Await Coming of Master Composer

By W. L. Hubbard.

THE room was a small one. Or at least it seemed so, for the grand piano and two uprights left little free space in it. The five of us assembled there were not crowded, however, for two of the five were seated, one at the grand and the other at one of the uprights, while the remaining three of us perched near by and listened.

The two at the pianos smoked cigarets and seemed more interested in keeping the smoke going than they were in anything else. What their hands were doing on the keyboards appeared in nowise to concern them. They smiled slightly now and again, and occasionally they flung a remark or two at each other—a remark not always wholly complimentary, and yet ever good natured and always taken in the comrade spirit in which it was sent.

For they were comrades, that was easy to see. And when they paused between numbers or "stunts," they spoke commendation of each other in that half bantering, half deprecating way which the American uses when he feels most genuinely and estimates most highly. And afterwards when they talked of their work each was quick to speak praise of the other's capability and achievements.

The three who listened consisted of one who heard smilingly and wore on his face a certain look of ownership. He knew the pianists well, their work was his daily handling, for he managed the department where the products of their skill were sold. He was familiar with their powers, and appreciated them, was proud of them, and prized them. The second listener was no inexperienced auditor. He had done similar work himself, and had created along the musical lines there being pursued. But his eyes gleamed with appreciation of what the two players were accomplishing, for he heard with the ears of the fellow-worker who knows. The third was a greenhorn who had strayed into a music world comparatively unknown to him, for his business had taken him into other tonal fields. But he heard, marveled, felt guiltily and frankly ignorant, and rejoiced in a new experience.

Makers of Player Rolls.

Paul Reese had just played and sung his "Pickaninny's Slumber Song," which is making its way rapidly into popular favor, and then "Charlie" Straight and Roy Bargy gradually "got to work." To certain readers of this department these two names may not mean anything, but to the lover of popular music, and, especially of that music as it is made known to the world through record and player roll, the names are as household words, and have place among the biggest and best. Symphonic and recital fields may not know them. But the bigger, broader field that surrounds and overlaps these two limited ones recognizes, appreciates, and loves them.

These two men sat at the pianos, and for an hour played one popular success after another in the way in which these compositions are played in order to record them on the automatic roll. Shades of Godowsky and Hoffmann! It is doubtful if these two master pianists themselves could do what Straight and Bargy did during that hour! They surely couldn't, without a goodly amount of hard work and long time to practice. Both the youngsters are gifted with a technic that fears nothing, and with a musical keenness that acknowledges no obstacle.

During that hour of glorified rag and jazz I heard harmonies that Debussy, Ornstein, Scriabin, and all moderns have used for their most extreme and daring effects, and they were used here not in mere hit or miss fashion, but with real musical intent and for actual musical purpose. There were rhythms that would puzzle the most gifted theorist to analyze and classify, and yet they were made to skip along in most captivating and seemingly natural manner. There were melodies which the master creative geniuses of the world had caught and fixed on paper, but they now were changed, twisted, contorted until they seemed strange, weird visions of those melodies, with forms misshapen but their musical physiognomies still recognizable and unmistakable. And those two pianists juggled them all, tossed them back and forth, decorated them, stripped them naked, and finally whirled them off into silence with a nonchalance and an easeful dexterity that fascinated and astounded.

How Records Are Made.

It had ever been a source of wonderment to me as to just how record rolls were made, for the notes that came worth from them could never have been compassed by any one set of ten fingers. Straight and Bargy showed me how it was done. They play the record in four hand fashion, but so cunningly is the arrangement devised that the notes played by the two hands of one are never duplicated by those played by the other. One of the men plays melody and bass on one piano, the other puts in ornamentation and elaboration on the second, but the melody is usually played in the higher octaves of one piano, with the accompaniment well down in the lower, while the ornamental parts are put in by the second player, using only the middle part of his instrument. Of course the processes vary constantly, but there is ever this skillful avoiding of playing simultaneously on the same sections of the two keyboards. The result is a using of the whole keyboard range, yet seemingly accomplished and compassed by a single pair of hands.

To watch them do it is like watching two deft jugglers whirl, toss, and keep in the air some fragile, shining objects. Only that in this instance these objects are tonal bubbles which, if they touch each other, would burst and crash into nothingness. The strange new harmonies flash and glitter and sting, but only for the instant. The player of good rag does not confine himself to these modern chords. He loves the familiar and the standard, but with a skill that many a "great" composer might well copy he sweeps into these ultra harmonic effects only to swing back quickly into the well known and thoroughly established, thus intensifying the effect of the new and the restfulness of the old.

Only Real American Music.

And listening to this master playing of ragtime music, the thought came that by neglecting the studying of this department of our music life and its processes and activities the creator of our more serious forms of music possibly is overlooking something that could be of distinct value and help to him. Say what we may, the fact remains that the only music which is typically American is our so-called ragtime and jazz.

Much of this output is now banal, crude, and hopelessly cheap, but down under all the mass of commonness and worthlessness that the output in its entirety represents, there are worthwhile elements which it is believed the coming American composer will discover and utilize. The melodies of the more extreme example of rag are often as truly and accurately the rhythmic and intervallic outgrowth of the words of the text, as are those of a Strauss, a Debussy, or a Rachmaninoff. And the student of melodic creation could find material of profit in examination and analyzation of them, as well as in the skill with which this melodic line is ever kept prominent in the composition, no matter what the harmonic or accompanying foundation and ornamentation may be.

Rich Field for Study.

The employment of daring harmonies and their skillful speedy resolution into the simpler ones will also supply helpful suggestion to the man who is patient enough to study them and their use in ragtime. And the rhythmic variety and shift, which is the very spirit of good rag, is a field so rich in possibilities, already so far developed and so vitally essential to the discovering of the musical utterance that is to be typically American, that the future creator of the "big" American music cannot afford to overlook it.

There is no reason whatever why all the resources of ragtime and of jazz should not be utilized in symphony, in symphonic poem, in overture, in rhapsody, in opera, and in art song. The composer gifted with fantasy and real creative powers will find in these commoner materials suggestions and helps which will fire his imagination, quicken his inspiration, and can but result in his putting into his music the spirit which is American. For it is the spirit which is American that has made for us our ragtime music, and keeps it so vitally active. And when the man comes who, taking that spirit, can glorify it, ennoble it, and beautify it through his genius, that man will be the first real American composer, and his music will be the first true American art-music the world has received.

Cannot slip at heel Sizes 2-11 Widths AAAAAA-EEE

Never before has any one made an oxford or pump that positively would not slip at the heel or bulge at the side. Foot troubles too numerous to mention are caused by shoes being too large in the heel and instep. 90% of the people over eleven years of age have arch trouble, which is caused by the incorrect fitting of shoes. 50% of the people have bunions on the metatarsal joints of the first and fifth toes, which are due to the shoes being so broad in the heel and instep that the feet slide forward, removing the support from the arch and ankle, bending the shoe in the wrong place and causing abnormal pressure and friction; also causing corns, ingrown nails, crooked and overlapping toes, callouses on bottom of feet, FLAT FOOT, with resultant symptoms; the feet swell, burn, ache and have sharp pains under the heel, ball of foot is sore and feels as if walking on marbles, ankles become weak and swollen, legs cramp, knees stiffen, pains are produced in hips, small of back, shoulders and neck, poor circulation and extreme nervousness.

Ready-to-Wear Combination Last Oxford

There Is a Dr. Pinkston Combination Last Shoe for Every Foot and for All Occasions

These shoes are better than the standard shoes because they are TWO WIDTHS NARROWER IN THE HEEL, ONE WIDTH NARROWER IN THE ARCH, AND TWO WIDTHS WIDER THROUGH THE BALL OF THE FOOT than any other shoe that has ever been made. The narrow heel PREVENTS THE SHOE FROM SLIPPING UP AND DOWN. The narrow instep KEEPS THE FOOT FROM SLIDING FORWARD. The broad ball gives PERFECT FREEDOM OF THE TOES. The entire comfort and grace of walking depend entirely upon the proper articulation of the ball of the foot. So many people have the mistaken idea that shoes are shoes and that one make of shoe is just as good as another; but after you have worn a pair of Dr. Pinkston's shoes you will realize that he has the shoe that you have long been looking for.

In Addition, Dr. Pinkston Has a Department Devoted Exclusively to Made-to-Measure Shoes for perfect and imperfect feet for street and dress wear, for men, women and children, WHICH PREVENT, RELIEVE AND CURE FOOT TROUBLES. There are twenty-six bones in the human foot which must be properly supported. Dr. Pinkston examines the foot and knows just where to place the support just as the individual foot requires. Dr. Pinkston makes a special last—a reproduction of your foot—and then builds a shoe over that last, thereby assuring perfect comfort and style. You can make your selections from the finest imported leathers in the world, of vegetable tannage, which prevents the burning sensation caused by acid tannage leather.

Ready-to-Wear Combination Last Shoe

The fundamental principle of fitting and making shoes is to know the anatomy of the feet—to know just what bone is misplaced, what blood vessel is impeded and what nerve is impinged—then to know how to distribute the weight of the body equally from heel to ball and to support the weak places in a way to strengthen them. This is what Dr. Pinkston POSITIVELY DOES.

Gold from Europe Is Sent Back in Tourists' Pockets

By Mme. X.

FINANCIERS on this and the other side of the Atlantic need be no longer alarmed at the torrent of gold which has for so many months been flowing into this country endangering that precious thing, the world's monetary equilibrium. As in so many other moments of international peril, the individual American has sprung up by the thousands to remedy the trouble, American women being especially ready and eager to set the matter right.

Each of these helpful ones is offering his or her services to carry this surplus right back to Europe in the shape of letters of credit, travelers' cheques, or even in coin, and there distribute it to the shopkeepers, railway clerks, hotel proprietors, restaurateurs, dressmakers, milliners, and theatrical managers. It is a noble effort and if the United States government can turn out the necessary passports fast enough and if the steamship companies can provide adequate transportation, it seems probable that the gold balance will soon be restored.

From all over this broad land of ours these self-appointed monetary agents are rising and clamoring to be given a chance. At a luncheon in New York ten days ago the writer and her hostess were the only ones out of eight women who weren't sailing for the other side within the next three months.

Majority on Pleasure Bent.

A few of this vast, surging horde are going for definite purposes more or less connected with some one or other of the many war relief undertakings carried on by us in Europe, but the great majority seems merely animated by an unexpressed, perhaps subconscious, impulse to return European gold to European people—and they'll do it.

Of the first and smaller class is Miss Anne Morgan of New York, famous daughter of the famous financier and art collector, the late J. Pierpont Morgan. She has spent the last six months traveling up and down the land enlisting aid, moral and pecuniary, for her pet project, the rehabilitating of a section of that part of the devastated region of France that lies about Soissons, Blerincourt, and neighboring towns. Now, backed by committees all over the U. S. A., she is returning to France, taking with her a soil expert, a man named Fullerton, who has accomplished wonders on Long Island in the reclamation of land considered from earliest times as incurably sterile and nonproductive.

Back to Their Homes.

The district in France covered by Miss Morgan's organization is about fifteen miles square and before the war supported an agricultural population of 50,000. Some 20,000 of these have been restored to their little farms, largely through the agency of the American committee working with the French government. About sixty young American women, each paying her own expenses, are helping these hapless, homeless folk to rebuild and reequip their shattered villages and farms.

There are also experts to instruct the peasants in the care of and handling of American agricultural machinery. The French peasant is a violent conservative, profoundly averse to trying any new methods of tilling the soil or caring for stock, so this part of the society's work has to be handled carefully. The American committee reports, however, growing appreciation there of our tractors, reapers, and binders.

Her New York headquarters at 19 East Thirty-ninth street occupy three floors of a small building and simply buzz with life and movement. On the ground floor a chic little restaurant and tea shop provides refreshment and a cheerful rendezvous for that busy neighborhood and at the same time, coins good money for the committee's work in France.

Whether Miss Morgan is in the building or not her vivid personality dominates and permeates everything and everybody. She has a smile and an encouraging word for all her fellow workers. She is always an object of interest to her sex as she wears the smartest of French clothes and is what our Gallic friends call "bien mise," which is a degree more expressive than "well groomed."

New Style of Coiffure.

Speaking of modes, one of the new fashions noted in New York restaurants when we returned from the comfortable, unstylish tropics last week, was the coiffure of many, extremely young and good looking women. They fearlessly pulled their hair straight and tight back from their foreheads and wore it fluffed full over their eyes, thereby making the aforesaid foreheads high and the faces narrow. It was youth's challenge to maturity, because none but the youngest could successfully overcome such a handicap and look charming.

Age throws the gauntlet to youth in the spring modes as displayed in New York millinery establishments by electing to wear the brightest, crudest colors in headgear which are obtainable. A thoroughly up to date Gotham milliner told me, when I was dazzled by some of the season's most violent color outbursts that those combinations were the especial favorites of her elderly customers.

Pleasing Welcome for Traveler.

New York is a delightful port of entry for an American citizen. Her famous towered skyline, the quaint old streets that provide exits from her docks, the brilliant hazy radiance that pervades her long, straight avenues, robbing them of painful angularity, all combine to exhilarate the returned wayfarer to a delicious degree.

They've a new way of regulating that unequaled torrent of traffic in Fifth avenue, and that's by a series of towers, or lighthouses, frail, steel structures, each with three big round lights, red, green, and white—and a lighthouse keeper. When the central white light glares the north and south traffic, from Washington square to Fifty-ninth street, moves for a minute and a half. The red light slowly blinks a warning to the stream to halt, while the big green eye opens to see that the east and west traffic has three-quarters of a minute to cross the big street.

Sometimes at some crossings there is no east and west traffic; the tide halts just the same, and waits the signal to proceed. It's an impressive spectacle and instance of highly developed traffic management.

"It Is to Laugh."

To come back to Chicago after a three months' absence is like returning to a large, slatternly, untidy, kindly, generous, smelly wife. And to find this same cheerful spouse, not mending her clothes, or washing her hair, or setting her house in order, but blowing a raucous, untuneful horn—well, friends, "it is to laugh."

If we have the dirtiest streets in the world, the worst intramural transportation, the most boss ridden city government, don't let's be so vociferous about it. Take down those electric signs about boosting Chicago. They make us ridiculous. Let us use that energy and money to make the city decent. We've fine traditions and fine ideals; no city has better, but this moment is one of our most depressing, at least so it seems to a returned wayfarer.

At the Historical Society.

The shrine of our traditions is the Chicago Historical society in the old brown stone building on the corner of Dearborn avenue and Ontario street. They had a party there yesterday afternoon, where the portraits of the great of Chicago's early days looked down on their descendants and successors.

The society has the opportunity to buy the Gunther collection of antiquities, in which the late candy merchant is said to have invested a round million of dollars. This is offered to the C. H. S. for $150,000.

There are many things of value in it. Among others the original pass Benedict Arnold gave to the luckless Maj. André. Also the pewter and German silver dinner service used by George Washington in his campaign in the revolutionary war, and many valuable autograph letters and documents from American and foreign celebrities. The collection is a famous one and said to be worth many times the price mentioned.

It is to be hoped the money to buy it will be forthcoming. I hope to live to see the day when the historical society, housed in a fine building on the Lake Shore drive, will be the object of pilgrimage for Americans from all over the continent. Don't let's spend money on those silly signs.

Hear Plea for American Academy.

Chicago women are always involved in good works whose maintenance requires social activities of extensive and delightful nature. Nowhere do they sugar the pill better. They more than sugar it—they gild it. The American academy at Rome is sending out a call for a million dollar endowment fund to reestablish it firmly in classic soil. Its agents, famous exponents of art and culture, are coming here to tell us of the aims and achievements of this institution.

On Monday evening, April 19, Harold McCormick's empire drawing rooms (I think that's the period they represent) will be thrown open to a company of representative people gathered together by Mrs. Walter Brewster, chairman of the committee in charge, to hear Ferraccio Vitale and Royal Cortissoz discourse. The former is, to judge from his photograph, a most personable son of Tuscany and is said to be a landscape architect of note. The latter is probably the most distinguished American art critic of today.

Many dinner parties will precede the evening's program. Among the hostesses at these functions will be Mesdames Watson Blair, Arthur Meeker, Joseph G. Coleman, John Borden, A. A. Sprague, Frederick Upham, and Walter Brewster.

On the committee, besides these dinner givers, are the Mmes. Ogden Armour, John A. Carpenter, Kellogg Fairbank, Potter Palmer, Marshall Field, Samuel Insull, Cyrus H. McCormick, Julius Rosenwald, Joseph Winterbotham, and Harry Pratt Judson and the Messrs. Harold McCormick, Arthur Heun, and George Porter.

No money will be solicited that evening.

Other Coming Events.

That same night the Alliance Française is giving a concert at Orchestra hall to raise money for its French library. The patronesses will be Mmes. John A. Carpenter, Arthur Ryerson, Jacob Baur, George Higginson Jr., Thomas W. Hinde, E. J. Senn, and W. E. Clarke.

This is also the date set by that cheerful and renowned organization known as "The Wayfarers," to give a farewell banquet to Charles R. Crane, who is leaving this country in a few weeks for China to which country he has recently been appointed American minister. The next presidential election will have much to do with deciding the length of his tenure of this interesting post.

The Anti-Cruelty society was made the richer by a distinguished dramatic entertainment given last Tuesday evening by the Misses Louise and Rue Winterbotham, at the residence of Mrs. Joseph Winterbotham Jr., 212 East Superior street.

Half a hundred dollars was raised by the sale of tickets.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Roy McWilliams, Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbanks, Mr. and Mrs. John Borden, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Winterbotham, and Mr. and Mrs. Barrett Wendell. Where they were of suitable age the offspring of these well known society leaders were also present. The occasion was most successful from every point of view.

War Heroes at Arts Club.

Every one who was present at the Arts club last Wednesday evening enjoyed the program of Leo Sowerby's compositions presented by him and three other artists whose names have escaped me. Next Tuesday the members of the club will gather to hear the Anglo-oriental poet, Mr. Sassoon, read his poems.

His is an aloof, mystic personality. How much of this comes from a long drawn out, terrible experience in the trenches (for he saw some of the worst fighting of the great war and was three times wounded) and how much is inborn it is hard to say. But he has made his mark in the literary world in London and is worth much attention here.

Another war hero and real artist here is Robert La Montaigne St. Hubert (what a beautiful name), whose pictures are on exhibition at the Arts club. Tall, elegant, melancholy, he is is removed as far as possible from our vivid, garish world of today. He was terribly wounded in the war, lost one eye (for an artist a greater catastrophe than to lose a leg) and now has shut the door on the immediate past to devote himself once more to art.

Victims of the Blizzard.

Many of us will long remember that emphatic Easter blizzard of a week ago, but no one will have more poignant memories of it than Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman and Howard Gillette. Having accepted an invitation from St. Louis to attend, officially, as parents of the Board walk, the opening last Monday of the St. Louis version of this famous bazaar, they set forth, with their best raiment, last Sunday evening to go there by the 10:30 train.

Together with several hundred other would be travelers, they waited in the Polk street station from a little after 10 to half past 2 o'clock. Then, as Mrs. Coleman was unable to reach her household by telephone, she went to spend the rest of the night at the Blackstone hotel while Mr. Gillette betook himself to the Chicago club, and the St. Louis Board Walk opened on Monday without them. Nature is very indifferent to the plans and doings of us poor mortals.

[Society notes on pages 6 and 7.]

MISS HELEN JANE BROOKS

One of the most interesting announcements of last week was that of the engagement of Miss Helen Jane Brooks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Brooks of Wichita, Kas., to Standish Hall of 721 Rush street, son of Mrs. Harry Newberry Hall of Lake Forest. The engagement is the outcome of a romance which began on shipboard, at the outbreak of the war, when Miss Brooks and Mr. Hall were returning from Europe. Miss Brooks, who is popular in Wichita society, attended Bryn Mawr college and was graduated from the University of Chicago. Mr. Hall is a graduate of Harvard, class of 1916. He spent a year and a half in South America, returning to serve in the navy, from which he was released with the rank of ensign.

MRS. GILBERT EDWIN PORTER III

A wedding of unusual interest to Chicago society took place last Wednesday evening in Anniston, Ala., when Miss Anne Horry Kilby, daughter of Gov. and Mrs. Thomas E. Kilby of Alabama, became the bride of Gilbert Edwin Porter III., son of Gilbert E. Porter of 942 Lake Shore drive. Many Chicago friends of the bridegroom attended the wedding, which was solemnized at Grace Episcopal church and was followed by a reception at "Phydfillin," the summer residence of the bride's parents. Mr. Porter, who is one of the most popular young men in the city, will bring his bride to Chicago to live after a month's honeymoon at the Virginia Hot Springs. They will spend the summer at the residence of his father.

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Chicago Woman's Aid Big Factor in Civic Affairs

THE Chicago Woman's Aid activities during the year have fallen under three main departments—education, art and literature, and civics and philanthropy.

The education department, under the direction of Mrs. Morris Woolf, has inaugurated the first nutrition center in the city conducted by a civic organization. Its child health committee has concentrated its forces in the Smyth school, and, after weighing and measuring each child, selected the underweight children and organized them into three "nutrition classes." Charts have been prepared and the gains or losses minutely analyzed. The average gain increases weekly and the actual improvement is so satisfactory that it invites closer inspection on the part of the public.

Besides this work the community center at the Smyth school, under Mrs. Max Loeb's committee, has proven successful. The value of such an enterprise can be judged by the enthusiastic children, averaging 200 daily, who not only come to play but to take advantage of the modern social center addition, the supervised study room.

The Americanization committee's valuable experiments have added considerably to the information on Americanization for the year.

Physical conditions of the school basements and grounds have been vigilantly inspected by the school grounds committee, who reported all violations to the proper authorities.

The education department has not only attended the meetings of the board of education, kept in touch with the educational movement generally, but also established during the year monthly meetings whose program included Superintendent of Schools Peter Mortenson, Horace Bridges, and Hugh Magill.

The art and literature department, of which Mrs. Mortimer Singer is chairman, has established regular music study classes and under the direction of Miss Tina Haynes has studied the programs of the Symphony orchestra. There have also been regular classes for the study of nature resources. And again this year through its art committee the department has awarded a prize to a Chicago artist. This year it was awarded to the best work of a woman sculptor as a message of encouragement and appreciation.

The civics and philanthropy department, through its home economics committee, inaugurated study classes in the study of the family budget, and by becoming the official committee for the Third ward of the fair price commission helped to spread the message for lower prices.

The department's other committees are doing effective work. The housing committee has been most active in agitating for a comprehensive zoning of the city and for better housing; the public comfort station committee is working intensively for more stations; both the child welfare committee and personal service committee are assisting other agencies in health and directive work, and the committee on bathing beaches and playgrounds has shown its concrete interest in playground work by having one of its members take the civil service examination for playground work. The "cleanup" work in the Smyth school under the direction of the boy captains is an interesting experiment.

The department by its keen interest in civic problems, its visits to institutions, and its close scrutiny of municipal conditions has earned a recognized position in civic activity. The work of the committee for assisting the blind, of which Miss Clara Eliel is chairman, is concentrated in the Industrial Home for the Blind. This work is not only appreciated by the blind but by all those who realize the value of splendid cooperative work.

Besides the direct work of the departments, the Chicago Woman's Aid contributes to twenty large city agencies and is directly represented through its delegates. It conducts semi-monthly meetings for all members, at which literary and educational programs are presented.

The organ of the club is the monthly Bulletin. Its object is to report all the club activities, to create a medium for free expression and communication between its members, and act as a middleman between the organization and those whose aims and activities are similar to it.

The club was founded in 1882.

A tough, durable varnish made clear and in eight colors from Light Oak to Dark Mahogany. Especially made to endure hard wear. It is for that reason best for furniture and all woodwork. Waterproof.

Kyanize Floor Enamel

The new coating for old floors. Easy to apply. It dries overnight with a tough, waterproof and washable lustre. Eight fade-proof solid colors that cover unsightly, discolored floors and make them attractive. Suitable also for piazza and cement floors.

Kyanize White Enamel

Regarded as the highest grade enamel in the world. This enamel works very freely under the brush, covers much more surface to the gallon than ordinary enamels. For interior or exterior use. Its beautiful porcelain-like surface will not crack or peel.

Kyanize Celoid Finish

Answers squarely the demand for a waterproof and washable coating for all walls and woodwork. Comes in eight delicately-toned tints. Dries quickly with a handsome, satin-like lustre—not a high gloss distracting to the eye nor a dead, flat effect.

Kyanize Motor Car Enamels

The durable coating for motorists who desire to improve the appearance and increase the life of their old cars. Water and weather proof absolutely. Flow on easily without showing brush marks or laps. A choice of eight snappy colors in addition to Black and White.

"THE MAN WHO WOULD BE KING"

By Oney Fred Sweet

PRAIRIE JUNCTION had its colorful periods—Saturday afternoon in winter when Main street was full of fur coated farmers in for their week's shopping, Saturday night in summer when the band played in the park. But on the March morning that Remmy Gilbert stood looking across the court house square from the vantage point of the Pioneer house windows, the vista was not particularly inspiring.

Had Remmy been less familiar with Prairie Junction, he would have felt that he had chosen a barren field for his endeavors. Remmy possessed imagination, and as he looked out upon the apparent bleakness he saw in its stead the pink night a few weeks, later when "under the auspices of"—he was not sure, as yet, just what—there would be produced under his guidance a "benefit" that would bring forth the hundreds which he knew were merely hibernated hard by.

Remmington Gilbert, through long experience, had evolved a method for mobilizing mankind under a roof, at the entrance of which there presided a taker of tickets. The method divided the multitude into two classes—those chosen for the cast of "A Daughter of Babylon" and those who would be interested in watching the chosen perform. (The second act of the operatic spectacle called for a chorus of sixty childish voices.)

As yet Mr. Gilbert had not started to work. He was merely looking out upon Main street from the vantage point of the Pioneer house office window. In due time he purchased a cigar of the clerk at the desk and casually asked a few questions.

"So Lemuel Griggs is the man, eh?" mused Remmington Gilbert, glancing at the end of his now half burnt cigar.

"Well," the clerk emphasized, "it's as I tell ya. Griggs has to be back of anything that goes through here. He's been here thirty years, worth more than anybody else, conservative, honest as the day is long."

"And it's Lemuel Griggs who says either 'thumbs up' or 'thumbs down' to a proposition, "nodded Gilbert, pursing his lips and buttoning the collar of his overcoat. "Every town has one like him. You say I'll find him out at the plow works?"

Mr. Gilbert found Lemuel Griggs at the plow works, but the gentleman was very busy when he asked for an interview. Remmy was just as well satisfied. The moments of waiting gave him an opportunity to study the president of the plant as he sat absorbed in a problem on his desk.

"Well?" Griggs eventually asked, sharply.

The gentleman was still frowning when Remmy Gilbert finished with the propaganda concerning his project.

"You have other motives aside from the raising of funds for the improvement of our park," snapped Mr. Griggs.

"I should expect," agreed Gilbert, "a certain percentage of the proceeds, of course. Enough to reimburse me for my time in rehearsing and managing the program. As a business man, you appreciate that."

"As a business man, I asked the question," snorted Griggs.

"But don't you think an entertainment of this sort is a good thing for the community, occasionally? They tell me you haven't had a 'home talent' here in ten years."

"It would have a tendency to interfere with school work among the young and divert the attention of older folks from necessary channels," the local power retorted. "I am very busy this morning. My attitude on the matter is final."

Mr. Gilbert had one more card. He disliked playing it, but—"I am very sorry, Griggs, because there is a rôle in this production that would fit you exactly. Having spent my life in this line, it is easy for me to recognize that you have excellent vocal ability had you ever had occasion to make use of it."

The frown left the brow of the president of the plow works. A light that had in it the wistfulness of youth came into his keen eyes. The corners of his mouth softened.

"Just how could you tell?"

"Very simple to one in my profession. As you talk there are certain vibrations against your teeth that one finds associated with peculiar vocal strength. You have, I dare say, at some time in your life, sung considerably."

"You'll have to do the part yourself," insisted Lemuel Griggs, coldly.

"It was a long time ago," Griggs reminisced. "When I was in school, in fact, and long before I located here. Glee club work."

"Bass? I could tell as much. Now there is a solo in 'A Daughter of Babylon'—a bass solo——"

Rehearsals for "A Daughter of Babylon" began the following night. Within a week the town was all agog. Hardly a home where there were not in the making costumes that called for cheesecloth and paper gilt stars. One might have said that everything was running smoothly for Remmington Gilbert. But, be it said for Mr. Gilbert, that while he hardly expected to be as discriminating as a Belasco in selecting his casts, he had, at one time in his life, cherished high artistic tastes, and though commercialism had crept in, enough temperament had survived to cause the voice of Lemuel Griggs, once heard and considered, to grate sorely.

The gathered material, as a whole, pleased Mr. Gilbert, but in his desire to close a contract, he had rashly promised Lemuel the part of king, and it was a rôle that bobbed up all through the piece. After hearing Lemuel Griggs sing, Mr. Gilbert found that even though he had had fears, he had by no means feared the worst. To the task Mr. Griggs brought all of his business principles. He was prompt at rehearsals, painstaking, patient, courageous, determined, enthusiastic. But as an operatic hit he was a good plow manufacturer.

Mr. Gilbert tried strategy. "Now the costumes for the principals will, of course, be rented from a Chicago firm," he said confidently to Griggs one night at rehearsal. "Kings wore rather scant garments in those old days, you know. If you feel, on thinking it over, that you would rather not appear thus clad, it is not too late to——"

"Better get 'em here in plenty of time," Griggs had interrupted. "I don't believe in taking that last minute chance on anything. It isn't business."

Mr. Gilbert decided that if Mr. Griggs was to be sidetracked it could be done in no subtle manner. So he bore with Lemuel, hoping somehow that something would dispose of him before the eve of the event. He could, himself, take any of the rôles in a pinch. But the rehearsals demanded fortitude. Lemuel Griggs had been lifted out of himself; the artist deep within him was struggling to throw off the business man shell. He was living these days, not in Prairie Junction, but amid the pomp of Biblical times. He had discovered within himself, not exactly possibilities hitherto undreamed, but rather long smothered fancies that were for the first time being given an opportunity to burst into flame.

It was the night that Mr. Gilbert learned from Mrs. Griggs that the Griggs household was suffering through home rehearsals, that the producer sank into his first refreshing sleep at the Pioneer house. Mrs. Griggs was a sweet little woman and she had sought a heart to heart talk with the stranger who had yanked the town into the period of thousands of year back.

"I wish you would discourage Lemuel in this thing," she had pleaded. "He can't sing. It's so absolutely out of his line. The more he practices with his voice the worse it seems to get. I've said and done everything I could."

"Not everything," Gilbert had smiled back. "You could feed him something that disagrees with him, something that would not exactly make him real sick, you know, but keep him in bed until after the program. I'm joking, of course, Mrs. Griggs."

"I'm not joking," she had answered quickly. "I love him. And he's my husband."

And on the day of the big night it was reported that the Caruso of the cast was bedfast from an attack of indigestion. He sent for Remmington Gilbert, who entered his darkened room, registering sorrow.

"O, I'll make it tonight," assured Lemuel from his pillow. "I've pulled out of worse holes than this in business deals. I'm taking something every hour to keep my throat relaxed."

"There now. Just stay in bed and take it quiet," soothed Gilbert. "I've known fellows to get up too soon and it meant their finish."

"I'm not a quitter," grunted Griggs. "I never have been in business. If I had been, Amos Vandertop would have gotten the best of me long ago. He's tried it. He may be the next best business man in town, but he hasn't my long record back of him nor my prestige." Then the facial muscles relaxed as he turned dreamily to another vein. "In that solo, Gilbert, do you think I've got that half note just where it should be?"

Gilbert left with the feeling that the "king" had not been dethroned as completely as might be desired. That night he went early to the opera house with the feeling. The feeling staid with him all during the flutter back of the scenes and the buzz of the gathering audience. The moment at which the curtain was to arise neared. Gilbert laid out the king's robes in preparation of donning them himself, but he glanced furtively over his shoulder as he did so. He had forebodings. He cursed the artistic taste that remained in his makeup—lingered enough to make agonizing the thought of Griggs doing the main rôle of the production. He looked up.

"Well, I made it!" Griggs stood in the doorway. He was very pale, but his eyes shone triumphantly.

"I knew you'd come," greeted Gilbert, limply. Then the producer of "home talents" walked outside the dressing room, closed the door, and mopped his brow. The three hours of torture, then, were not to be averted.

Gilbert felt a hand on his shoulder. Amos Vandertop had come behind the scenes from out of the big audience.

"What's this I hear about the old bird not being able to show up?" asked Amos Vandertop excitedly. "Nonsense. See that he gets here. Send after him."

"You'll have to do the part yourself," insisted Lemuel Griggs, coldly, when a few minutes later Gilbert returned to the dressing room. It could be seen that he had stopped abruptly in donning the garments of a king of a past period. "O, I feel all right. Never was more myself. But I heard Vandertop outside there. And any time that he's anxious for me to do a thing there's a catch somewhere. You couldn't drag me on that stage tonight with a team of mules."

Thus, it came to pass that "A Daughter of Babylon" proved to be what the Weekly Sentinel termed the best production of the kind ever given in Prairie Junction, the decorative fountain for the park became a thing assured, Lemuel Griggs retained his reputation for dignity and conservatism, and Remmy Gilbert—after his sojourn at a rest cure—sought fields anew.

A LITTLE CHILD

"She asked me to go with them, but I thought I better not at first and told her I would come before my train left in the afternoon. Trenty said, 'You will come,' but she went away readily enough.

"I found them—Trenty was watching and came to me at once. It was a meager enough place, only one room, but decent, and there was a little cot for Trenty she showed me with pride, with the doll sleeping in it.

"The poor mother talked to me; she said she had always wanted to keep her child, but when she was working she could not keep her and after that her mother wouldn't give her up. She told Trenty what they would do 'when father came home,' and said they should send her to school next year. I am sure they will love her."

"O, that," Fidelia said impatiently, "who wouldn't. The terrible grandmother loved her. I think of her in the night, poor old dreadful. Nothing further was said?"

"O, no," Janet said, "no more than if she had been an ever fond but otherwise admirable parent, it was all done in high Roman fashion."

"It is better than we could have hoped," Marietta said, after a pause, firmly.

"No, my own love, not that," Fidelia objected, "say, it might be worse."

"It is as to has to be," Janet said with sad finality. "We can do nothing. The mother promised to write, but it is unlikely. I could see they moved about from one place to another all the time and it may be quite impossible to keep any connection."

They were all very tired; they sat in silence until presently Janet went on with a little catch in her voice:

"And at the very last—just before I came away—Trenty brought the glass balls—they had been packed up with her things—and laid them in my lap—and said—she said—O, dear, dear, dear Trenty—little white soul, born in squalor, to beggars—she said, 'You forgot these, you must take them back, you know, for if more little girls should come.'"

A LITTLE CHILD

by Marian LaGrange Wyatt

"We only know he came and went."

SHE was set down in the hall at midnight; 5 years old, dirty, ragged, travel worn, half dead with sleep, and wholly dumb with terror, like a little wild thing caught in a trap! Fidelia's friend, who had carried the child from the station, touched his hat, said "Good night," and went away. Marietta and Janet, who had waited up—the train was two hours late—stood in shocked silence. "All we can do tonight," Fidelia said, paraphrasing Mr. Dick, "is to put her to bed," and gathering her up she was carried to the little white room at the end of the hall that had been the married daughter's.

Fidelia is with the charities of a midwestern city. Marietta is mother, who goes to market, and darns the stockings. Janet is sister and paints miniatures, and Benson, the houseman, takes care of them all. The child was a "case" transmitted by the charities of a northwest city and destined for a point on the Atlantic seaboard. The following is substantially the "case record" and request received at Fidelia's office a few days before from the northwestern organization:

"Alice ———, 5 years old, illegitimate, born when her mother, a waitress in a restaurant, was 16, father unknown. The child has since remained with the grandmother, who has been a dependent on our books for years. Conditions in the home are deplorable, degrading, and dangerous. There are other children, half grown boys and girls, trained to beg on the streets. Feeling that this young child should be removed, we succeeded in tracing the mother, who had drifted to an eastern city and married a traveling salesman, or agent. The husband has stated they would provide for the child if she could be sent. The grandmother having persistently refused to give her up, she will be taken by order of the court and forwarded in care of train officials reaching your city Friday night. It is so long a journey for so young a child, will you kindly see that she is provided for over the week end and set on her way on Monday, when further transportation and full directions will be furnished?"

The railway terminal was in Fidelia's district and it was she who assumed the mission.

When the long train, late and awaited by the throngs that meet every overland train, rolled into the station, Fidelia and her friend ran down the crowded platform, and to their random inquiry, "Is there a little dependent child, alone?" came eager response, "O, yes, yes, she is with the conductor. Poor, poor little thing!" she was clinging to the conductor's hand, sobbing, shaking with unknown terrors, and when Fidelia's friend swept her up with soothing murmurs her head dropped on his shoulder and she fell asleep.

Marietta rose early next morning and with Benson's help laundered the more presentable of the shocking little garments; others and a dreadful newspaper bundle were burnt in the furnace. "What awful stockin's!" Benson said, holding them up. "Yes, yes, but never mind, burn those, too, if we can make her decently clean for breakfast—when the shops open we can get other things."

Daytime only brought to the stricken little soul remembrance of yesterday's horrors. Whatever they had been, fear was throned in her heart and dumbly she awaited doom.

The warm bath, though led up to with much light talk and chatter, threw her into such blue spasms of terror that she was hastily covered and brought to breakfast. She made no resistance or outcry at any time and like a lamb led to slaughter submitted to Benson, who lifted her to a chair reinforced by the big dictionary and fastened a napkin round her neck.

Raspberries came first, then oatmeal and cream, of which she raised the bowl and drank the last drops, looking over the rim with sorrowful eyes at Fidelia and Janet opposite, who twinkled and smiled at her, but met only leaden eyed despair. Bacon and eggs and popovers followed and informing, casual statements:

"Down at the end of the street, where the sun is shining on the water, is a beach with white sand where little girls can wade—and run—and splash——"

"And round the corner is a shop where you can get a bright red bucket and a little spade——"

"And shovel sand, and shovel sand——"

The trembling lips parted and breathed "I can't go there."

"Why, yes, yes," from Janet, "I'm going right after breakfast; if I had a little girl to go with me we could play all day. We could walk to the car with Fidelia, who has to go to other little girls and old poor people and sick babies, then we could get the bucket and shovel and have a beautiful time."

Before breakfast was over Fidelia's friend came to share the last popovers and brought a large box of clothing hastily collected from friends. There was not only everything needful but, following Falstaff's requirements, superfluity—and the little waif was soon clothed in the plain and simple garments of the patrician child. There were socks and soft little moccasins—Fidelia as a child had always called them "mossakins."

Coming downstairs after she was dressed Fidelia said, "Now we'll count to each landing—one, two——"

"Yes, yes," Fidelia said, "you are to stay wtih us tonight and tomorrow night and—and—all the time until you go to your own mother."

Trenty considered mournfully. "What mother?" she asked out of her confused mind.

"Your very, very own true mother, who is waiting for you to come," Fidelia declared with determined confidence. Trenty clung tightly to her. "I want to stay wiv you," she said, and they sat by her, each holding a hand until slumber sealed her eyes, then, "I shall go with her?" Janet said.

"O, Janey!" Fidelia cried, "will you go, can you go? I have wished so I could—you know I can't—there are all the others here."

"Yes, yes," Janet said, "certainly I shall go; to send her away alone now is out of the question."

Five years old, dirty, ragged, like a little wild thing caught in a trap!

"O," cried the midget with a bubble of laughter, skipping down, "I can count—free, five, trenty!" and Trenty she became to them all from that time forth.

No playthings were left in the house now, except some glass balls too large for marbles, which had survived all childish shocks; they were gayly plaided and iridescent and were always brought out for visiting children.

"Do you play wiv 'em?" Trenty asked, turning them in the light with interest.

"Not now," Janet said, "only when little children come."

The day was given up to enjoyment and acquisition, treasures were found in nearby shops. Returning from the beach when the sun became too hot, Marietta was found dressing a doll. The married daughter arrived early, bringing picture books, a canton flannel horse, and a spotted tin horse. The white horse went lame and was stabled in a corner of the piazza, but the spotted horse, named Phoebe after a departed favorite, was put at pasture under the birch tree on the lawn where she whinnied for water—Janet whinnied—which was procured in a cup from Benson and gravely held to Phoebe's tin nose.

A white celluloid swan and a green duck were added to the collection in the hope that these floating in the tub might detract from the terrors of the bath, but there were no more terrors, confidence was established and the second time Trenty only remarked, "Once before I had a baf."

When Janet and Trenty ran to meet Fidelia at night they were laden with spoil, but as bed time drew near shadows gathered on the little face and she clung closer to her new friends.

"Do I stay here tonight?" she asked out of her troubled heart.

"And if the mother shouldn't be there Janet, you could bring her right back."

"Why, of course," Janet said, "there wouldn't be anything else to do."

On Sunday Fidelia was with them and a whole happy day was spent on the beach building wonderful sand castles and in the garden snipping off poppy pods and making petunia ladies with frilly skirts—a band of noble dames—and serving them a delicate tea of hollyhock cheese and nasturtium salad; but prescience of parting was in the air and at every lull in activities clouds would gather and "I want to stay wiv you" be plaintively urged. She clung to the comforting hand when her head was laid on the pillow and started from sleep to be sure she was not forsaken.

On the last morning Marietta, going to her bed, found it empty; alarmed search discovered her with Fidelia; clasped close, the two curly heads on one pillow, fast asleep. "I woke in the night," Fidelia said, "and she was standing by my bed crying."

Preparation for going had been made as privately and casually as possible, Janet left early for Fidelia's office for the necessary papers and would meet the others at the train.

In the car the whole truth, suddenly, in spite of all attempted distraction, broke on the sad little heart. Clouds gathered, little lips trembled. "Janet is going with you all the way," they told her.

"She isn't here, I want to stay wiv you."

"She will be at the station and take you to your own mother," but tears poured over her cheeks, she cried not noisily but deeply, despairingly, as from a broken heart, and to all consolation offered only one cry, "I want to stay wiv you."

There was no comfort for any one.

At the station sorrows multiplied. Janet was delayed, train time drew near and she did not come. The unhappy party went through the gate and waited at the rear of the train, the platform filled with smart travelers. Fidelia with the clinging, sobbing child, a fountain of tears, Marietta with the impedimenta—the packages, the red bucket, the spade, the doll, the picture books, the canton flannel horse, and the tin horse, the white swan and the green duck, the colored beads to string, the silver cardboard and worsted with what Trenty called a "sew needle." There was only half a minute left; the conductor was holding his watch in his hand, a crowd was pressing up. "What is it? What is the matter?"

The moment of departure came and passed, the conductor slid his watch in his pocket, but still stood looking at the pathetic little group. Another minute went by and another and then Janet came running, waving the papers. Arms were unclasped from one neck and instantly closed on another. Janet with her clinging burden was helped up among the smart passengers, her bag tossed up, the porter with the bucket, the spade, the doll, leapt lightly after and the train rolled away.

When they sat down to dinner that night Fidelia gave one look round the table and laying her head on her mother's shoulder burst out, "O, mother, mother, her little face has been before me all day. Do you think she is crying now? I wish I had gone too—poor Janey, but she has her [a bewildering sequence of pronouns] and last night when I had put in clean collar and cuffs she wanted me to hold her. O, why did I do anything but hold her while she was here?"

"Fidelia, darling, don't cry so, she will be better; children forget so quickly."

"Trenty doesn't, Trenty remembers; whatever horrors she went through before she came haunt her yet, she is just like a white flower grown up from muck and ooze. Did you ever see anything so perfect, mother, or so darling?"

"Well—perhaps—just two or three times."

"And if the mother isn't there Janet is going to bring her right back. You knew that, didn't you mother?"

"I think the mother will be there. Now, darling, you must eat your dinner and not cry any more. We shall hear from Janet in the morning."

The night letter said:

"We have had a happy day. Trenty stopped crying as soon as we left the station; she knows now she will not be deserted. Has been playing all day. Shall arrive tomorrow morning about 10. Expect me Wednesday night unless I wire. Love and love, and every love. Janet."

A friend of the family said to the married daughter, "It was good of Janet to go with the poor little thing."

"Good!" was the scornful echo, "why, it's a wonder three women and two men didn't go."

They sat together in the twilight after Janet's return and she told her story:

"I wish you could have seen Trenty on the train. She was as cunning and so happy. We ranged the things all about on the window sill and the opposite seat and she made dabs at the cardboard with the 'sew needle" and strung the colored beads and played she was 'Mrs. Johnson' and I came to see her because she had 'so much sc'ubbin to do' she couldn't go out. She was delighted with the dining car and at night when we put the doll to bed in the net Trenty said, 'I like to know she's there.' It was only at night the old fear came back and she wanted me to sleep next the window and she next the curtain. I said no, but I would hold her hand all night; she said, 'Then I'll go to sleep.'

"In the morning in the dressing room a woman said to me, 'Is she the only one you've got?' 'Yes,' I said, 'the only one.' 'Well,' she snapped, 'you ought to have more.'

"Before we reached the station an official of the eastern organization came through calling, 'A child in care of the charities?' I stood up with Trenty and a tall girl following him caught her up saying, 'Don't you know me, I'm your mother?' It was all over, that instant. Trenty clung to me with one hand, but the other was round her mother's neck and I heard her murmur in another's ear, 'I want to stay wiv you.'"

"And was the mother—nice?"

"O, yes—quite; she seemed rather uncertain and strained at first. I think she was

WHICH?

THE STORY THUS FAR—Olga Ordinoff, the beautiful daughter of a Russian general, has been murdered. Her body, with a knife through the heart, is found in a hotel room by Betty Le Baron, a bride of three days on her honeymoon. Bob Le Baron, her husband, is arrested on suspicion but released when Hugh Smith, a private detective, fixes the crime on a waiter, who confesses and kills himself. This solution of mystery, however, does not satisfy Anne Blair, a young woman who lives in the hotel and has shown an eager interest in the case. With John Rush, an old friend of Le Baron's now employed as secretary to Harrison Hardy, a capitalist, Miss Blair starts an investigation of her own. She determines to find out why Hardy has appeared so strangely affected by the news of the murder, and to learn the significance of a little black cross she saw on the closet door in the Le Barons' room just before the police came. This cross, Rush remembers, disappeared mysteriously after he had seen the hotel's head waiter standing near the door and fumbling with a handkerchief. Hardy, after a time, admits to Miss Blair that the murder victim was a messenger, carrying funds supplied by himself and other capitalists to restore an imperialistic government in Russia. Meanwhile Anne has helped Ruthina Dushane, an heiress, out of a blackmail plot with which the girl was threatened by Caspar Dietz, a former gardener of her father's. Rush sees Dietz and Meyer, the head waiter, together shortly afterward and is convinced that the murder and the blackmail plot are in some way connected. Hardy invites his acquaintances to a dinner and conference in his rooms, but the gathering is broken up when Smith the detective, appears abruptly, declaring that one of those present helped plan the Ordinoff murder—whereupon Betty Le Baron screams and collapses, moaning "That face; that terrible face!" Indignant at Hardy's treatment of his guests, Rush quits the financier's employ and devotes himself to trailing Meyer, the head waiter. After seeing him enter a house on a side street with Dietz, he rents a room in a nearby building which overlooks the mysterious rendezvous. Much to his surprise, Anne Blair joins him in a night vigil on a fire escape outside the building. In the room across the way they see Meyer and Dietz, with Lieber, custodian of the Hardy trust company vaults, and several other men taking what appears to be a ceremonial oath of death. Anne impulsively jumps down on a balcony outside their window, Rush, following, stumbles and makes a noise which leads to discovery and capture.

TENTH INSTALLMENT.

A Strange Proposal.

APPARENTLY Anne had sensed that they were to have a respite. It remained to be seen how long it would be. Unceremoniously their captors gagged them, binding around their faces some strips of sheeting torn from the bed clothes. Roughly they were flung onto the bare boards of an unlighted closet or trunk room in the hall just outside the room. The door was closed on them and they were left there, gagged and bound, to await the result of the conspirators' debate about them.

Their prison, in the glimpse Rush had caught of it as they were being transferred, was a dusty room about 10 by 8, stiflingly close, without windows, seemingly offering no chance for escape, and yet he found comfort in the thought that at least they were there together. A great determination came to him. If escape was impossible, if, as he feared, they had only a few minutes more of life, he must tell this girl beside him how much she had come to mean to him. Working and twisting his jaw back and forth, he finally succeeded in loosening his gag a little, although with his hands bound there seemed no possibility of his getting rid of it altogether.

"Anne," he said, speaking slowly and distinctly, "can you understand me?"

His voice had such a strange, muffled sound even to his own ears that he hardly hoped his words would be intelligible, but from the floor beside him there came a kindred sound that might, by a great stretch of the imagination, have been interpreted as an affirmative. He managed to wriggle his body across the floor until his bound hands came in contact with hers, and at the pressure of her fingers he thrilled.

"Anne, dear," he said, "I have gotten you into a terrible plight. I doubt if we ever leave this house alive. It is hard to tell what may happen. We know too much. These rascals dare not let us go. Any minute our end may come. I had not intended to tell you, girl dear— at least not yet—but I want you to know I love you; I love you more than life itself. I'd gladly die if they would set you free."

Surely never in all the world had there been a stranger declaration of love than this. Though his heart was throbbing with an agony of pent-up affection, though there came rushing to his bruised and gagged lips a horde of burning, eager words, with the sheeting still about his mouth he had to speak slowly, a word at a time, and even then his speech sounded thick and confused, hardly understandable. And all the while his brain was chilled with the constant thought that at any minute their murderers might come to make away with them.

Did Anne hear him and had she understood? From her direction there came strange, muffled sounds. She was trying to say something, but try as he could he found it impossible to understand a word of what she was saying. Impatiently she drew away her fingers from his.

"You're not angry, girl dear, are you?" he went on. "I know I've little to offer you, even if we were to live. If this had not happened to us I wouldn't have spoken. I'm a poor sort of chap to talk to any woman of love. I have been trifling my life away. I never really cared until I met you. But, dear, I was trying to be worthy of you.

Gasping from exhaustion, he turned the key and stood listening.

Even before the dinner I had decided to leave Mr. Hardy and strike out for myself. I was going to make good. I wanted to be worthy of you. When I had accomplished something I wanted to come to you and tell you how much I loved you. Now, dearest, now, when it is too late, when we're facing death together, I just had to tell you. I love you so."

Once more from his companion came a series of muffled, unintelligible sounds. Was she angry with him? Was she reproaching him for having permitted her to join him in his perilous escapade? Perhaps she was shocked at his talking to her of love in the face of death. Remorse for his rashness smote him. What a bungler he was! It was all his fault that this splendid girl was here. He ought to have protected her. He ought never to have told her of his silly plan of trying to trap Meyer. He might have known that her daring and her love for adventure would inspire her to some rash action. If they were both murdered, if she was murdered, it was all his fault. A fine lover he was indeed not to have protected her! No wonder his declaration at such an untimely moment had aroused her indignation. She must be angry, else why had she drawn her fingers away?

Lying there in the dark, listening for the coming of their executioners, cursing his stupidity, racking his brains in vain for some plan of escape, out of the darkness her tied fingers came groping and sought his again, bringing new peace and hope to his heart.

If he could only interpret those muffled sounds she was making! Had she understood what he was saying? Did she know that he loved her? Had she forgiven him? Did she——

In the hall outside there came a soft step. He caught his breath and tried to clutch the girl's fingers reassuringly. Was this the end?

Stealthily the door of their prison was opened and he could just discern the figure of a man creeping silently in. Who was it? Had their fate been decided? Was this their executioner? Nearer and nearer the man came, feeling his way in the darkness.

"It's me, Mr. Rush—Meyer," came a familiar voice.

Rush gasped behind his gag. It seemed incredible that this soft footed, obsequious head waiter had been chosen as their murderer. It was impossible. It could not be true, and yet it must be. Had it not been Meyer who had killed Olga Ordinoff or had had her killed by one of his waiters?

"Quick!" hissed the head waiter, still in the same obsequious tone. "I have a knife here. The others do not know I am here."

As he spoke he took out a small pocket flashlight and began slashing deftly at Rush's bonds. In a delirium of amazement he found first his hands freed, then his feet, and then the obnoxious gag removed.

"Make no noise," warned Meyer as he bent swiftly to render a similar service to Anne. "There is not a moment to lose. Slip quietly down the stairs; perhaps you can make your escape before they discover you are gone. They are nearly ready to come for you. They have been drawing lots to see who should kill you."

Scrambling swiftly to their feet, despite their stiffened muscles, hand in hand Rush and Anne Blair sped swiftly down the stairs toward the front door. Their sudden withdrawal from the threshold of such a terrible death as awaited them had left them both weak and dazed. To Rush, who had been expecting Meyer to appear as their executioner, it seemed incredible that he should have been their savior, yet here they were, hastening to freedom.

As they reached the street door they heard the door open on the floor above and realized that in a second their flight would be discovered. Casting all precaution aside, Rush jerked the door open and dashed with Anne into the street. Even as it slammed behind him he heard a great commotion on the upper floor, angry shouts, and the sound of hurrying feet on the steps behind them.

"Thank God!" he heard a familiar voice cry out, and with relief saw a taxi standing at the curb. Evidently the Le Barons, their fears aroused by Anne's long absence, were on the lookout. As they ran together down the steps Bob Le Baron sprang out to Anne's assistance. At the sight of him, overcome with the knowledge that she at last was safe, the girl gave away and would have dropped in a faint on the sidewalk if Le Baron had not caught her and carried her bodily to the cab. Quickly he thrust her inside and, calling to the driver to start at once, jumped in himself.

Rush started to get in after him, but to his amazement, a blow from Le Baron caught him in the face and sent him reeling, and off went the taxi without him.

For just a second he stood bewildered on the sidewalk, unable to comprehend his friend's conduct. Behind him he heard the men fumbling in the dark, trying to find the doorlatch. In a minute they would be out and upon him. He turned and ran with all his might around the corner.

He breathed a sigh of relief as he came to the passageway beside the saloon. It was hardly likely that the conspirators knew the location of the furnished room he had hired. If he could reach that and lock himself in he would be out of their reach.

Just as they turned the corner he staggered weakly up the stairs. Gasping from sheer exhaustion, he turned the key in the lock and stood listening, but there was no sound of pursuit. Evidently he had thrown them off the track or else they thought he, too, was in the vanishing taxi.

Aching in every limb, exhausted from his long battle, weakened by the sudden reversal of his fortunes, he flung himself heavily on the little bed that only a few hours before had looked so uninviting. He did not even bother to look out the window to try to discover what was going on in the house next door. What did it matter? What did anything matter now? Only one thought sang a song of gratitude in his heart as he fell asleep with the deep sleep of utter exhaustion:

"Anne Blair was safe!"

. . . . . .

Slowly Rush opened his eyes and looked dazedly about him. Where was he? Every muscle of his body was stiff and aching and his head was splitting. Still heavy with sleep, his tired body proclaimed in every nerve its protestations at his having gone to bed fully clothed. The afternoon sun streaming in the one unwashed window of the room he occupied revealed to his puzzled eyes tawdry, unfamiliar surroundings that he could not at first account for. His gaze roved questioningly from a torn flap of cheap flowered paper hanging loose from the ceiling to the one rickety chair and the pine wash stand that comprised the room's furniture.

At last, with a start, he remembered where he was. He was in the hall room he had hired the day before. But how had he come there? As he strove to collect his thoughts geles papers. Heretofore, the prospective diner had yelled his order at Sing Lee, using direct methods. But Sing's business had grown until such crude devices were of no virtue. The girl was coming toward him, and suddenly Johnny felt a cold paralysis seize all his limbs.

She came and stood beside the table. A pretty, frightened girl. Her hair was golden. She was a little girl. Her hands—Johnny saw her hands, for he dared not raise his eyes after that first scared glance—her hands were little, too, and the palms were calloused, as though with hard work. Johnny ordered something he did not like, but it did not in the least matter, for he could not have eaten it anyway. From time to time Sing Lee called to him in friendly conversation, but his confusion was too great to allow him to answer coherently.

Presently, he arose from the table and went home, his mind in a whirl. He did not regard Pup's joyous welcome, which was as the welcome of Ulysses's old hound dog greeting his master's return after long years of eventful roaming in strange lands. Pup was always as extravagantly happy at seeing his master after a fifteen minute absence as he would have been had Johnny been gone for twenty years. Shoestrings rubbed against the young man's legs, purring hugely, but he too was quite unnoticed. Not until Johnny sat upon the little bench before the fireplace did the world cease to whiz round and round and begin to roll decorously at the rate of twenty-four hours a day, the same staid old world it used to be.

That girl's eyes were before his mental vision yet! They were good, honest eyes; some instinct inside his soul told him that. Blue eyes, with heavy brown lashes. But what made them wear that look of a frightened rabbit? And what made her start three or four times and throw a scared glance at the street door? It seemed a matter of habit. Why?

Johnny Purner did not go to sleep until nearly morning. The battered old dollar clock upon the shelf tick-tocked itself to the verge of nervous prostration and still it could not lull the tired young fellow to sleep. For always before him persisted the picture of the girl's scared face, from which looked the appealing eyes of a hunted creature. Just one look he had taken at her face. And then he thought of her hands. Thin little hands, the pathetic palms calloused with hard work. Yes, she was a good girl. His instinct had told him right. No bad girl would work until her hands were rough and calloused.

Johnny leaned over the side of the bed. "Hey, Pup!" he called softly.

Thump, thump, thump! Pup was feeling better!

"Ain't it plumb heart-breakin' to see a timid little girl workin' alone in the world like that, Pup? It ain't so bad when she enjoys her work and if she's strong and happy. But when she's little and lonesome and tired, and scared to death about something, why, this here big world is shorely a miserable place to work in! I—I'm sorry for that little girl, Pup!"

Thump, thump! Pup rapped his sympathy. Shoestrings halfway awoke and began purring from force of habit, then went to sleep again. Once more the silence settled. The clock ticked on, and up on the roof a little night creature scampered about, its tiny toes click-clickety-clicking upon the shingles.

"Hey, Pup!" It was an hour later.

Thump, thump, thump! From the darkened hearth.

"I guess I better keep away from Sing Lee's restaurant, Pup! Seems like I keep gettin' sorrier and sorrier for that little girl—and I can't sleep none at all! Yes, sir, I reckon I better stay away from there!"

Now when you get to feeling sorry for a fellow-creature—especially, if the fellow-creature is a small, pathetic girl with scared eyes and tired little hands—you are well along the way toward falling in love with the same creature. After a very short progression along this way, you are hopelessly in love; but poor Johnny Purner did not know this. Nor did he know the lure that has set at naught the resolutions of many a more sophisticated man.

As a matter of fact, despite his declared determination to stay away from there, Johnny was back at Sing Lee's place the very next evening—early! On this occasion, however, he did not take the table by the wall, close up to the short order counter. Instead, he sat down far back in the remote corner of the room, close by the door. The girl came and stood by the table, waiting for the order. Johnny dared not take even one short look at her face, but contented himself with a surreptitious glance at the thin little hands, resting upon the edge of the table, while the girl waited.

For nearly a week Johnny Purner continued to visit the restaurant every evening. But never did he venture upon a conversation, confining himself to the mumbling of his order—and doing this with the greatest difficulty because of his bashfulness.

On the evening of the seventh day, the girl came as usual, and after taking his order, she hesitated for a moment and seemed about to say something, then hurried away. Johnny stole a glance after her, and it seemed to him that she was as frightened as he was. This upset him unreasonably, and when at the end of the meal she came back with his check he was practically speechless.

It was growing late and all the boarders had finished dinner and gone over to old Laramie Jack's place, all the boarders with the exception of old Uncle Jason Applegate and Daddy Epperson. These two old prospectors sat at the short order counter, eating beans and quarreling over the correct pronunciation of "pyrites"—a pastime of which the average old burro tramp never tires. Beyond the lunch counter, Sing Lee rattled his frying pans and sang to himself in a weird falsetto, which sounded like the squealing of a very young bear cub.

The girl gave Johnny his check, but after the young man had paid his bill, she hesitated again.

"I—I heard Sing Lee say you were John Purner," she said desperately, her faltering voice hardly above a whisper. "That first day you came, you know!"

Johnny Purner began shaking, and his mouth went dry. He nodded. "Y—yes, ma'am!" he muttered hoarsely.

Still the girl hesitated, and the awful silence grew between them. It would have been difficult to say which of these two creatures was the more badly frightened. Irresolutely, the girl took a paper from her pocket and laid it beside Johnny Purner's plate. The moment she had done so she seemed to regret the act and her hand went out as though to reclaim it, but finally allowed it to remain. Johnny's gaze contemplated the paper, his eyes starting from their sockets, his heart missing shots badly.

There it lay! His letter to XYZ! He could not possibly be dreaming. For several seconds he sat staring stupidly at the opening words: "Dear XYZ: I just read your notice in the paper and I thought maybe I would do. . . ." And before his mental vision ran the picture of the fire dying in the lonely little fireplace, the sputtering lamp dying at his elbow, and he heard again the nibbling of the mouse in the attic and the scratching of his rusty pen. The girl was talking: "I'm 'XYZ'!" she said, faintly. "Your letter must have reached Los Angeles the same day I left to come up here in answer to Sing Lee's advertisement. It was forwarded to me and I got it two days ago. But it was only this evening that I got courage to—to tell you.

"My name is Christina Donner. Isn't it strange that I happened to come to the town where you live? I've been worrying about the letter every day. I thought of writing to you and returning your letter, but it seemed honester, some way, to walk up and give it to you and thank you. It wasn't—it wasn't easy, though. I'm not very brave. Not usually!"

There came the long scream of the northbound passenger train, whistling for the station. Christina waited until the clamor of the wheels slowed, and ceased finally, as the train stopped. Then, she went on, her slim fingers twisting nervously together and her voice breaking at intervals.

"I forgot to say that I've been married. Father and mother died when I was a little girl and I was brought up in an orphanage. After I left the orphanage, I married a man named Landers. He wasn't a good man, but I didn't know that. I hadn't seen much of life before leaving the orphanage, so I couldn't judge people, you see. He was cruel, and he made me work to support us both. Still, I was patient, for I did want to be a good wife.

"Mr. Purner, he was a robber! I found it out by accident. He would go out on the streets at night and rob people. With a gun! And once, he killed a man. He knew that I knew and he threatened to kill me if I told. Then, I left him and got a divorce. But I never could find a place to work that Tom Landers didn't find me. And take my money."

The girl caught her breath with a convulsive tightening of her throat. "It—it wasn't fair!" she said tremulously. "All I wanted was to live in peace. It was such a little thing to ask. Oh, I was afraid of him! Afraid! Afraid!

"And that's why I advertised for a husband. I was desperate. I think I was nearly crazy or I wouldn't have done it. As soon as I had sent the advertisement I would have given anything if I could have taken it back."

"I tell you I know!" Old Uncle Jason Applegate's querulous voice rose to a screech of exasperation. "I packed the state mineralogist into Death Valley once, and he called 'em 'py-ri-tes'!"

"Maybe he did—maybe he did!" Old Daddy Epperson remained unconvinced. "Me, I might call you a bird of paradise—but that wouldn't make you one, if you was a jackass!"

Again, a long clamor of wheels as the train pulled out of Chuckawalla and headed away toward the Pass. The noise died suddenly, and once more there was a silence, broken only by the petulant argument of the two childish old prospectors, bickering above their boiled beans. But as far as Christina Donner and Johnny Purner were concerned, the ancient wranglers might have been a thousand miles away.

"That's all!" whispered Christina. Her small, calloused hands now hung limply at her sides. "I thank you for your letter—I know it was the letter of a good man! But I'm all right now. It isn't possible that he will find me, away out here in the desert—"

She stopped suddenly and listened, her eyes upon the street door, a look of nameless terror in them. Through the thunder of the blood pounding in his ears, Johnny Purner heard a raucous voice coming up from the direction of the railroad station, singing a ribald drinking song. He gave it little heed, however, for his eyes were still upon that letter, and he struggled to find speech. He looked up finally—and Christina was gone!

Johnny arose in despair, his heart hot with anguish and an unutterable rebellion against his hideous bashfulness. Mechanically, he gathered up the letter and put it in his pocket, looking about the room for Christina; but the girl was nowhere to be seen. The back door was open and Johnny wondered vaguely if she had gone that way. Then, he turned and sought the blessed outdoors. As he stumbled blindly through the doorway, he collided with Smith Garrett, coming in. Garrett glared at him with bloodshot china-blue eyes, savage and reckless from the reaction following his long spree in Los Angeles. He gave Johnny a vicious elbow and cursed him.

"Get out of my way, you mine-thief!" he bawled. "Want me to tie a can to you, too?" He thrust his wicked face close to Johnny Purner's eyes. "You listen here: You better step high and wide after this, when you meet me. You better walk 'round me like I was a swamp! I don't like you—and I'm liable to hurt you—bad!"

Johnny Purner did not stop to resent this flagrant insult. He was in the midst of chaos and the thing merely added another discord to the vast inharmony of his mental confusion. He went on down the street, walking mechanically. Mechanically, too, he stopped when he reached the railroad crossing, then went over to the station and sat upon the edge of the sandy platform, under the stars.

Here he was quite alone. Inside the station, the clicking of the telegraph key was like the stridulous, sleepy sound of a cricket singing to the night. The station was out on the edge of town; and spreading out toward the east, the vast silence of the desert lay like eternity. Tempered by the moonlight, it was a mysterious silver-gray darkness, rolling away until it blended with a low lying deeper blackness, which Johnny knew for the blackness of far hills.

How peaceful it was! Johnny Purner's lonely heart turned toward it and away from the sordid things of mankind, things which nature had not fashioned him to understand. Men's ways were perplexing and hard to discern, but he could understand this! He lifted his soul to the wide night, feeling the relief of a fevered man who bares his hot brow to a cooling breeze. Now. . . . He could think now!

First of all, he found his slow mind going over that suggestive remark made by Garrett when they met in the doorway. "Want me to tie a can to you—too?" Johnny recalled the accent on "too." He took his pipe from his pocket, filled it, and as he began smoking, he contemplated the remark anew. He wished Pup might be with him. Yes, sir, he could talk to Pup and get things straightened out!

And from this his mind reviewed the cataclysmic conversation with Christina Donner. Bit by bit he rehearsed it, his soul shaken at the mere recollection. How he hated his bashfulness! How he wished he could talk like other men! Why, he might have spoken up—and who knows? Perhaps his loneliness would have come to an end! Perhaps——

And then, quite suddenly, but moving like the stealthy spirit of tragedy, a small figure slipped 'round the corner of the station and came by. It stopped once and listened. Far to the north a throbbing drone was coming down from the Pass—the night passenger train. The little figure turned and came on. It was almost upon the man before it saw him and shrank away with a stifled cry of terror.

"Excuse me, ma'am!" said Johnny Purner, getting to his feet and taking off his hat. "It's nobody but me." Coming across the desert from the north a bright light showed above the low greasewood.

Christina panted with the revulsion of feeling. She carried a heavy bag, and now she let it slip to the ground and stood facing the big man in the vivid moonlight. Johnny noticed the bag and something caught him about the heart.

"You—you wasn't thinkin' of leavin, was you, ma'am?" he asked.

"Yes!" said Christina. She threw a scared look back toward the town. "I didn't know He was here." She always capitalized the pronoun, and Johnny saw that she was quivering with fear.

"He?" said Johnny, perplexed. "Who do you mean, ma'am?"

"Landers! I saw you meet him in the street door as you went out. I was out in the darkness, looking through the back door. He said something to you. You see, I heard his voice coming up the street and I ran out of the back door before he came in."

Johnny Purner was more than ever bewildered. What next was going to happen to upset his mental equilibrium! "Why," he said, that was just Smith Garrett! At least, that's what he calls himself."

"He called himself Landers when he married me!" said Christina, tremulously. "And it does seem as though there's no place in the world where I can go to get away from him! Who would have thought——" She looked up the track. The droning was growing louder and the headlight was holding steadily down across the desert.

For perhaps a whole minute the two stood looking at each other. The girl's hands did not cease to twist nervously together and she shook violently. Johnny Purner stood silent, his tongue locked hopelessly in its affliction. Suddenly, a desert whippoorwill began singing out in the greasewood; its three soft, plaintive notes floating tenderly through the night. It struck the man like a spirit voice begging him to fight clear of the bashfulness which rode him like a nightmare.

Again, the three soft notes, pleading through the darkness. Johnny caught his breath and the sweat sprang to his forehead. Again, he was back in his little cabin, listening to the soothing night voices while he labored over his first and only love letter.

"It goes!"

Johnny's voice had come suddenly, and quite without his own volition, hoarse and unnatural—but straight from his honest heart. "What I wrote to you in my letter, ma'am—it goes!"

Again the silence. Inside the station, the telegraph key clicked incessantly, and the droning had changed to a constant roar that was spreading across the desert and echoing back from the breast of the butte, looming darkly above the town. The girl looked up at the man's face, her own white and drawn in the moonlight.

"Because you're sorry for me?" she whispered; and so white was the moonlight that Johnny Purner could see the tears stealing unnoticed down her cheeks.

"No, ma'am," said Johnny. "Because we been thinkin' a heap about you, Pup and Shoestrings and me! We—we're tired of livin' alone. We're lonesome, ma'am; that's what it is! We're lonesome as hell, ma'am!" The expression came out entirely unheeded by either. "We been wishin' you were there the events of the night before came back with a rush. Vividly he recalled his long, lonely watch and his amazement and delight at the unexpected appearance of Anne at his side. Well he recalled how she had looked, the picture standing forth most clearly being that of her trim, slim, boyish figure set forth by her riding clothes as she had vaulted over the fire escape onto the balcony. Proudly, too, he recalled how bravely and defiantly she had faced their vile captors, proving her valor in the face of imminent death. A great wave of emotion swept over him. How beautiful she was! How wonderful! And how madly he loved her!

Like a hideous nightmare, made real only by his cuts and bruises, recurred the battle on the balcony, when, in fear for their lives, he had fought so desperately against overwhelming odds, only to have it end in their ignominious capture and their imprisonment, bound and gagged, in the dark hall closet. Like a miracle seemed their escape at the very moment when all hope of life and freedom had vanished.

Mechanically he looked at his watch and sat up with a start. It was after 2. He must have slept nearly twelve hours. Exhausted as he still felt, he must get up at once. There was no time to be lost. Now that he knew for certain who the conspirators were and where they held rendezvous, he must take immediate steps to have them rounded up. More than likely they would already have taken alarm and have fled from the house next door. At any rate, he knew three of them by name—Meyer, Dietz, and old Lieber—and he could give the police good descriptions of the others.

But even though he realized the importance of his taking quick action to apprehend them, he still dallied, sitting on the edge of the bed, puzzling over the perplexing problems that this appalling enigma of crime presented. The presence of old Lieber among the conspirators might explain how they had learned of Harrison Hardy's plan of sending funds to Russia, but there were still scores of questions to which he could find no satisfactory answer.

Was Meyer the leader of the band?

Why then had Meyer aided Anne and himself to escape?

How had old Lieber come to be a member of the conspirators?

Were these men bolsheviki, associates of the Russian Treptikoff whom Harrison Hardy seemed to fear?

What part had Caspar Dietz played in the plot?

If Meyer was not the leader, which one was?

There came to his mind the firmness with which Anne had argued that Meyer had neither the brains nor the creative ability necessary to devise a great conspiracy. In their investigations he had learned to have respect for her opinions. He recalled her method of taking all the facts as they developed and deducing from them what type of man it must have been who planned the death of Olga Ordinoff and the theft of the Hardy millions.

"Meyer doesn't fit into the picture," he remembered were the words she had used.

Was Anne right as usual? Could it be that he was mistaken about Meyer? He balanced all the incriminating things he had discovered about the head waiter against his surprising rescue of them from their closet prison, but could come to no decision.

He recalled, too, the strange ceremony that Meyer went through with the others as he and Anne had watched from the balcony, as they stood in line, facing the window, with their uplifted arms crossed and their fists clinched. Anne had cried out that it was "the oath of death." What had she meant by that?

And where was Anne now? Had she gotten home in safety? What was she thinking of him? Had she heard and comprehended the words of love that he had dared to utter as they lay, bound and gagged, facing death together. Did she know that he loved her? Now that his pent up affection for her had burst its bounds, unconventional and ridiculous as his professions must have seemed to her, he felt that for him there could be neither rest nor peace of mind until he had learned how he stood with her. He must go to her at once. He must tell her again that he loved her. He must know!

Unsteadily he got to his feet and crossed the ragged carpet to the little crooked fly specked mirror that hung above the wash stand. As he caught a glimpse of his face in the glass he started back. One puzzle was fully explained to him. He knew now why Bob Le Baron had knocked him away as he had tried to enter the taxi after Anne.

"He took me for one of the gang, and no wonder," he said to himself, returning to an inspection of his looks.

A pretty spectacle he was in his torn and disheveled clothes, with three days' growth of beard on his face, with a great cut on his forehead, the dried blood from which had trickled down over his eye and cheek. The other eye, too, was purpling from one of Dietz's blows, and a grazing knock on the chin had cut the skin there.

He was hardly presentable enough even to slip into the hotel where he had taken a room, much less to go to see Anne. Washing his face as well as a dislocated thumb permitted, he set out to find a barber shop, stopping first to peer out the window at the house adjoining. The blinds had been raised and he could see into the room where he had been the night before, but, as he had anticipated, it was deserted. Undoubtedly the conspirators already had taken flight.

He set out briskly for the street, but at the corner paused for another look at the house, for a glimpse of the door through which he and Anne had so unceremoniously made their escape only a few hours before. As he stood there looking the door opened and there emerged—"Hugh Smith!"

As in his amazement he uttered the name under his breath a great wonder seized him. He debated flight, wondering whether it would be wise for him to let the detective see him there, but his curiosity prevailed, holding him rooted to the spot as he watched to see what Smith would do.

to stay. By the fireplace. When everything's quiet and there's nobody to talk to. Miss Donner, I'm not much, I reckon; but such as I am——, such as I am——"

Johnny stopped, for something had risen in his throat and choked him. A mist dimmed his eyes. Rapidly he blinked, but the mist persisted, and in his blurred vision the white stars ran together.

"But—but you don't—you don't know me——"

"I know enough! You're good, and you're scared, and I want—I want—" Johnny's voice was lost in his emotions. Christina wavered for a moment and then she sank in a pathetic little heap beside her worn traveling bag, sobbing in an abandonment of emotion.

"I know you'll be good to me!" she wept. "I couldn't have gone much farther! I'm not brave—but, oh, I'll be such a good wife! I'll be—I'll be—" Her voice ended in wild weeping.

And then into the heart of bashful Johnny Purner came at last the blessed assurance with which nature has endowed most males. Awkwardly, but with infinite tenderness, he lifted the trembling little figure from the ground and soothed it with unimagined eloquence. Presently, he took the bag in his great hand, and together the two lonely beings moved away up the street. When the droning grew to a crescendo of noise and the passenger train rushed up to the station, no one was there to meet it but the sleepy agent, who came running out with his pencil behind his ear and a sheaf of train orders in his hand.

Johnny and Christina passed Laramie Jack's saloon, walking on the opposite side of the street. Smith Garrett's voice reached them even here, singing his coarse song. Christina shrank closer to Johnny's side and clutched his coat with convulsive thin hands. But now, moved by this strange new assurance, Johnny put one mighty arm about the girl and felt that he never would be bashful again.

"Where are we going, John?" And at the question, Johnny Purner felt the upward surge of the strong when weak hands reach up to them for guidance.

"We're goin' to the hotel," he said. "Aunt Sallie Hedrick'll take care of you, I reckon, until—until—" Johnny's face scorched him, but he beat the last manifestation of his bashfulness down with arrogant hands. "She's a good woman, Aunt Sallie is."

Only for a moment did good Aunt Sallie Hedrick regard, over her steel bowed spectacles, the picture of Johnny Purner with a girl clinging to his arm. Only a moment—and then she was self-possessed and calm. Women have lightning like perception. Moreover, through the thousand generations of contact they have become accustomed to the amazing inconsistencies of men. Aunt Sallie smiled the smile of a motherly little old angel and gathered the shaken girl into her capable arms.

"You take care of her till tomorrow, will you, Aunt Sallie?" begged Johnny humbly. "We—we're going' to be—we—we—"

"I know—I know!" smiled Aunt Sallie; and again to poor Johnny Purner hers was the smile of a little wrinkled angel. "You leave her to me! Drift away home, now, Johnny Purner—go home and wash your face! You big grizzly bear—you've been crying!" And here, Aunt Sallie's own eyes got foolish and misted her spectacles sadly.

Once outside, Johnny paused for a moment and wiped his face with his big red bandanna. Then he looked up at the scattered stars. They seemed somehow different. Brighter than usual. Yes, sir, it was funny he never noticed it before! And the moon, too. By grab, it was soft and cool and pure—like a new piece of silver that never has known the touch of evil hands. And the butte. Always it had seemed to him a grudging, gigantic thing, holding him back from success, just like the rest of the world. Now he looked up at the dark shape of the butte and smiled, for he knew he had a fortune tucked away in that old hill. The butte had been saving it for him—and Christina!

Johnny trudged off down the street. He walked like one who knows exactly what he is going to do. When he entered Laramie Jack's place, he saw Smith Garrett standing at the bar, just as he had expected. Most of Chuckawalla's male population was scattered about the room, for Laramie Jack's was about the only place where a man might loaf and visit with his neighbors. Farther down along the bar from Garrett, Judge Barber held friendly converse with Doc Lofland and Sheriff Pack Roberts. Garrett glared evilly as Johnny Purner walked up to the bar and stood beside him, looking across at old Laramie Jack with a good natured grin.

"Jack," said Johnny. "I got some business with this here gent," indicating Garrett with a sidewise jerk of his head. "And maybe your place will get mussed up a mite while we're settlin' it. You see, he's been havin' fun with me for a long time and I feel playful myself tonight! But if anything's broke I reckon you know I can pay for it pretty soon. I understand Mr. Landers—I mean Mr. Garrett—thinks it's a good mine. And I got fifty tons of good ore on the dump."

Laramie Jack regarded Johnny with amazement, his heavy black mustache drooping helplessly over his big square chin. But he soon rallied.

"Why, sure, Johnny!" he said cordially. "When two gents want to get playful thataway, why, I say go to it! That is, if the sheriff says it's all right. What do you say, Pack?"

Sheriff Roberts unpinned the badge and put it in his pocket. "I've resigned the office of sheriff—temporary!" he said. "For ten or fifteen minutes now I'm just an innocent bystander!"

"Now, that's what I call generous and benevolent!" said old Laramie admiringly. He turned and looked expectantly at Johnny.

"The place is yours, gents," he said "Help yourselves!"

Johnny turned to Garrett. He still smiled with his lips, though there was no smile in the big innocent eyes. Johnny Purner had been touched by the finger of atavism, and out of the long, long past some warrior ancestor, from whom he had inherited his mighty muscles, was whispering in his ear. He reached suddenly and seized Garrett's ear, pulling earnestly. Garrett's hand shot back to his belt, but old Laramie Jack, wise through long years of experience, leaned suddenly across, jerked the heavy gun from its holster, and flung it behind the bar. Then, Johnny Purner struck.

A fight between two big men is not a pleasant thing. Neither is it pleasant to relate. Garrett did the best he knew, but something had taken the heart out of him. The crowd shrewdly guessed this. And after the whipped man fled staggering into the darkness, there were swift comments.

"Did you hear Johnny call him 'Landers'?" asked old Daddy Epperson. "He went white as death when he heard that! You take it from me—Johnny's got something on him!"

Sheriff Roberts hastily pinned on his badge. "Shall I go after him, Johnny?" he asked eagerly. "Know anything about him? I've been waiting for a chance to nail him for a long time. He's a crook."

Johnny shook his big head. His face was battered and one eye was nearly closed, but he still grinned.

"No, he'll not bother us any more, sheriff," he said. "I slipped him a hint that'll keep him out of California for the rest of his life, I reckon! He knows I know! Besides, I ain't got any time for any more business of that kind," he said shyly. "I'm goin' to be married tomorrow."

"Married!" ejaculated old Laramie Jack. "Who to, Johnny?"

"Christina Donner!" said Johnny with another shy grin. "And I got to shave and get my hair cut yet!"

Old Laramie Jack gazed at Johnny Purner. From Johnny Purner his eyes traveled about the room, which now was a mass of wrecked tables and splintered chairs.

"Well, Johnny," he said reverently, "You may be slow in startin', but when you do start you shore travel fast! Come up, boys—this one's on the house! What'll you have, Johnny?"

"Lemonade!" said Johnny Purner.

Laramie Jack caught his breath. But he was game. His hard, black eyes swept the gathering, lined up at the bar, and held it with a sinister glare, daring any man to laugh.

"Here you are, gents!" he said presently. "Lemonade all 'round! All set? Then, here's Happy Days!"

"How!" roared male Chuckawalla, and drank to Johnny Purner. In lemonade!

It was a few days later, maybe two days—maybe three, or four. It might have been a week—what is time when two people love each other and are supremely happy? Johnny sat upon the bench before the fireplace, smoking peacefully. Shaved and with his hair cut, he looked just a big, good natured boy. And indeed, so he was. Cuddled against his side, Christina slept with her head upon his shoulder, his big arm about her like a strong, visible symbol of protection. There was a smile upon the sleeping girl's face and the fear was entirely gone. Relaxed comfortably at their feet, Pup lay before the fire in drowsy content.

Johnny's slow gaze traveled about the homely little room. It was spotlessly clean. But the old lithographs still hung in their accustomed places. The clay streaked clothing still hung upon the walls, intimate, friendly things through long and lonely association. On the mantel, his faithful old cigar box full of tobacco stayed undisturbed. With rare intuition Christina had understood. She had touched none of these things.

Upon the table stood a cake a trifle smaller than a washtub. It was an ornate thing, but not to be despised, for it was the gift of Sing Lee. It has been said before that old Sing was a good fellow.

For a long hour Johnny smoked on while the fire died and Christina slept peacefully upon his shoulder. His mind went back over the last few days and arrived gradually at the inspired evening when he wrote that God blessed letter to XYZ. And, as he thought upon this evening, a realization of his happiness came to him and he turned dizzy with the wonder of it.

The fire popped at longer and longer intervals. Up in the attic the mouse began to nibble, and as upon that night of the letter writing, out in the greasewood the little whippoorwill began to iterate over and over and over its three plaintive, tender love notes.

Carefully—very carefully—Johnny peeped over the golden head and looked down at Pup. Pup was watching upward with bright eyes waiting for the look.

Slyly and knowingly, Johnny Purner winked at Pup. Pup twitched the end of his tail gently, very, very gently, and smiled back. But he dared not make an animated reply. For once more he was afraid of waking Shoestrings, who slept, curled in a little round ball, in the hollow beneath Pup's chin.

china blue eyes. He hitched his chair closer.

"Say, judge!" he half whispered. "Me and you—if me and you went in together on this deal—fifty-fifty——"

With startling suddenness the hobnailed shoes left the desk and hit the floor with a bang, raising a cloud of dust. Judge Barber sprang up, a towering old giant of a man.

"Two more words like that and you'll go out of this camp lookin' like you'd slept in a sausage grinder!" roared the enraged old man. "Who told you I looked like a crook? And as for that great generous heart of yours—don't you go and get the idea that you're talking to a frog brained old porcupine just out of the high weeds for the first time in his life! Me, I listened to con talk before ever they swapped your milk bottle for a pewter platter with Noah's Ark animals ringed round the edge of it! Yes, sir! I was cussin' a string of mules across this desert when you were layin' in your cradle trying to swallow your toe! You get out of my office—and get out quick! For, by gosh, in two more seconds I'm going to take you in my two hands and pull your nose until it's as long as a telephone wire!"

And so that was all of that. But from that time dated Smith Garrett's hate for Johnny Purner. To the man's vicious mind Purner had done him an outrageous wrong. He went out to the little shack which Purner had built at the foot of the butte. It was in the evening and Johnny was frying the flapjacks over the rude little stove which he had set up inside the shack. He greeted Garrett with shy friendliness and asked him to share the supper. Garrett did so.

"Say, Purner," he said as they ate, "seems to me you've got the best of me on this deal. I was drunk when I let you have this claim. Seems a shame a fellow's friend should take advantage of him when he's drunk!"

Johnny Purner's appetite left him entirely. Remorse and a great disappointment filled his soul. "Say!" he stammered, "I—I didn't know! I'm mighty sorry——"

Garrett's heart leaped exultantly. "Why, this is going to be easy, after all!" he thought. "Well, don't feel badly about it!" he said, his voice—cultivated to such tones—dripping friendliness. "Suppose you sign over half to me—and we'll go ahead fifty-fifty! Pardners! That'll be all right."

Poor Johnny's face was pitiful in its distress. "Mr. Garrett," he said, "I—I can't! I wish I'd known sooner. You see, that $500 I paid you was all the money I had; so I had to mortgage the claim for money to develop with. Feller I mortgaged to made me promise not to take in any partners; or if I did, to take him. I always like to play a lone hand, you see, or I'd have taken this feller in. He's a good friend of mine."

Garrett's face was apoplectic, but he forced his voice to drip wheedling friendliness. "Aw, say," he protested, "you can ditch this fellow, can't you?"

Johnny's face expressed amazement as well as distress. "Ditch my friend?" he said. "Why, that wouldn't be honest! I——"

Garrett's temper broke suddenly. He sprang up and cursed Purner across the table. The moment he had done so he saw he had ruined any chance he might have had. So he slammed out of the place and went away.

And from that day dated a series of petty annoyances which followed Johnny Purner mysteriously and with maddening persistence. True, there were times when Johnny strongly suspected Garrett as the author of the persecutions; but so cleverly were they projected that there never was absolute proof. They would have driven most men to a grim hunt through the camp with a shotgun and a sinister purpose; but Johnny Purner continued to go patiently to and from his work, and nothing in his face or manner betrayed the fact that he was being persecuted. But once he confided to the little dog.

"Seems like when a feller's as lonesome as we are, Pup," he sighed, "seems like people would let him alone!"

II.

"Hey, Pup! Listen to this: 'Wanted——'"

But Pup was tremendously occupied in subduing a particularly ferocious tiger which lay upon its back and snarled and squalled and spat, kicking at him with all four of its vicious feet. Pup backed off to a safe distance and filled the cabin with mighty barkings, advertising himself the fiercest little dog in the whole desert. The tiger thought it saw an opportunity to make a successful getaway; but Pup had been anticipating just such a move. He rushed and bore it to the hearth again, growling horrently while he throttled the clawing beast.

"Pup! You ain't listenin' good! You leave poor old Shoestrings alone, now, and listen to me! This here's important!"

Pup reluctantly abandoned his persecution of the bedevilled cat and sat very straight, thumping his bushy tail upon the hearth and looking up with adoring eyes at the face of his master. Shoestrings, left to himself at last, sought shelter beneath the man's chair and smoothed his rumpled fur with the fussy solicitude of a little old maid. From time to time he peeped through the rungs at Pup; but he was still too mad to purr. That would come later, perhaps.

Again Johnny Purner smoothed out the crackling copy of the Los Angeles paper and read:

"Wanted—By a strictly respectable woman, to correspond with a man possessing means to support self and wife. Need not be handsome, but must be good-hearted. Address XYZ, care Southland Marriage Bureau. Object, matrimony."

Johnny Purner put the paper upon his knee and looked down to see what his friend thought about it. "Sounds good, eh, Pup?" he suggested.

"Woof!" agreed Pup enthusiastically, and waited, with the extreme tip of his tail thumping the hearth—tentative thumps which on the slightest provocation would resolve into furious wagging. He whined and begged Johnny Purner to proceed.

Absently Johnny read on down through the "Wanted" column. Presently he smiled. For he had read:

"Wanted—Waitress in respectable restaurant. Address Sing Lee, Chuckawalla, California."

"Ole Sing's gettin' more business than he can handle," soliloquized Johnny. "I'm glad. Sing's good Chinaman." And then he dismissed from his mind Sing Lee and the yellow man's business extremity and came back to his own needs.

"'Needn't be handsome'!" Johnny glanced across at the dilapidated old mirror, cracked, fly-specked, and full of wavy imperfections. "It's a good thing I don't have to be handsome, I reckon! 'Good-hearted'——"

Johnny folded the paper and concentrated mightily. His big head, covered with its mass of heavy, neglected hair, never before had known such mental travail. But at the end of the struggle he emerged helpless, with a perplexed frown upon his wide, innocent forehead.

"Am I good-hearted, I wonder!" he said. "Hey, Pup! Am I good-hearted?"

Pup had been regarding Johnny anxiously; for never within his recollection had he seen his master so whelmed in thought. In the exuberance of his relief at hearing Johnny Purner speaking again the little dog did a whirling dervish scamper on the hearth, striving madly to overtake his tail, and failing only by reason of the fact that the tail was a bare half inch too short. "Woof!" he yelped again and started upon a wild chase about the room; a mad, Berserker ebullition which upset chairs and scared poor Shoestrings up to the clock shelf, where he crouched and lifted his wriggling upper lip in a nervous show of defiance, growling halfheartedly. He knew that Pup was merely playing; still, it did get on his nerves! Some day, he told himself, he certainly would bust loose and scratch Pup plenty! He was not exactly terrified; nevertheless he swelled out his tail and spat to impress Pup, and then he began dry-cleaning his coat once more.

Johnny Purner had gone back to his paper, fascinated.

"'Address XYZ, care Southland Marriage Bureau. Object, matrimony.' That means gettin' married, Pup!" Johnny blushed clear up to the roots of his mane.

For Johnny Purner was bashful! Next to a hopelessly homely woman, the most pitiful thing on earth is a hopelessly bashful man. Love is a field where the strong man gathers his own. Unless a man possesses that certain assurance with which nature has endowed most males he is sure to see the flower of his choice plucked before his halting hand can nerve itself to reach forth. Many a man has lived out his entire life an unheeded hermit in that forest of solitudes where hide the warm, wistful hearts of all bashful men.

But Johnny was no fool. He had a good mind, though perhaps a slow one. It turned this awesome matter over and over, and Johnny's blushes deepened as he thought.

Pup had quieted now and was resting, lying in front of the fireplace with his chin on his paws and his bright eyes rolling up toward the face of his god.

And then a long, long silence. Johnny smoked on dreamily for nearly an hour, while the fire died low in the fireplace and Shoestrings came down from the clock shelf and, snuggled up in a little round ball, cuddled in the hollow beneath Pup's chin. Outside in the desert moonlight a Mexican whippoorwill sang softly and a mouse nibbled in the attic. The dying fire ceased to flicker upon the rude walls, hung with clay streaked garments and shiny lithographs of impossible hunting scenes. Pup was snoring softly in Shoestrings' ear.

"I'll do it!"

Simultaneously Johnny Purner smacked the folded newspaper into his big open hand and frightened the peaceful silence in fits. Pup bolted frantically to the door, half asleep, with the hair bristling along his spine and his mouth emitting fearsome yelps—for Pup thought it was burglars. Up on the clock shelf again, poor Shoestrings growled and warned whatever it was to keep away from him, or get scratched.

And then, quite unmindful of the peace he had so rudely disturbed, Johnny Purner got out his unfamiliar writing materials and wrote:

"Dear XYZ: I just read your notice in the paper and I thought maybe I would do. I'm pretty sure I can support self and wife. I don't know whether I'm good-hearted or not; but Pup and Shoestrings think so, and hoping you are the same I am yours truly John Purner."

Now this sounds very easy and simple, but truly it was not easy and simple for Johnny Purner. Through it all he had to struggle with his bashfulness and force the words upon the paper. To some gifted people literary composition is like breathing. Johnny Purner was not one of these. Until nearly midnight he toiled, littering the floor with rejected trial sheets. The fire was quite dead and the smoky lamp spitting a malodorous accompaniment to the scratching of his rusty old pen when Johnny at last leaned back and, with a long sigh, decided to let it go at that.

"Correspondence is a tough proposition, ain't it, Pup?" he muttered drowsily.

Thump, thump, thump!

But Pup was too sleepy to talk. Moreover, he was afraid of waking Shoestrings, who once more slept, curled in a little round ball in the hollow beneath Pup's chin.

III.

It was the day following the writing of that momentous letter to "XYZ," and Johnny Purner was preparing his midday meal. For it was Sunday; and Johnny always laid off on Sunday and washed his face with soap.

Johnny was thinking about his letter; and the more he thought about it the worse scared he became. Viewed in the light of day, with the heat of impulse and literary enthusiasm all gone, the writing of that letter seemed to him somewhat of a doubtful adventure. Maybe it was a dangerous thing to do—writing to a woman you didn't know! Somebody you didn't even know her name, by grab! Yes, sir! Signing your own name, too! Johnny rolled his head solemnly and gazed with thoughtful abstraction at the frying potatoes.

In the midst of Johnny's absorption Pup came screaming home with an old tomato can bouncing and banging behind him. He dashed through the open door and into Johnny's arms, sobbing and whining in a frenzy of pain and terror. Johnny Purner removed the barbarous thing. It had been attached to the little dog's tail by a piece of twisted wire—a most fiendish device.

Johnny suddenly felt no desire for food. He went across the desert to town and got some liniment for Pup. On his way home he had to pass the railroad station. Smith Garrett stood upon the platform, evidently waiting for the train. He had been drinking.

"Hello, Purner!" he called, with assumed heartiness. "Been uptown?"

"Yes," answered Johnny phlegmatically. "I been to Doc Lofland's drug store to get some liniment. Somebody wired a tin can to Pup's tail. Hurt pore Pup pretty bad."

"You don't say!" Garrett passed his hand across his lips to hide a furtive grin. "Well, Purner," he said, "this is a hard country on dogs—and nuts!" And he sniggered.

But if Johnny understood the double significance of the observation he made no sign. The train rolled in at that moment and Garrett went aboard. As the train started and the smoker glided past the platform, Garrett leaned from the window for a parting pleasantry.

"Going to Los Angeles for a week or so!" he yelled. "Going to bust loose. Good-bye Purner, old mine-thief! Don't let the squirrels bite you!"

Johnny Purner sat very still before the fireplace that evening and he smoked far more tobacco than usual. From time to time Pup moaned in his sleep and moved restlessly with the pain of his hot, swollen tail.

But Johnny made no bitter comment, even when sympathizing with Pup over his affliction. And this was characteristic of the young man. He was not one to give speech to his grievances. Possibly within himself he voiced hot indignation, but outwardly he was calm, inscrutable of expression, and meager of speech. Not even Pup could tell if Johnny Purner boiled with wrath or was merely too stupid to feel the emotions natural to the ordinary man.

It was near midnight when Johnny knocked the ashes from the sooty old cob and put the pipe carefully away in the cigar box on the end of the mantel above the fireplace.

"I reckon maybe you better stick close to me after this, Pup," he remarked. "Yes, sir, I allow it's safer for little dogs. Hey, Pup?"

Pup made a feeble effort to wag his tail, but the exercise hurt too badly. He smiled with his eyes and ears, however, and told Johnny Purner it was all right.

Johnny Purner came down off the butte early next evening, for he had left Pup locked in the cabin that day and he was anxious to see how his patient was getting along. He found Pup much improved. Up on the grubshelf, Shoestrings sat unemotionally beside the can of condensed milk, waiting with the sublime patience of his kind.

Johnny put his bag of drills upon the floor and set about the business of feeding his family. This done, he moved over to the queer little stove; but, as he reached for a match to light the fire he paused and considered.

"I reckon I'll go over to town and get my supper at Sing Lee's restaurant," he said. "It's shorely a hardship on a hard workin' man to have to get his own supper after a long day in the shaft. Yes, sir, I'll go over to town and eat at Sing Lee's, for if I wait until I've fried the spuds and bacon, why, I'll drop right down here and die miserable of slow starvation! Now, you be a gentleman and share your supper with Shoestrings, Pup!"

Pup smiled cheerfully. He might haze Shoestrings out of the exuberance of overflowing spirits, but he was a most unselfish little dog. He looked wistfully after Johnny Purner, however, and his eyes begged to be allowed to go along. He would miss his dinner any time in order to accompany his master. But Johnny shook his head.

"I'll be right back, Pup," he said. "You better stick 'round the house and take care of Shoestrings. Besides, if you went out you might catch cold in your tail—and then, maybe Doc Lofland 'd have to cut it off!"

None of Sing Lee's customers had yet arrived when Johnny Purner entered the Chinaman's restaurant and sat down at a table over by the wall. Up at the range, behind the short order counter, Sing Lee waved a frying pan and grinned.

"Hello, Johnny Punna'!" he called.

Johnny grinned back, for Sing Lee was a good fellow. "Hello!" he replied.

"Where Pup?" Sing wanted to know. "Got 'em plenty fine bone foh Pup tonight."

"Pup, he's hurt," answered Johnny soberly. "Somebody tied a can to his tail and hurt him awful."

"No good!" Sing stood still, turning over the black news, his eyes deep and black and inscrutable. "Me savey who," he said, with terrible solemnity. "Me savey, you bet yo' life!" Another period of awful concentration. "No good!" he said, in the tone of one pronouncing doom.

But in that moment Johnny Purner forgot Sing Lee, Pup, and Pup's tribulations, his supper, and all the world besides. For, suddenly, he saw that Sing Lee had a new waitress! It flashed through his mind that Sing had been advertising in the Los An-

The TEENIE WEENIES

TILLIE TITTER GIVES A HOUSE WARMING.

By WM. DONAHEY.

IT was a warm, pleasant Saturday afternoon and two boys worked at a bench under a cherry tree. Many tools were scattered about and the boys worked as though they were enjoying themselves.

"She's goin' to be a dandy," said one of the boys as he squinted along a board he had been planing.

"You bet it is!" answered the other boy. "It's going to be a mighty nice home for some lucky bird."

The boys were building a bird house and it was plain to see that they were trying their best to make a very handsome one. Up in the tree sat a bird and that bird watched the work with a great deal of interest.

"Goodness me!" muttered the bird, turning her head so she could get a better view of the work. "I wish I had a house like that."

For a long time she sat watching the work; in fact she did not leave until the boys had finished the house, given it a coat of paint and carried it into a shed near by.

As the boys disappeared, she spread her wings and flew straight for the rose bush where the Teenie Weenies lived.

"Well, hello, Tillie," called the Cook, who was standing on the tiny porch as the bird landed in front of the shoe house. "You look excited."

"I am excited," cried Tillie Titter. "I have just been watching a couple of boys build a bird house and I'd give my tail feathers to own it."

"If I was a bird I'd certainly want a house to live in," said the Old Soldier. "I'd hate to sit on a nest with no roof over my head and have the rain come pouring down my neck.

"It's perfectly awful," cried Tillie. "And I'll tell you it's a mighty lucky and 'appy bird who finds a 'ouse to live in."

"Why don't you watch when those boys put the house up into a tree so you can get it?" suggested the Policeman.

"I'll be right on the premises," smiled Tillie. "And when that 'ouse is nailed up in a tree, I'm goin' to be in it before the bloomin' nails are cool."

It was nearly a week before the Teenie Weenies saw Tillie and when she called on the little folks they asked immediately about the bird house.

"It's mine! It's mine!" cried the delighted bird. "I was right on the job when those boys nailed it up and I took possession before they had climbed out of the tree. I came over to tell you that I'm giving a 'ouse warmin' and I want you all to see 'ow pretty it is."

That afternoon the Teenie Weenies made their way to the tree in which the bird house stood and there they found the bird waiting for them.

"Elevator service goes with this house," cried Tillie hopping onto the ground before her little guests. "This is an up to date 'ouse."

The bird carried most of the Teenie Weenies up to her house on her soft back, but several of the little men preferred to climb and they crawled up the big tree as easily as bugs.

The bird house was a beautiful work of art and the Teenie Weenies examined it with great interest.

"Those boys certainly did a very good job," said the General after he had looked all over the place. "You ought to be a very happy bird."

"Happy!" shouted Tillie. "Why, I'm so happy I do nothing but admire my 'ouse and sing at the top of my voice all day long."

OBJECT MATRIMONY

BY Lowell Otus Reese

Concerning the Affair of Sing Lee's Waitress and That God Blessed Letter to XYZ

"LOOKS good to us; hey, Pup?"

Big Johnny Purner left the eternal wilderness of sage and greasewood and started the patient burro up the one sandy street of Chuckawalla. The town, built of rude, unplaned boards, was a typical desert affair, but by contrast with the raw desert it was a collection of palaces. "Looks good to us, after a whole month on the desert; hey, Pup?"

Pup cocked his ears and looked up sidewise, trotting along beside his master. Desert or town, it was all the same to Pup—so long as he was with Johnny Purner. He wagged his tail at the observation, however, and agreed with Johnny that it looked good.

Few men appeared upon the street, for the male population of Chuckawalla was mainly up on the butte, working hard. On the covered porch of the Happy Jack saloon, however, Smith Garrett lounged, smoking a cigaret. He was a big man, too—as big as Johnny Purner; but he was carefully dressed, his face smoothly shaved and his hands white and well kept. Patently he was unused to manual labor. Out of his big smooth face his china blue eyes looked innocently upon the world.

Now the casual stranger never would know that this innocent look was not indigenous to the man's face, but was a thing carefully cultivated; one of Garrett's properties, used to beguile the unwary. For, though it was not well known in the little desert mining town of Chuckawalla, Smith Garrett was a confidence man.

Johnny Purner trudged slowly up to the hitching rack in front of the Happy Jack. The burro stopped and went to sleep. Johnny looked up, wiping his face with a big red bandana handkerchief. His countenance was covered with a month's stubble; moreover, water had been scarce along the young man's line of travel; his hair was long and heavy under the wide black hat affected by the valley ranchmen. "Hello!" he said, and smiled a friendly smile.

"Hello!" said Garrett. He appraised the stranger swiftly. It was his business to appraise men swiftly. "Come in and have a drink!"

"Thanks!" said Johnny gratefully. "I been traveling round over the desert for a whole month, drinking alkali water, and a glass of lemonade sure would go fine!"

"Prospector?" Garrett smiled in turn. The casual stranger would have seen frank friendliness in the smile. But the closer observer would have detected lurking behind it the vulpine soul, evil, calculating, the soul of a beast of prey.

"No, not a reg'lar prospector. I've only been on the desert a month. I been ranchin' most of my life, down in the Santa Clara valley. But Pup and me we got tired of it and sold out and came into the desert to see if we could get rich."

Garrett took the stranger inside the saloon. Old Laramie Jack mopped the bar as the two approached. His gaze was inscrutable as it flashed upon the stranger, diffidently approaching the bar; but when it changed to Smith Garrett, the close observer once more would have seen a change. For instinctively old Laramie Jack did not like Garrett.

"A month out there in the sagebrush," Johnny Purner said, when later he and his new friend sat resting at one of the card tables. "After a month of that I found that I wasn't goin' to get rich if I depended on finding gold myself. I don't know what gold ore looks like. So I thought I'd come to Chuckawalla and try to get a claim that had ore on it—already discovered. Know anybody that's got a good claim to sell?"

Garrett's china blue eyes viewed the slow, credulous ranchman and the man knew at a glance that it was not a question of how to acquire this honest countryman's money; it was merely a question of how to acquire it with the minimum of exertion.

"I know you'll be good to me!" she wept. "I'm not brave—but, oh, I'll be such a good wife!"

"I have a claim," he said. "I wouldn't sell it, but I got in early and took more land than I can possibly handle."

It was indeed easy to get poor Johnny Purner's money. The claim which Garrett unloaded upon his victim was one which to the experienced eye seemed valuable only as a pasture for horned toads and striped lizards. But Purner did not know. Smith Garrett extolled the wonderful possibilities of this unpromising piece of ground until honest, simple Johnny Purner could almost see solid gold bowlders rolling down its slopes. In the end he paid Garrett $500 for the property, relying entirely upon Garrett's word.

To the confidence man this was a great joke. That any man should pay out real money on the strength of any other man's word! He boasted of it all over Chuckawalla, laughing until his china blue eyes filled with tears.

But his appreciation of the jest dwindled remarkably when three months later Johnny Purner, laboring unscientifically but patiently and with the great and abiding hope of the tenderfoot, broke through a ten foot iron cap and exposed the ledge which started the historic rush for the mining district of Chuckawalla. To the old timers it did not seem possible. But the thing had happened. Purner had had the proverbial tenderfoot's luck.

And now the whole camp heard Garrett's wail of outraged innocence. "A fool for luck!" he complained bitterly over the bar at Laramie Jack's place. "Ain't I right? Here I own this claim for a whole year—and nothing happens! Then along comes this poor nut Purner—and now the claim's worth $20,000 if it's worth a plugged jitney!"

"You didn't work it none, did you?" hinted old Laramie Jack delicately. "Maybe if you'd worked it——"

"I was too busy!" said Garrett. "Anyway, it ain't right. I leave it to you, $500 for a claim like that is robbery! I leave it to anybody."

"I reckon a sale's a sale," pronounced old Uncle Jason Applegate. "And this Purner feller has been hangin' on, workin' like a slave."

Plainly there was no sympathy here. Garrett hurried over to Judge Barber's office. He found the aged jurist with his mighty frame slumped down in a chair, hobnailed feet upon his desk. He was smoking a blackened cob pipe, and as Smith Garrett entered the deep set old eyes narrowed, watching through the smoke.

"I've been done, judge!" began Garrett.

"You poor innocent child!" said Judge Barber; but he did not remove his hobnailed boots from the desk, nor did he even shift the cob pipe, but continued to watch Garrett with sardonic old eyes.

"This Purner chap," went on Garrett. "He's robbed me!"

"Let's hang him!" grinned Judge Barber through the smoke. The visitor went on to relate the whole matter. But in the end Judge Barber still remained unmoved.

"Bona fide sale, wasn't it?" he asked, half shutting his eyes, still watching through the smoke.

"Well, yes; but say, judge, that claim is worth fifteen or twenty thousand dollars, just as she lays. A year's development and way it looks now it will be worth half a million. I practically gave it to Purner—because I was sorry for him! Now it ain't right for a man to lose a property like that just because he let it go in a moment of generosity! Why, judge——"

"Still, you sold it!" said Judge Barber serenely. "Better swallow your medicine and swear you like it. That's the way we do out here on the desert."

"But can't I get it back some way?"

"Nope! Not without risking a hanging. Garrett, this camp is run by honest men!"

"Well, ain't I an honest man, judge?"

"Yes," grinned Judge Barber, "if I'm a cross eyed angel with a cork leg!"

Still the man clung desperately to the idea that the old jurist could help him get the claim away from Purner. "But what if I was drunk when I made the deal; wouldn't that help?"

"Nope!"

"Then what would you advise me to do, judge?"

"Switch to a different brand of booze!" chuckled Judge Barber.

Garrett was silent for some moments. And once more the close observer would have detected in the man's face the working of the unscrupulous brain behind the innocent

DO YOU feel embarrassed in meeting people because your skin is marred by disfiguring little blackheads?

Blackheads are a confession that you are using the wrong method of cleansing for your type of skin.

Try using, every night, this special treatment, and see how easily you can keep your skin free from this trouble:

Apply hot cloths to the face until the skin is reddened. Then with a rough washcloth work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Furs for Immediate Wear

Fish Hats Illustrated

IN suggesting chokers and capes we echo style dictates which predominate for immediate use. The choker occupies a unique place, being worn with suits and for Tea Dansants under the cape, which is thrown aside temporarily.

Capes to the waist line or longer are much wanted for machine and street wear when the dress is used. Capes were never as beautiful as this season, and combine new distinctive features, such as large collars, and fancy worked border effects. All peltries are represented in both chokers and capes.

The House of Bishop is supremely well prepared to meet the most critical demands of smartly dressed women. Fur prices, in comparison to other wearing apparel, are most reasonable, although August will see an advance. We advise immediate purchases, enabling you to make a saving besides enjoying your furs during the spring months.

An Ice Machine for Every Home

Here is a practical ice-making machine for home refrigerators. It is used in your own ice box. It is small, simple and compact. It is convenient and economical.

It insures you dry, cold, sanitary refrigeration, maintained always at an even temperature by automatic control.

It very quickly pays for itself by saving the price of ice and by keeping expensive food from spoiling.

A Miniature Cold Storage Plant

The Kelvinator turns your refrigerator into a miniature cold-storage plant as efficient, in its miniature proportion, as the big commercial plants where food stays fresh for months.

It gives you a degree of cold impossible to secure with ice. This cold does not fluctuate, as in ice-cooled refrigerators. Neither is it damp, which produces mold and encourages staleness and unpleasant odors.

Thus expensive meats, eggs, dainty butter, keep fresh and sweet until you are ready to use them.

You can order food in advance and store it safely, without fear of loss by spoiling.

Freezes Ice for the Table

The Kelvinator also makes ice for whatever purpose you need it.

It freezes small cubes for table use. It chills mousses, frappes and sherbets.

This home-made ice is safe and sanitary —the only ice which is fit to use in drinking water.

It removes the danger of pollution and infection always present when the iceman's ice is used.

Commercial Ice Cannot Be Sanitary

It is not the fault of the iceman that the ice he delivers to your home cannot be sanitary.

He cannot insure the purity of ice cut from rivers and streams.

Even if it is artificially frozen from distilled water it must be delivered in open wagons, through dusty streets, and handled repeatedly.

By the time this ice, natural or artificial, reaches your icebox it is unsafe for use in any connection with food.

We Can't Fill All Orders—If Interested Write Today

Because Kelvinators are selling all over the United States faster than they can be made, the orders we can fill are limited. The number of Kelvinators allotted to us each month can't keep up with the demand.

Thus, if you are interested, if you want a Kelvinator installed by the time hot weather arrives, mail the coupon today for the Kelvinator Booklet. It explains all details necessary for your information. There is no obligation whatever involved. Send coupon today.

"A couple of nights ago," writes Berta Ruck, the English novelist, to a member of The Tribune staff, "I went to the dramatization of 'The Young Visiters' at our Court theater. I imagined it would be no earthly good, but I was agreeably surprised. It was quite a priceless achievement. Everything was arranged to give scenes and the characters precisely from the overheightened and vivid imagination of the child. The scenery was exactly as if drawn by a child and colored out of its paint box. The dresses were those of about thirty years ago. The orchestral selections began with five-finger exercises and all sorts of artless little tunes that you get in a child's instruction book. Mr. Salteena was quite a masterpiece, so frustrated and tragic at every turn. Ethel was very pretty and absolutely nineteenth century—simpering and blushing and never looking anybody in the face, which, you know, was the then method; so different from now! At Ethel's wedding one of the guests sang 'Ta Ra Ra Boom De Ay,' and every one joined in. * * * I expect you will have the play over with you, but I think it will have to be altered, as it is so very typically Victorian it would hardly get across."

A WAR MEMORIAL for Camp Wadsworth, S. C., to be erected in honor of the men who received their training there before they went to fight overseas. The design is by Karl Illava, a young sculptor who enlisted and served throughout the war in the 27th division, and symbolizes the comradeship of the north and south in the army.

MONACO'S FUTURE RULER—The Duchess of Valentois and her newly acquired husband, Count Pierre de Polignac of France. The duchess will become head of the principality upon the death of her grandfather, Prince Albert, who has accorded her the rights of succession by special act.

ROBERT HARRON is the boy who is usually to be found in pictures where the Gish girls are playing. He's quite nice to look at when he doesn't wear his mustache and quite awful to behold when he does.

Mr. Harron was born in New York in 1894. He left school at 14 to become an errand boy in the Biograph Studios. Here the eagle eye of Mr. D. W. Griffith spied him, and it was Mr. Griffith who pried him from the ranks of the unsuccessful and made a star of him. Most of the time he has worked for Griffith. He deserted him long enough, however, to play in the Goldwyn production, "Sunshine Alley." Now, however, he's back with his former master.

Brown hair and brown eyes has Bobby Harron and a nice smile—at least it's a nice smile when he doesn't wear his mustache. Mae Tinee.

CORINNE GRIFFITH is with Vitagraph. Sometimes you think how much she looks like Elsie Ferguson. Again you wonder whatever made you have such an idea.

Texarkana, Texas, registers as the birthplace of Miss Griffith, who was a professional dancer before beginning her screen career. This started with Vitagraph in a picture called "The Last Man." She is still working busily and quite successfully for Vitagraph.

This young woman is 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 120 pounds, has light hair, blue eyes and a fair complexion—that is, it's fair when she doesn't do too much swimming and riding. These pursuits, be it said, are her chief delights in life. Mae Tinee.

HENRY B. WALTHALL, whom you last saw in "The Long Arm of Manniśter," is no stranger to these pages. The principal reason he is offered this morning for your observation is that he looks as though he had had a haircut—and that, judging from appearances, is a great event in the life of Mr. Walthall. Him loves his hair and him doesn't like to have him cut.

This actor was and is considered by some as the greatest actor on the screen. Personally, I think he can be, also that he often isn't. (You're bright if you get me.) Just to refresh your memory, he was born in Shelby county, Alabama, in 1878. Played in stock and started his screen career under Griffith. He is now with the Pioneer Film company, heading his own company. Mae Tinee.

VIVIAN RICH, my dears, was born at sea. (That's rather an original way of starting life, isn't it?) She was educated in Boston and started her stage career under the direction of Gus Edwards, who introduced her into the intricacies of vaudeville.

She started work for the screen under the banner of the American company, and while working for them and for Selig became popular with the fans. She is now with Fox and stars in "Would You Forgive?"

If you've forgotten the way she looks, be informed that she is 5 feet 4½ inches tall, weighs 115 pounds, has brown hair and dark brown eyes. Mae Tinee.

PREMIER is a fine, old, aristocratic family name. For more than a quarter of a century Premier motor cars have been among the best. Now comes a Premier —the finest of a fine line—a car so exclusive and so distinctive that, even among the finest cars you know, there is none with which it can be fairly compared.

For in no other car can you find an aluminum engine.

And the gears of no other car are shifted electrically.

The new Grecian body edge can be used by no other motor car.

All of which are mere superficial comforts and satisfactions.

When you get at the wheel of this car and drive it for one day—no one can ever weaken your fanatical devotion to it. You do not find the same POWER, the same smoothness, the same velvety road indifference in any other car —not even in the finest and most extravagant European Importations.

Stateliness—poise—charm—these should be the attributes of every large woman. Quite possible of attainment, too, when her clothes are well chosen.

To make sure that you get just the right gown, the one that brings out your best points, insist on trying on several. To discard a dress simply because you do not like its appearance on the rack is often to pass over the very one that would be most becoming when worn.

Have you ever been caught in such a predicament? Does the unexpected occasion always find your hands lovely?

It is the simplest thing always to be sure of your nails! Just a matter of giving them the same regular attention that you do your hands and teeth.

"THAT WELL-DRESSED LOOK"

The Dorset

This little suit breathes smartness in every line. The straight back is just as "easy to look at" as the Tuxedo front! The skirt has the same style pockets as the coat and a centre plait in back for walking comfort. In Silvertone Sportspun the colors are Oxford, Navy, Copen, Beaver and Reindeer; in Plain Sportspun they are Marine, Jade, Beaver and Tan.

The Cavendish

Slim and boyish, this little suit shows an inverted box plait in the back centre from collar to coat hem. Two shorter box plaits are also there, and the belt runs through these plaits. The skirt has the inverted plait in back for walking width. In Plain Sportspun the colors are Marine, Jade, Beaver and Tan, while in Sportspun Tweed they are Tan, Olive, Brown and Blue.

Wooltex Tailor-mades

The Exeter

In Silvertone Sportspun comes this little suit. The stitching on the coat is well placed, the pockets have a tonneau disposition, and the back effects a wide box plait. The skirt is slim of hip but good walking width. Oxford, Navy, Copen, Beaver and Reindeer are the colors.

The Wooltex signature embroidered on white satin and fastened in the collar of your tailor-made means "That Well-Dressed Look" for the life of the coat or suit.

Wooltex Tailor-made Sportspun Suits are priced at $39.50, $45, $55, up to $85.

The Clifton

In Silvertone Sportspun the colors are Oxford, Navy, Copen, Beaver and Reindeer, while in Plain Sportspun they are Marine, Jade, Beaver and Tan. Cord stitching is a distinguishing note—the pockets, too, are unusual. Altogether, it's a wide-a-wake looking little tailor-made!

POOR material and bad tailoring are never more conspicuous than in a sports suit. An inferior piece of cloth may look attractive when you buy it, but it doesn't take long for a stretchy piece of material to sag over the shoulder line, to bulge in back from a sitting posture, and, yes, even to display a weakness for knee pockets!

Wooltex Sportspun is a real sports fabric—light enough for summer wear, but tightly, firmly woven. And then, of course, Wooltex tailoring makes all the difference in the world.

Wooltex Sportspun suits are cut for an active existence! That swagger "careless" air is the result of a careful study and careful tailoring.

When you're looking for your Wooltex Sportspun, ask the salesperson for "The Tailored Woman"—it's a magazine of present and coming fashions. If you prefer, write us, and we will mail it to you.

For the shop nearest your home showing Wooltex Tailor-mades, write us. They are being shown simultaneously by "The Tailored Woman," the exclusive shop on Fifth Avenue at Fiftieth Street, New York, and by

A revel in Carthage

Flaubert, the great French novelist, gives an appalling description of a feast in the old days of Carthage—
"Then the tables were covered with meat, antelopes with their horns, peacocks with their plumes, sheep boiled whole in sweet wine, haunches of she camel and of buffalo, hedgehogs with garum, fried grasshoppers, and preserved dormice. Everything was running over with pickles, truffles, and asafoetida. Pyramids of fruit fell in ruins over portions of honeycomb."—Salambo, Gustave Flaubert.

THE FINE ART OF FEASTING

IN years gone by, when civilization was cruder, mere quantity, mere extravagance were often considered impressive.

Up until the time of our grandfathers or our fathers, one did not dine, one feasted—tables groaned under the weight of food.

Today, ten courses of the richest food are not proof that a hostess is a woman of the world. The proof demanded now is more subtle, far more difficult—exquisite quality in every detail.

Many hostesses attain this perfection in every detail except one—the coffee. This is the ultimate test—the test on which the average hostess fails.

Think over the most distinguished hostesses in your set. Remember what perfect coffee they serve. Ask some of them which coffee it is. See if the reply is not "Yuban."

By the greatest coffee merchant in the world, this coffee was selected from all others to be served to his intimate friends.

Wherever taste is exceptionally exacting, there you will find that Yuban is served. Its fragrance, its fine, mellow aroma, its rich flavor, are giving many a clever hostess distinction.

As the first New York colonists feasted

Gaunt, half-starved Ichabod Crane gazed enraptured at the feast in Van Tassel's mansion—"There was the doughty doughnut, the tenderer oly-koek, and the crisp and crumbling cruller; sweet cakes and short cakes, ginger cakes and honey cakes, and the whole family of cakes. And then there were apple pies, and peach pies, and pumpkin pies; besides slices of ham and smoked beef; and, moreover, delectable dishes of preserved plums, and peaches, and pears, and quinces; not to mention broiled shad and roasted chickens; together with bowls of milk and cream, all mingled higgledy-piggledy." — Washington Irving's Sketch Book.

As Americans dine

The subtle discrimination that marks an American dinner is shown in each detail. Only the choicest, far-sought fruits, the rarest fish, game, the most delicate ices. And the most important of all is the coffee. The hostess of today is discriminating almost to an extreme in the coffee she serves.

"Now Will They Do, Mother?"

MODERN MOTHERS insist that their children form right habits of caring for their nails, just as they train them to brush their teeth and their hair. From a health standpoint, nothing is more important, for carelessly kept nails invite infection.

LET small son and daughter have their own little manicure sets and keeping their nails healthily clean will be as much fun as a game. Most important, of course, is teaching them that the pretty little halfmoons at the base of their nails must be brought out by training, not by harsh, unnatural methods. With harmless, antiseptic Lustrite Cuticle Ice (it couldn't hurt them even if they ate it) they can have a firm, even rim of cuticle about each nail, with not a single broken place where a germ can lurk. Lustrite manicure preparations are on sale at all drug and department stores at 35c each. Or you can buy them in convenient sets, the Traveling Set for 50c and the Boudoir Set for $1.50.

Or mail us the coupon with ten cents, and we will send you a complete kit containing trial sizes of LUSTRITE CUTICLE ICE, LUSTRITE NAIL WHITENER, LUSTRITE SALVE ENAMEL and LUSTRITE NAIL CAKE, and a copy of our booklet "The Better Way to Manicure."

"RESTWEL"

Pillows and Mattresses

Feathers must be washed to be pure

THE feathers in the pillows you and your babies sleep on must be pure. If not—you court danger; contamination lurks in unclean pillows—the ticking tells nothing of the feathers inside.

The only pillows filled with washed feathers are Restwels

Every feather in every Restwel is absolutely new and pure—as sterile as a surgeon's knife. Only new feathers go into Restwels—and they're all washed in torrents of pure water. Then they're electrocuted, then steamed and steamed again in the exclusive Restwel tenfold purifying process. You find Restwel wherever good bedding is sold. Ask your dealer.

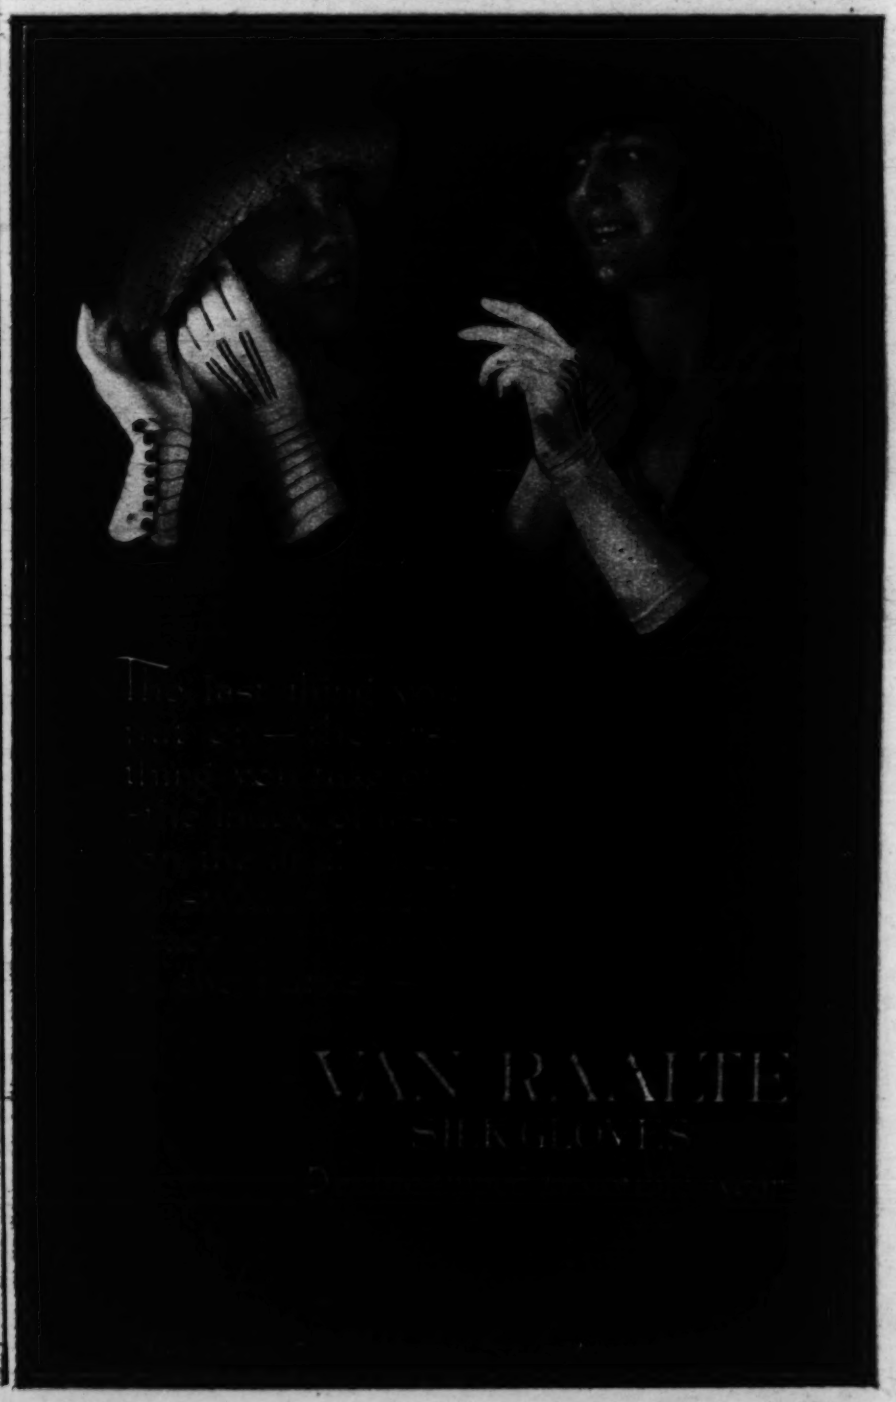
For the rest of your life



Arms require a roomy arm size—had never been able to get it

"My shoulders are rather plump and every knit underwear suit I bought I would have to cut a bit out of the arm. That suit you sent me is the first one I ever had with a sufficiently large arm size; and oh, how nice it felt!"

Shoulder ribbons always slipped down

"I am very small, and every knit union suit or vest I wore slipped right off my shoulders. I even tried tying the shoulder ribbons together to make them stay up. What a relief and comfort it was to find that the Kayser vest seems to have the shoulders made in such a way that they stay up beautifully."

Ordinary Underwear Faults—

HOW THEY HAVE AT LAST BEEN OVERCOME

WHAT has been your particular underwear complaint? Tight armholes? Shoulder ribbons that slip? A seat that won't stay closed? Whatever it is, you can forget all about it, once you've tried a Kayser Marvelfit suit.

Kayser knew that ordinary knit underwear had been tried and found wanting. They knew that women were dissatisfied with the suits they found in the shops. But just how many things were wrong with the old knit underwear, even Julius Kayser & Co. themselves didn't know until they asked a hundred women to tell what their chief underwear difficulties had always been.

Then they started making cotton and lisle knit underwear for the special purpose of overcoming underwear faults. To satisfy the demands of these hundred women, they fashioned knit suits with the same smart lines, the same careful workmanship and beautiful finish that have made Kayser silk underwear the standard of quality everywhere.

How well they succeeded is shown by letter after letter which they have received from women who have worn Kayser underwear. Four of these letters we have picked out for you to read here.

If you are tall or short, stout or slender, or if you are of "that divine height called medium" and your figure is perfectly rounded, there is a Kayser Marvelfit suit to fit you. You should have no difficulty in getting Kayser's underthings at any store where underwear is sold. Julius Kayser & Co., New York.

Exceptionally hard to fit

"I am size 34 and had never before been able to get a knit undersuit which fitted me even fairly well. If it was long enough, it would be too wide—if narrow enough, it would be too short. How delighted I am to know that now, at last, I can get undersuits cut so that they fit perfectly."

Had never been able to get undersuits to stay closed

"As I am a rather large woman, it seemed nearly impossible to get a knit union suit which would stay closed. The Kayser union suit you sent me is the first one I have ever worn which is made with a seat that stays closed."

You have the prettiest hair of any girl I know

You can try this shampoo at our risk

WE want every reader of The Tribune to know how delightful and refreshing a real shampoo can be.

So we ask you to let us send you this dainty traveler's size bottle of Wildroot Liquid Shampoo entirely at our risk. Enjoy its soft, creamy lather which cleanses so perfectly without removing the essential oils from about the hair roots.

Notice particularly how soft and silky and tractable your hair becomes. If you have had difficulty in the past in getting your hair into shape after washing it, you will be agreeably surprised to find out how easy it is to do your hair up.

You will be delighted to see how a simple treatment will bring out the beauty of your hair.

Under our ironclad guarantee of more than satisfaction you can obtain Wildroot Liquid Shampoo or Wildroot Hair Tonic at any good drug store, barber or hairdressing establishment.

We guarantee this treatment

1. Wring a wash cloth out of hot water and press tightly over scalp for a few minutes—this opens the pores.
2. Wet the scalp with warm water, apply a little Wildroot Liquid Shampoo. Massage the creamy lather well into the pores with a gentle, rotary motion.
3. Rinse with warm water, then with cold. Dry thoroughly.

If you do not say this is the best shampoo you ever used, we will cheerfully refund your money.

Does not dry the hair

The reason is in the mild, pure, vegetable oils which are the chief ingredients of Wildroot Liquid Shampoo. And in the Wildroot process, which compounds and saponifies these oils so skillfully.

Not one trace of alkali is left to dry the hair and roughen the scalp. Beware of soaps which leave your hair harsh and brittle and your scalp stiff and dry.

Send for your bottle today if you value the youth and beauty of your hair.

This is your traveler's size bottle

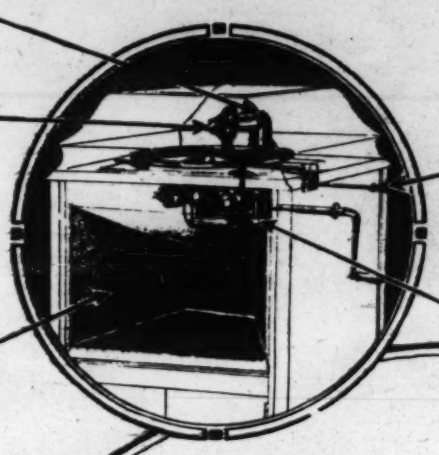
Silvertone
The Better Phonograph For Less Money

Plays All Disc Records
The SILVERTONE convertible tone arm permits the playing of any make of disc record. A universal joint in the tone arm makes it possible to adjust the reproducer at will so that it will play either vertical or lateral cut records. It is almost as easy to adjust the reproducer for different types of records as it is to change needles.

The Reproducer
Tone quality is dependent upon the reproducer, tone arm and amplifying chamber. Each must be designed and harmonized in its relation to the other two in order to produce a sweet, pleasing tone. The SILVERTONE reproducer restores every sound vibration. Designed so that all scratching and mechanical noises are reduced to the minimum.



Tone Control
The tone modulator with which each SILVERTONE is equipped gives complete control over the volume of sound. You may set the modulator at any desired point, thus giving a uniform volume of sound, or the modulator may be manipulated while a selection is being played, thus enabling you to impart your own interpretation to the music.

Amplifying Chamber
The sounds carried from the reproducer through the tone arm are given volume and resonance in a scientifically designed amplifying chamber or horn. This chamber is built of carefully seasoned wood, and like the sounding boards of a fine violin, imparts to the reclaimed sound vibrations sweetness and resonance.

Powerful Silent Motor
Every part of the SILVERTONE motor is made and fitted with care and precision, and gears mesh silently. Powerful springs furnish an abundance of power, and a perfectly designed governor keeps the turntable speed absolutely uniform. The motor is equipped with a silent winding device and cranks with very little effort.

Send No Money

SEVERAL years ago we believed there existed a demand for a good phonograph at a reasonable price and on terms which would bring it within the reach of all. The SILVERTONE was designed and built to meet this demand. By adopting and combining the best features of all the phonographs then on the market, by making such improvements as experience had proved necessary and desirable, and by using only the finest materials in its construction, we succeeded in making the SILVERTONE a phonograph of super-quality.

Quantity production, efficient manufacturing methods and our economical mode of selling enabled us to offer the SILVERTONE at a price far below that of any other phonograph of the same quality, size and musical perfection.

The enthusiastic response of our six million customers when we announced the SILVERTONE proved to us that we had indeed filled a long-felt want. Since then hundreds of thousands of these phonographs have been sold and are giving their owners universal satisfaction and pleasure.

The popularity which the SILVERTONE has enjoyed among our own customers has led us to believe that everybody, everywhere, whether or not they are customers of Sears, Roebuck and Co., will welcome the opportunity to purchase a good phonograph at a reasonable price, and on terms which make it easy for everybody to own one. That is why we are making this liberal offer.

TWO WEEKS' TRIAL

Select any SILVERTONE phonograph shown on this page, fill in the order blank below and mail it to Sears, Roebuck and Co., Chicago, Ill. Send no money with it! We ship SILVERTONE phonographs on two weeks' trial. This trial will not cost you one cent, nor obligate you in any way. All we ask you to do is to give the phonograph a thorough trial. Examine its mechanical features, cabinet work and finish. Try it with any records you desire and note its beauty of tone, how faithfully and accurately it restores every delicate shading of tone quality, every minute variation of volume, every sound vibration. Give it every test necessary to prove the truth of our claims for it. And then compare the price of the SILVERTONE with that of any other phonograph of the same size, quality and musical excellence. If at the end of this two weeks' trial you are not fully satisfied with the phonograph, if you do not believe that mechanically, musically and in workmanship, material and finish it is the equal of any other phonograph on the market selling at from 25 per cent to 50 per cent higher in price, simply notify us and we will take away the phonograph at our own expense, and will return any transportation or cartage charges you have paid.

Small Monthly Payments

If, at the end of two weeks' trial, you are fully satisfied with the SILVERTONE and desire to keep it, send us the price of the phonograph you have selected in equal monthly payments until the total is paid. The amount of the monthly payments is shown under the illustrations of the various models. There is no interest or extras of any kind to pay.

Fill out the order blank today, before this paper gets out of your hands, and let us send you one of these beautiful 1920 SILVERTONE models for two weeks' trial in your home, without having to pay a cent down on the phonograph, and without obligating you in any way. You are to be the sole judge of the quality and value of the SILVERTONE.

THOMAS JEFFERSON

NEXT TUESDAY IS HIS BIRTHDAY—Our third president was born at Shadwell, Va., April 13, 1743 (April 2 according to the old style calendar, which was abandoned when he was 9 years old.) He began his political career in 1769 and was successively a member of the Continental Congress, governor of Virginia, member of congress, minister to France, secretary of state in Washington's cabinet, and vice president before becoming president in 1801. By a strange coincidence he died July 4, 1826, fifty years to a day after the signing of the Declaration of Independence, which he wrote at the age of 33. This portrait is from Dequevauvillier's engraving of the painting by Desnoyers, for which Jefferson sat during his residence in Paris. Jefferson is usually considered the founder and patron saint of the democratic party.

"BE A PACKARD OWNER."

It is human nature to want the best, and when you see a high-class car, your desire to have one is aroused, but you hesitate because you feel the price of a new high-grade car is prohibitive, so you go and buy a new car that is less expensive. But you may pay double the price in maintenance and if a short time your car becomes a burden to your pocketbook. How much better off you would have been if you had purchased a guaranteed renewed high-grade car that looks like new, having been repainted and refinished, equipped with all new cord tires and a completely rebuilt guaranteed chassis.

A renewed Packard Twin Six costs less than some new cars of another make and you will have something really worth while for your money. Besides, you have the satisfaction of driving a nation-wide high grade car.

You can purchase a Packard Twin Six at any price from $1,750 to $6,250, so before you decide to buy any car, we invite you to our salesrooms for an inspection.

We also have a large stock of all kinds of maintenance cars at attractive prices, such as:

Cadillac, Cole, Jordan, Marmon, Paige, Winton, Studebaker, Hudson, Locomobile, etc., in both touring and limousines; also coupe.

CHICAGO ARMY DEPOTS NOW AT TOP OF THE LIST

Permanency Feature of Big Warehouses.

BY AL CHASE.

Ninety per cent of all the food supplied to the Yankee army during the war, both at home and overseas, was shipped from the big government warehouses in Chicago. Fifty-seven per cent of the other army supplies used by the A. E. F. and at army camps came from federal warehouses in Chicago.

And now that the war is over—so far as all but Washington is concerned—Chicago is going to continue to be the food center of the American army. All the meats for the entire army will come from these warehouses.

With the completion of Unit C of the trio of gigantic army supply depots on the south side of Thirty-ninth street, between Ashland avenue and Robey street, Chicago will have 1,890,000 square feet of permanent floor space for storing government supplies. According to Lieut. Col. George Unmacht, this puts Chicago at the top of the list of cities with army supply depots.

Abandoning Temporary Space.

Uncle Sam is slowly getting rid of the millions of square feet of temporary storage space, some covered but more uncovered, which was crowded with war supplies before the armistice. Goods gradually are being moved into the three big permanent warehouses which cost in the neighborhood of $10,000,000.

According to the last figures obtainable, there were still 22,563,000 square feet of uncovered space used for storage. Temporary coverings, of course, are used. The covered space, meaning buildings, totaled 4,536,000 square feet.

St. Louis, which for many years has had what Chicago long had coveted, a big army supply depot, still has 22,416,000 square feet of uncovered storage space and 3,839,000 square feet of covered. According to Col. Unmacht, when the temporary uncovered storage quarters in the two cities are cleared up and temporary building space given up, St. Louis will no longer be able to boast about her big army depots. They'll still be there, but when compared with Chicago will be nothing for the near beer city to brag about, and will be merely warehouses with Chicago the distributing point.

Col. Davis in Charge.

Col. Alex. M. Davis, who was quartermaster of the First army corps, later assistant to chief quartermaster, A. E. F., and still later director of storage, Washington, D. C., was made zone supply officer, Zone 7, Chicago, on Oct. 13, 1919, and still holds it.

When Col. Davis took charge there was $116,000,000 worth of property in the army depot. Work is done by 2,500 persons. There are sixty officers in charge. The entire sixth floor of Unit C is used by the 1,500 stenographers and clerks of the quartermaster corps. In addition to big windows there are ventilated skylights.

Unit C has a frontage on Thirty-ninth street of 277 feet and extends back 325 feet on Wood street and Hermitage avenue. The south end of the basement is connected with the traffic tunnel, through which all warehouses in the district send their less-than-carload shipments to the central freight station, where they are assorted and made up in carload lots.

Worked Hard to Get It.

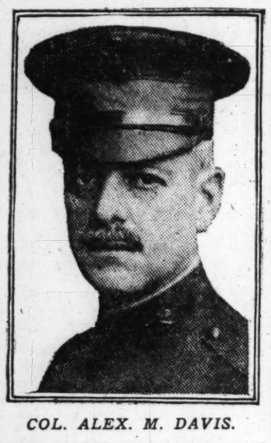
Chicago didn't gain these three great army depots, said to be the largest in the world, without effort. The permanent depot project is said to have grown out of an offhand suggestion of an army officer that there should be such a depot in Chicago. At that time Chicago's army depot was a pitiable affair, with only 30,000 square feet of floor space, employing forty civilians, three officers, and one motor truck.

From that remark a campaign to get a permanent army depot for Chicago was started. The Central Manufacturing district was the main factor in getting it. The trustees not only told the government what they could do, they went ahead and did it. Col. A. D. Kniskern, who wears a Distinguished Service Medal, is also given much credit by business men in helping Chicago get its long coveted permanent army depots. Charles G. Mollan, president of the West Thirty-ninth Street Improvement association, drew up a petition and had it signed by practically every bank and business firm in the city. It was sent to Washington and apparently helped in influencing sentiment toward Chicago.

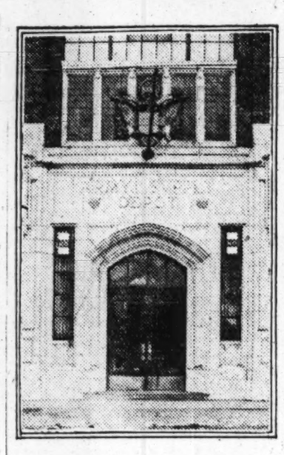
Finished in Six Months.

Work began on Unit A on March 4, 1918. On Sept. 15 the army took possession. The other units followed. Before any of the permanent warehouses were built by the Central Manufacturing district trustees for the government, they erected at record speed several huge temporary warehouses for army use.

Another huge building erected by the district trustees for government use was the cold storage plant in Thirty-ninth street, between Hoyne and Seeley avenues, said to be the largest in the world. Not long ago this was bought back from the government by the district trustees.



COL. ALEX. M. DAVIS.



Above is the first photograph taken of the trio of great army depots, costing approximately $10,000,000, the last unit of which—shown in the foreground—has recently been completed. The view is looking west in Thirty-ninth street from Hermitage avenue. Unit A was started during the war. Chicago is now the nation's greatest army supply station.

Al Tearney Passes Up Paris and Havana for Li'l Old Chi

It was announced some time ago at considerable length that Mr. Albert Tearney, whose best known place of business is at the northeast corner of Thirty-fifth street and Calumet avenue, was through with Chicago. His alleged intentions were to ship his liquid jazz to either Cuba or Paris, whichever had the latest closing hours, and operate a cabaret for thirsty Cuban or Parisian fox trotters similar to Auto Inn in the days before the great drought.

Yesterday Al Tearney blew back into town and promptly signed a fifteen years' renewal of his lease on the ground and buildings at Calumet and Thirty-fifth from Mary Gillam through E. F. Keebler & Co. from May 1 at a rental for the term of $90,000.

Mr. Tearney will spend approximately $50,000 in new buildings and remodeling the present structure. The dancing floor will be made much larger. The cabaret and restaurant will be continued and a soft drink bar operated.

BARTON'S SEDGELEY FARMS TO BE CUT INTO RESIDENCE TRACTS

One of Du Page county's show places, Sedgeley farms, owned by the Enos M. Barton estate, just south of Hinsdale, consisting of 625 acres, is to be subdivided next month into from one to five acre tracts and sold for residence purposes.

Title was transferred by the Barton estate through the Merchants' Loan and Trust company to the associates of Branigar Bros. company, who will at once start work on improving the property.

Mr. Barton, who was president of the Western Electric company and at the time of his death chairman of the board of directors, spent considerable in making his farm an attractive one. At one time it is said he had the largest and finest herd of brown Swiss cattle owned by any individual in this country. Buyers attended his sales from all parts of the United States. The last was sold at public auction on March 18.

Sure, Here's the Regular Weekly Deal in This Block

There seems to be some sort of a deal every week on the west side of State street, between Jackson and Van Buren. This week's contribution to the realty activity is the leasing by Goodman & Feinberg, through E. F. Keebler & Co., from Jones, Linick & Schaefer, of the four story building, 25x100, at 308 South State street, for a term of years from May 1 at an annual rental of $18,000. The lessees will open their third loop men's furnishings shop. The Bedford Shirt company now occupies the store.

Loop at Last Invaded by Piggly-Wiggly Grocery

Into the loop comes the Piggly Wiggly at last. Its thirty-seventh self-serving, cash-and-carry Chicago grocery is to open at 336 South Wabash avenue, near Van Buren, next Saturday. The Piggly Wiggly company has taken a five years' lease at a term rental of $50,000. Its first local store was opened last June. It has groceries in 138 cities. The Wabash avenue store was rented through Howard G. Grey and the Northern Trust company for the estate of William Lobenstine.

Bank Pays $85,025 for Site for New Building

According to the revenue stamps on the deed the South Side State bank has paid $85,025 for the 100x164, vacant, at the northeast corner of Cottage Grove avenue and East Forty-seventh street. Title was taken by W. M. Klein for the bank through Cheshire & Shotwell. The sellers were L. C. Schmidt, Mrs. Grace H. Carter, and John B. Carter Jr. A bank building to cost in the neighborhood of $200,000 is planned.

PEANUT BUTTER MAKERS BUY.

Albert F. Kidd of Kidd & Co., manufacturers of peanut butter, has purchased from Frederick H. Knapp the five story building now used by the Columbia Storage and Van company at 2620 South Park avenue, 50x180, for an indicated $60,000.

NORTH CLARK STREET LEASE.

The Monarch Outfitters have leased from Bernstein Bros. through E. F. Keebler & Co. the store at 14 North Clark street for a term of years from May 1 at an annual rental of $6,000.

Hatter Rents Old Grand Trunk Ticket Offices

When Uncle Sam ordered all the railroad ticket offices over to the Insurance Exchange building he left a lot of vacant shops in the neighborhood of the federal building. Several have never done better than house temporary tenants. One of these, the space at the southeast corner of Clark and Jackson, occupied for fifteen years by the Grand Trunk railway, at last has a permanent successor to the ticket office.

Arthur Feilchenfeld, who operates three other loop hat stores under the name of "Arthur the Hatter," has leased the corner, 1,100 square feet, from Imelda G. Bremner, wife of D. F. Bremner Jr., biscuit manufacturer, through E. F. Keebler & Co., for ten years from May 1 at a term rental of $160,000.

The new lessee will remodel the entire store front, cutting off a shop at the east end, with an entrance on the boulevard, which he will sublet.

Quit Auditorium Tower for New Latin Quarter

Chicago's Latin quarter is to have a new recruit. The Patterson studios, now in the Auditorium tower, have purchased the old-time residence at the southeast corner of Ontario and Cass streets, 140x50, from the trustees of the estate of Elizabeth M. McKay, title being taken by L. R. Patterson. The reported price was $50,000. At the expiration of present leases in April the building will be remodeled. H. W. Croxton and Frederick T. Hoyt were brokers.

Lexington Theater and Office Building Sold

The three story Lexington theater building, containing a 750 seat movie, four stores, eight offices, and six apartments, 125x125, at the northeast corner of South Crawford avenue and Lexington street, has been sold by H. R. Woolf to Alexander Newton, through A. Yuckman, for a reported $96,000, subject to $56,000. Mr. Newton gave in part payment some vacant in Kenilworth.

Theodore Thomas' Widow Sells North Side House

Rose F. Thomas, widow of Theodore Thomas, founder of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, has sold the twelve room residence at 52 Bellevue place, lot 26x129, to Elmer H. Adams, attorney, for an indicated price of $25,000. Mr. Adams will remodel the house.

LESTER ARMOUR BUYS RESIDENCE OF MRS. A. MONTGOMERY WARD

Another addition has been made to the little group of packers who own vacant or improved property in the "hundred million dollar triangle"—that three cornered bit of gold coast bounded by the Lake Shore drive on the east, Sheridan road on the west, and on the south by Diversey parkway. Lester Armour of Armour & Co. and a grandson of the late P. D. Armour, has bought the twenty room, three story fireproof residence of Mrs. A. Montgomery Ward at 325 Wellington avenue for an indicated price of $140,000 through Baird & Warner.

The property fronts seventy-one feet on Wellington and is 140 feet deep. It was built three years ago and is across the street from the vacant owned by J. Ogden Armour and near the Arthur Meeker residence.

Mr. Armour is now moving from 199 Lake Shore drive to his new home. Mrs. Ward is moving to the Parkway hotel for the spring.

$300,000 HOTEL PLANNED AT END OF RAVENSWOOD L

What is claimed to be a record price for the neighborhood has been paid for the 83x125 at the southeast corner of Lawrence and Spaulding avenues—$500 a foot for the Lawrence avenue frontage. A syndicate of business men made up of Henry Kalschheim, Thomas Novak, John Lewis, and Henry Loess bought the property from Morris Hirsch.

A six story fireproof hotel, office, and store building to cover the entire lot is to be erected at once and be ready some time next fall. It will cost in the neighborhood of $300,000. The stores will be occupied by the owners of the building, three of whom now have shops in the vicinity. There will be forty apartments of one, two, and three rooms. White & Co. were the brokers.

SWEETS SHOP TO OUST MAJESTIC PLAYHOUSE BAR

Decorators are working hard to make the Chapin & Gore Majestic theater bar at 22 West Monroe street, acknowledged to be one of the most beautiful wet goods emporiums in the city, into what is claimed will be one of the most attractive candy and luncheon shops in Chicago. It will be opened around May 15 by C. N. Johnson, Inc., who has leased it for twelve years at a reported term rental of $141,354 from Chapin & Gore. It is 20x60.

Mr. Johnson already has three "Tuline" candy and luncheon shops on Madison street and two on Clark street and plans extending his business to include several more loop stores. His sweets are made at 229 North State street.

Mail Order Firm Plans $4,500,000 Parkway Plant

Work on the first $1,500,000 unit of a group of three big twelve story warehouses to cost approximately $4,500,000, probably will be started this spring by Straus & Schram, mail order dealers in household goods. They have purchased a square block of vacant bounded by Western boulevard, West Thirty-sixth street, the Alton, and the Chicago Junction railroads, diagonally across from McKinley park, from the estate of Emil Popper, for an indicated $250,000. It fronts 450 feet on Western and 600 on Thirty-sixth, and contains 250,000 square feet of ground.

Tentative plans have been drawn by S. Scott Joy for a first unit to contain approximately 350,000 square feet of floor space. It has not yet been decided when to start work. Straus & Schram have been in business thirty years, and in the mail order line fifteen years. They now have 250,000 square feet of space at 1105 West Thirty-fifth street and a retail store at 665 West Madison street.

"Little Bohemia" Traded for Apartment Building

Little Bohemia, known to most lovers of Bohemian cookery and to epicures in general as one of Chicago's famous foreign food restaurants, has changed hands. The property, a three story building, 25x125, at 1722 South Loomis street, at the intersection of Blue Island avenue and Eighteenth street, has what is now a soft drink bar on the first floor and a logroom café in the rear. Above are lodge rooms and a hotel on the third floor. This is where visiting Bohemian celebrities usually register.

The owners, Joseph and Jennie Welky, have conveyed it and other property in part payment to Oscar C. Hagen for the eighteen apartment building, lot 150x100, at 2616-22 Lake View avenue, which was sold at a reported $130,000, subject to $65,000. W. C. Regelin of John M. Krause & Sons was broker.

Add Block of Vacant to Healy Industrial District

Three and a half acres of vacant land, the block bounded by Schubert, Keeler, Kildare avenues, and Drummond place, have been added to the Healy industrial district through the purchase of the property from Edward J. Sexauer by John, Howard, and Henry C. Phipps, owners of the district. The reported price was $25,000 cash. The original district contained thirty-three acres. J. J. Van Vlissingen & Co. were the brokers.
